BOY PULLED FROM WELL TO SAFETY

LENORE, W. Va. (AP)—After a 24-hour rescue plight and with hope dimming, a 15-year-old youth was pulled from a caved-in water well Saturday—bruised, scratched and caked with mud.

Leonard Boyce was haggard-looking but smiling weakly when weary rescue workers freed him from the collapsing wall early in the evening. He was placed on a stretcher and sped by ambulance to a hospital in nearby Williamson.

He climbed into the well in this southern West Virginia hamlet near the Kentucky state line at 5:15 p.m. Friday to inspect it before cleaning. But he apparently dislodged a rock and part of the well's wall collapsed. He was buried up to his shoulders about 14 feet below the surface.

RESCUE TEAMS had to be careful because part of the wall of the well gave way each time they tried to reach him. They finally opened his way to freedom by digging a trench to the point where he was trapped.

"I knew I was a goner," the boy said at the hospital where he was treated for frost-bitten feet and was fed intravenously. "Several times I thought I was a goner."

"I asked God for forgiveness for all I've done,"

Kosygin Demand to China

Premier Says Release Vessel or Face Break

MOSCOW (UPI) — Premier Alexei Kosygin demanded in a blunt personal note Saturday that Red China free a Soviet freighter, its jailed captain and crewmembers in the Chinese Yellow Sea port of Dairen.

In a virtual ultimatum sent to Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, the Soviet head of government indicated that if the ship Svirsk was not released the Soviet Union might sever trade relations with Communist China.

Kosygin interrupted his vacation to address one of the strongest messages yet to Chou in the worsening Sino-Soviet controversy.

* * * *

KOSYGIN sent his extraordinary personal demand to Chou after the Peking government ignored a formal Soviet protest note Friday over the arrest of the Russian ship's captain, Victor Korzhov, and assaults on the freighter by mobs of Red Guards in the Manchurian port.

The official Tass News Agency said fresh incidents broke out in Dairen Saturday when Chinese Red Guards swarmed aboard the ship twice, seized a Russian sailor and threatened to "make short shrift of the whole crew."

Kosygin's wire, distributed by Tass, said the Red Guard harassment of the Svirsk "shows that the Chinese side is intentionally bringing matters to a further aggravation of Soviet-Chinese relations and is making doubtful the fulfilment of existing trade agreements between the Soviet Union and the Chinese People's Republic."

Action Line is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write ACTION LINE, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801, or dial 432-3451 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., or 5 p.m. and 9 pm, Monday through Friday

Q. My son, wounded May 20, while serving with the Marines in Vietnam, was recently allowed to come home to attend his father's funeral. Because of his wounds, his father's death, and his sister's critical illness, plus the fact I'm under a doctor's care, we've asked he be reassigned closer to home. However, he received orders to report back to an overseas shipment point. Is there anything I can do to help get this reassignment? Mrs. R. L. L., Garden Grove.

A. Yes. Telegrams to congressman and senator will get the ball rolling. Meanwhile, ACTION LINE contacted Lt. Col. William E. Melby, executive officer at the Marine Barracks, Treasure Island Naval Station, San Francisco, where your son was ordered to report. Your son will remain at the station hospital on a medical hold until Aug. 21, when his case will be taken under evaluation. Examination has disclosed additional shrapnel in your son's shoulder, Col. Melby said, and he's being given a complete medical check to determine if there are other problems from his Vietnam service. Congressional action, plus the supporting statements you've collected could make possible your son's reassignment.

Q. This summer, while visiting a maritime museum in Astoria, Ore., my husband saw an old map showing each location where a ship had sunk or run aground near the mouth of the Columbia River. Any chance you could find out how to get one of these maps? Mrs. J. K., Long Beach

A. Sure, and it sounds like you may be headed back toward Astoria for a bit of treasure hunting. ACTION LINE is sending you a copy of the map which we located through an assist from Rolf Klep, president of the maritime museum. Klep says the maps are available from Utzingers Book Store in Astoria.

Q. Because of the fantastic response from my Action Line request for clothing and food for the Navajo Indians in Monument Valley, my truck has been overloaded. Now, I need a trailer to carry all the things, and because of the trip I can't afford to rent one. Can you lend a hand, again? H. N., Long Beach.

A. You bet we can! With an assist from Larry Lopes, one of the owners of A-Vassar Equipment Rentals, 2800 South St., arrangements have been made for you to use a 4-by-8-foot open trailer to haul the donated clothing and food to the Navajo Indians. The trailer is being loaned to you — cost free — for a period of two weeks.

Q. In March, a girl came to my house selling subscriptions to "Christian Herald," so I gave her $15 and sent the required $7.50 to Empire Circulation Company for a 3-year subscription. LBJ Opens Up New Targets for U.S. Jets North of Hanoi Area

Air Force Admits It Raids Laos

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON—President Johnson gave authorization last Tuesday for American air attacks against a new group of "sensitive and previously restricted targets" in North Vietnam, informed sources disclosed Saturday.

The sources said the President evidently responded to congressional pressure after learning that the Senate preparedness subcommittee planned hearings on bombing restrictions and as Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, the Republican leader in the House, called for lifting these restrictions.

The President was reliably reported to have given approval for the new target list last Tuesday night to Adm. Ulysses S. Sharp, United States commander-in-chief, Pacific, who has over all responsibility for air and sea activity against North Vietnam.

On Wednesday morning, Sharp began his testimony before the committee, several of whose members have demanded a sharp increase in the air war. During his testimony in secret session, Sharp was reported to have disclosed the President's authorization of air strikes against "a package of targets" previously off limits to American attack.

Meanwhile, there were these other developments:

1. The U.S. Air Force for the first time officially confirmed Saturday it has been bombing Communist targets in neutral Laos since May, 1964. A Saigon spokesman said the raids, which run into scores of missions daily, were being conducted at the request of the royal Laotian government.

2. Gen. Harold J. Johnson reported in Washington he had detected significant

Johnson Appeal Plunges

2 National Polls Show Popularity at New Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's popularity with the public has hit new lows in the wake of big-city riots, his call for a surtax and his approval of more troops for Vietnam, two national polls reported Saturday.

Both the Harris and Gallup polls reported that as of early this month only 39 per cent of those questioned approved of the way Johnson is doing his job. Both figures were the lowest ever for the President in the respective polls.

Harris reported a 19-point drop in Johnson's rating from mid-July when, after the Glassboro summit conference, 58 per cent of those interviewed approved of Johnson's performance.

* * * *

GALLUP'S mid-July poll showed 47 per cent approving, 39 per cent disapproving and 14 per cent undecided.

The latest Gallup report was an exact reversal of this with 39 per cent approving, 47 per cent disapproving and 14 per cent undecided. Harris listed no undecided vote.

Harris' figures offered one set of statistics less unfavorable to Johnson. It showed him leading Gov. George Romney of Michigan, 52-48 per cent, and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, 55-45 per cent, in voters' preference for the presidency.

The Kirschkes, Drankhans — Murder in Their Lives

By BILL HAZLETT
(First of a series)

In our modern society, murder is a fairly common occurrence.

A major weakness in the veneer called civilization is that it has a tendency to crack.

When that happens, hatred and violence spill out — the rules are violated — the result is homicide.

Murder can range from the mass slayings of Hitler's hordes to the sorrowful act of a father who softly snuffs out the life of his suffering child when hope no longer remains.

Slayings are committed out of hate, fear, jealousy; for profit, revenge, macabre thrills. Some are meticulously planned, others wanton acts of the instant; many are the outgrowths of long frustrations which in a blinding moment explode into violence.

Murder is a celebrated crime — in plays, songs, books and motion pictures.

Because of the horror — it shocks the mind — lurid details are discussed again and again. All too often, accounts of the crime bypass the people involved — homicide involves people — victims, suspects, families and the community.

SCANT MOMENTS DURING the midnight darkness of last April 8 were shattered by two blasts from a .38 caliber revolver and murder came into the lives of four Long Beach residents — two are dead, two are living.

Dead are:

Mrs. Elaine Terry Kirschke, dark-haired, attractive fashion designer, who at 43 still modeled her own creations. Mother of two, Elaine was described by a friend as, "a real go-getter . . . a gal who worked hard, played hard and got a real kick out of living."

And Orville William Drankhan, 41-year-old electronics technician and co-owner of an aircraft radio firm, known to friends as "Bill." A native of Rochester, N.Y., Bill Drankhan had made his home in Southern California since shortly after his discharge from the Army Air Corps following World War II.

Living are:

Jack Kirschke, handsome, 45-year-old suspended dep-

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Romney Likely GOP Choice in '68-Rocky

Combined News Services

Three key republicans — two governors and an ex-governor — met with Gov. George Romney on the Great Lakes Mackinac Island Saturday and emerged with a strong endorsement of him as their choice for the 1968 GOP presidential nomination.

One — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York — hinted he thought Romney may have the nomination wrapped up.

In a meeting at the Michigan governor's summer home, Rockefeller, Gov. John Chafee of Rhode Island, and former Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton left no doubt they were in the Romney camp.

Speaking for the three eastern Republicans, Rockefeller said Romney has "the imaginative approaches to problems that the nation needs." Rockefeller indicated he believes Romney, although still unannounced as a candidate, will be the GOP nominee. Asked about the party's vice-presidential candidate, Rockefeller replied: "It's got to be George's (choice)."

TREASURE

Florida's Gov. Claude Kirk shed his fashionable pinstripes and donned frogman gear Saturday to poke around a sunken treasure ship.

Kirk, accompanied by his 12-year-old twin sons and professional divers, examined one of the newest finds of a big treasure salvage firm which has dredged some $3 million worth of valuables from the ocean bottom at Sebastian Inlet.

Kirk made several 10-minute dives.

The ship was one of 11 which went down off the Florida coast during a 1715 hurricane. They were bound from Mexico to Spain with a rich cargo of silver and gold.

AFTERMATH

Mrs. Mary Trabulsy and her invalid daughter lost their main source of income when the Detroit riots left her store a smoking shell.

Now the City of Detroit has ordered the gray-haired, 65-year-old widow of a Lebanese immigrant to tear down the building and clean up the remains — at an estimated cost of $1,800.

The city does not care what happens to her or her daughter Jenny, 37, bedridden for the past 21 years with polio, she said.

There was no insurance on the building. It contained a grocery store, a dry cleaning shop and two flats. Mrs. Trabulsy rented all of them, getting $240 per month in rent. With a monthly Social Security check of $95, she said it provided enough income for her and her daughter to live in their west Detroit home.

Mrs. Trabulsy said a wrecking company quoted a price of $1,800 to comply with the city's order.

DESPAIR

Doctors at San Jose Hospital said Edward Sklar, a 23-year-old San Jose State College student, went to the hospital after taking LSD. He made his way to a second-floor window and plunged to a walkway some 30 feet below. He was seriously injured.

FEUD COOLS

President Abdel Rahman Aref of Iraq arrived Saturday for a meeting with King Hussein, whose royal cousin was killed in a bloody Iraqi uprising led by Aref's late brother nine years ago.

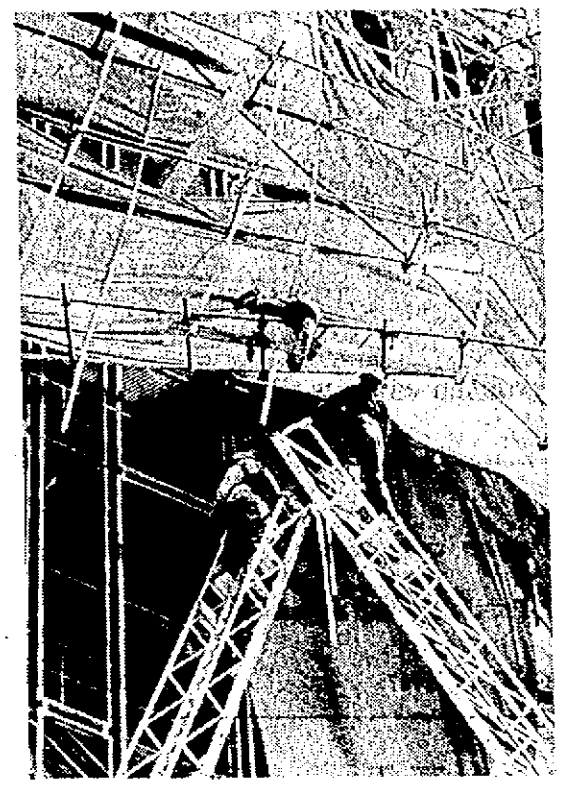

It was the first visit to Jordan by an Iraqi chief of state since that date. But in the disastrous war with Israel, the particularly Arab feud was forgotten.

A Marine career officer from Smithtown, N.Y. went to the altar in a wheelchair in Oakland Saturday and was married to a Sacramento girl.

Capt. Carl A. Rockewell III, gravely wounded in Vietnam more than a year ago, took as his bride Miss Joyce Cornelius, a schoolteacher

After the ceremony in the chapel at Oakland Naval Hospital, where Rockewell has been under treatment 13 months, his bride wheeled him out through the traditional arch of crossed swords.

Rockewell, 32, lost his left leg below the knee and suffered severe fractures of his right leg in a mine explosion.

AT THE LBJS'

The White House is about to lose its star performer — Patrick Lyndon Nugent — who will soon leave one grandfather to visit another.

Lyn's parents, Luci and Pat Nugent, were due home from a vacation in the Bahamas. They will then shift their 7-week old son's residence from President Johnson's official home to that of his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald P. Nugent in Waukegan, Ill.

Lynda Bird Johnson, meanwhile, passed up an opportunity to watch her actor boy friend, George Hamilton, perform in Warren, Ohio.

The President's 23-year-old daughter had been invited to see Hamilton perform in a touring company's version of "The Philadelphia Story," but the White House said "she has decided not to go." No reason was given.

HEADER

It's like father, like son; even in the best of families, including Britain's royal one. Prince Charles, following in his father's footsteps fell head over heels off his polo pony Saturday while practicing with his father's team here. Prince Philip took a tumble while playing only last Sunday.

CAREER ENDS

Esther Forbes, 76, Pulitzer Prize winning author, died Saturday in Worcester, Mass. In private life Esther Hoskins, she won many literary awards including the 1942 Pulitzer Prize for history for "Paul Revere and the World He Lived In." Miss Forbes also received the John Newbery Medal for her novel "Johnny Tremain: A Novel for Young and Old." It was later made into a movie by Walt Disney.

LBJ Vetoes Hike for U.S. Employes Insurance Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson vetoed a bill Saturday that would have provided more life insurance coverage for 2.5 million federal employes.

He also told Congress to hold the line on a bill to raise federal pay and not go beyond his recommendation of a 4.5 per cent increase.

Johnson criticized the insurance bill on grounds it would cost too much when there are more crucial needs requiring federal financial support — help for "children, the poor, the elderly and, most important, American fighting men in Vietnam."

The President had proposed last June a $1.3-million program to provide additional insurance coverage for federal employes and put the system on a sound basis.

But he said Congress proposed to increase this to $61 million in the first year. This would be a federal contribution to the premium costs and would nearly double the $63 million a year the government is chipping in now.

In a message to the clerk of the House, Johnson said, "I am returning this bill because it places too heavy a burden and levies too heavy a charge on the American taxpayer by providing private insurance out of public funds.

"I am returning it because it sets an unwise precedent at a critical time in our history. Today, we dare not divert our resources for unnecessary demands when there are many more crucial needs which urgently require our support."

2 Trucks Crush, Kill Man

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A car was crushed between two truck trailer rigs on the Santa Monica Freeway Saturday and burst into flames, killing its driver who was trapped in the burning vehicle.

The accident was triggered by another car which stalled on the eastbound freeway near La Brea Avenue.

An empty gasoline tanker slowed to avoid hitting the stalled car. The car behind the tanker also slowed and was hit from the rear by the second truck-trailer.

Witnesses said the car was crushed like an accordion between the two truck rigs and its gas tank exploded.

Police said the driver of the stalled car got it started again and drove off.

The dead driver, who was alone in his car, was burned beyond recognition and authorities were unable to identify him immediately.

The truck drivers escaped injury.

Man Held After Crash Kills Woman

SAN BERNARDINO (AP)

A 29-year-old Redlands motorist has been booked on suspicion of felony drunken driving after a head-on collision on the San Bernardino Freeway claimed the life of a woman early Saturday.

Mrs. Virginia Wright, 50, of Apple Valley, was killed. Five members of her family were seriously injured in the crash.

The Highway Patrol said Joseph Launsberrry Bradley Jr. of Redlands was held on drunken driving charges.

Boy Pulled Safely from Well

he said before he was bathed and placed in bed. When asked what he sought forgiveness for, he told an Associated Press newsman:

"I cussed once in a while, never smoked or chewed."

Less than two hours before workers reached him, Capt. Curt Phillips of the Williamson Rescue Squad said that prospects of rescuing the boy were "getting slimmer all the time."

"Half the well has caved in on him and we've still got half to go," Phillips said. He explained that rescue operations were difficult because it was impossible to get beneath the boy to raise him.

* * * *

A CROWD of about 200 persons watched silently as rescue operations continued all through the day. They cheered and applauded when the youth's mud-caked body was raised from the well.

Tom Farley of nearby Delbarton was the man who pulled young Boyce, who has 10 sisters and brothers, through the 30-inch opening in the side of the well.

The boy's pleadings through the chilly Friday night caused rescuers to intensify their efforts.

"Tell them to please get me out," he begged. "I can't stand much more pain."

He was given water and hot chocolate through a rubber tube during the night and again Saturday morning, and was administered sedatives and pain-killers. Jimmy Wolford, news director at station WBTH in Williamson and a former Navy corpsman, crawled down the trench, poked his arm through an opening near the boy and administered the pain-killing hypodermic.

"Not many men could have stood up to this ordeal like he has," said Willard Howell during the Saturday afternoon operations. Howell was going to climb down the well himself Friday night, but the boy leaped ahead of him.

"If he hadn't dived in there, it would have been me instead of him," Howell added.

* * * *

THE BOY'S mother, Mrs. Ben Boyce, and two of his sisters kept vigil during the night and all through Saturday as teams worked feverishly to reach the teen-ager.

A nurse at the hospital said the boy's "blood pressure and vitals are all right." He was fed intravenously because he had vomited and couldn't take solid food.

Calls had poured in from across the nation suggesting methods of freeing Boyce, But most were impractical.

He said he paid little heed to the national attention focused on him.

"It ain't worth it," he said before hospital authorities barred all but the close family from seeing him. "I'd rather be playing baseball or riding a bicycle."

He was pretty definite when asked if he would be going down a well again. He only replied:

"Lord, no!"

Belgians Fight Oil as Barge Explodes

BRUSSELS (AP) — Two Belgian minesweepers were dispatched Saturday with a cargo of detergents in an effort to stave off the danger to Belgian beaches of a huge oil slick from a Belgian barge.

The Belgian barge Odilia, pumping oil from the stranded 23,015-ton British tanker British Landern in the Scheldt Estuary, exploded.

'It Was Just a Good Old Iowa Picnic'

Bob Condon from Pasadena sang and the speeches were kept short because of the heat Saturday at Long Beach's 62nd Annual Iowa Summer Picnic.

"There wasn't a thing out of the ordinary," said jubilant Paul W. Diefenbach, president of the Iowa Society of Long Beach, "it was just a good old Iowa picnic."

An estimated 6,000 former Iowa residents from throughout Southern California flocked to Recreation Park, bringing picnic lunches and ears eager for an Iowa program.

"Mayor Wade couldn't make it, but Assemblyman James A. Hayes brought greetings from Gov. Reagan and the band played very well," said Diefenbach.

Long Beach Municipal bandsmen played numbers by Iowa composers, providing a background for singers Linda Sue Marks and Bob Condon.

"Some said it was even bigger than our picnic in March," Diefenbach said.

NOT SO LUCKY LICENSE

Klunker Makes Good—Too Late

By VINT MADER

If you've ever had money slip through your fingers, consider what happened to Al and Virginia Hanson of 5411 Wardlow Road, Saturday.

Early in the morning Al answered the phone, whereupon a lady from a marketing agency informed him he was the Long Beach area winner of $2,500 in oil company's lucky license plate contest.

(Lucky license plate in a pig's eye!)

Wary of a practical joke from the start, Al was further disbelieving when told his lucky number was QGL-935—because that isn't his car's plate number, although something sounded familiar about it.

However, the caller assured him the win was valid and all he had to do was drive the vehicle to an appropriate local gas station and prove his ownership to collect the handsome sum.

AL HANSON
HE'S LUCKY?

Talking over this oddity after he hung up, Al and Virginia finally realized QGL935 was the latest plate on an old boiler that served them well for many years.

"I finally got a wrecker to buy it for junk and tow it away because it wasn't worth the cost of licensing it again for this year," said Mrs. Hanson in a mood of indignation mixed with nostalgia.

"It was so far gone, I let it go for $15 just before the new license had to be paid," said the sprightly grandmother, observing that a member of the League of Women Voters she realized they would have had to push the old klunker into their yard to avoid infraction of the law against having an unlicensed vehicle on the street.

She recalled that the 13-year-old model was taken for wrecking by Los Alamitos Salvage, 3390 E. Cerritos Ave., Los Alamitos.

When the couple was interviewed Saturday afternoon at Long Beach Airport as fliers prepared to take off for a shorefront aerial spectacle, Mrs. Hanson vented housewifely on the disruption the unforeseen excitement brought to an already-exciting day the family had planned.

Until the old car was abruptly tossed back into family life, the day's big event was to be the flight of the Hanson's son-in-law Ray Post, a Garden Grove construction firm owner, in a flying demonstration of antique planes, with Al Hanson riding passenger in the second cockpit of the rebuilt Stearman trainer.

The flight went as planned in Ray's prized biplane and Virginia visited with daughter Sharon and grandchildren, Diane, 12; Stephanie, 5, and Chris, 2½.

However, to Mrs Hanson, afire in the best tradition of an active LWV worker and member of the Federation of Republican Women and suburban GOP club, the contest contretemps was still an unsought intruder in the schedule of their family day.

DOWNTOWN DECLINE

Central Long Beach Program Proposed

By DON BRACKENBURY

Central Long Beach is not keeping pace with the "dynamic changes" taking place around it. For some years, it has been suffering " decline in its economic vigor and a rise in physical obsolesence."

These "dynamic changes," however, particularly the shoreline development and other major public works, make 1967-68 the appropriate time to launch a revitalization program for downtown Long Beach.

These are the conclusions of a "Reconnaissance and Programming Study of Central Long Beach," prepared by Victor Gruen Associates, an architectural-planning-engineering firm, for Downtown Long Beach Associates.

The Gruen firm proposes that a "detailed work program" be instituted, to extend over a 20-month period, in order to draft plans for development of the Central Area.

Financing could best come from a joint city-private enterprise participation, the survey said.

Gruen proposed seven goals as a "nucleus" for the Central Area development program:

1. Strengthen and exploit the full potential of Central City as an important office center for financial, administrative business and governmental activities.

2. Strengthen Long Beach's position as a tourist center by creating a central unit combining its "excellent cultural, recreational facilities, the expanding convention activities, and the necessary supporting commercial uses into one plan."

3. Create a strong image of Central City through establishment of a definite sense of identity by developing clear physical boundaries, gateways and emphatic focal points.

4. The creation of a "compact, intense and recognizable" commercial retail core.

5. Improve the living environment in the Central Area with special attention to a variety of dwelling types, vehicular and pedestrian separation, open space, landscaping, recreation and educational opportunities.

6. Establish strong vehicular and pedestrian ties between the outlying parts of the city, airport and peripheral areas of the Central City.

7. Make the private investment sector aware of its vital role as the primary moving force behind the implementation of a plan, and impress upon it the necessity for remaining as the catalyst in the revitalization of Central City.

The report emphasized in several places that Central City is "so indefinable that the visitor — be he employe, shopper, conventioneer or tourist—cannot clearly perceive entering or leaving Central City."

It called this a "very significant problem," but said some correction already is being effected through the widening and landscaping proposed for Ocean Boulevard between Alamitos and Golden avenues and of Long Beach Boulevard from Ocean Boulevard north.

Obsolescense is "prevalent" among many commercial structures in the downtown area, but said "aggressive renovation" would "soon provide new jobs and recapture vital tax monies now leaving the city or bordering outlying areas within the city."

PUBLIC transportation is now meeting the needs of the average individual, the survey said, but the growth of Central City may hinge upon other types of transportation, and all forms of mechanized transportation — especially systems in the development stage — should be investigated.

A major problem, the report said, is that many lots in the Central Area are relatively narrow, reflecting needs of the 1900-20 development.

To be truly effective, the development must seek "a feasible method of assembling small lots into large parcels."

The report cited the $80 to $100-million shoreline development, particularly pointing to the proposed Magnolia Bridge, Pacific Terrace around the expanded Auditorium-Arena complex, the proposed Pier J marina, Belmont Plaza Recreation Center and Belmont Pier, and Long Beach Marina and Marine Stadium.

There is a "definite need" for new hotel and motel units to accommodate the tourist trade, which has "increased substantially," the report said.

IT NOTED that new restaurants have been built in the city, but primarily in East Long Beach and Belmont Shore, and said such facilities must be built in the Central Area to supply tourist and convention demands.

The survey expressed the Gruen firm's confidence that the Central Area can be revitalized as "a highly successful business district, an outstanding cultural center, and a vital catalyst for the surrounding region."

"The Central City is the necessary missing link in the overall chain of developments, and a successful program will not only complement improvements already accomplished, but will recognize and provide for improvements presently being considered in the planning process," the report concluded.

Continue Probe in Shooting

Investigators Saturday said they interviewed more than 100 acquaintances of two men wanted for questioning in the Thursday slaying of a young Torrance policeman, but found no trace of the pair.

"We do believe they still are in the area," Torrance Det. Robert Wright said.

The suspects, Jerry L. O'Brien, 34, an escapee from a Northern California conservation camp, and B. J. Blackburn, 35, shared a Torrance motel room before the killing.

O'Brien is accused of gunning down Officer David Seibert outside a Torrance market during a $15,000 robbery.

Torrance police later arrested O'Brien's mother, Mrs. Bettye Lee O'Brien, 68, of North Hollywood, on suspicion of receiving stolen goods and aiding an escapee.

Among leads checked by Torrance detectives was the apartment of a Long Beach couple who police say knew O'Brien. Long Beach police late Friday cordoned off the West Williams Street building while detectives searched it, but found nothing, officers said.

1,200 Acres Aflame in Gabilan Mountains

HOLLISTER (UPI) — Nearly 1,200 acres of brush and grassland were charred Saturday by a stubborn fire in the Gabilan Mountains about 36 miles southeast of here.

The Division of Forestry said 300 men and seven air tankers were thrown into the battle against the flames, but by late evening, it was only about 50 per cent controlled. Three men were injured and required hospitilization from Smoke inhalation.

False Tips Becloud Hunt for Girls' Killer

An Altadena mother will don a black veil for a rosary service today, as detectives seek to link a pair of bright scarves to the strangler-rapist who abducted her two little girls last Wednesday.

Sheriff's homicide investigators continue to question residents of the area around the Richard Barili home in a so-far futile effort to turn up leads on a wandering stranger or unfamiliar car.

* * * *

FLOODS of tips have been given regarding the scarves and the brutal murders of Robin Barili, 6, and Cecilia Barili, 7, but none has produced workable leads.

The youngsters went out to play and never came home for dinner, so a search was launched late Wednesday night and the pitiful end of the hunt came Thursday morning.

Both were found with the scarves knotted around their necks, in a weedy, vacant lot beside Santa Ana Boulevard in the Watts area of Los Angeles.

They had been raped and the abductor — who investigators believe may have first taken them to a house in Altadena — apparently kept their capri pants and underwear.

* * * *

ROSARY will be recited tonight in St. Elizabeth Church, Altadena, with Requiem Mass to follow at the same church on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, detectives under direction of sheriff's Lt. Norman Hamilton are conducting their house-to-house canvass from a command post at Mountain View Cemetery.

Car Kills Infant Woman on Lawn

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 6-month-old infant and a woman, sitting on the lawn of a home, were killed instantly when a car went out of control and plowed over the grass and into the house Friday night.

Police identified the victims as the baby, Ramon Iwamatsu and Mrs. Shizuko Maeda, 53, both of Los Angeles. Mrs. Reiko King, 34, was critically injured when she was pinned beneath the car.

Officers booked the driver, Ben Rutberg, 57, of Los Angeles, on manslaughter charges.

WRECK THAT KILLED TWO

2 Killed, 12 Injured in N.Y. Train Crash

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (UPI) — The Montreal limited carrying many tourists for a weekend at Expo '67 slammed against a freight train at a siding before dawn Saturday, killing two of its more than 300 sleeping passengers and injuring at least a dozen.

Three passenger and 14 freight cars were derailed, and more than 400 feet of track was ripped up in the accident on the Delaware and Hudson Railroad line near here.

One passenger car overturned and several freight cars piled on top of it and the two others knocked off the tracks. Rescue crews worked with acetylene torches to rescue seven passengers trapped for a time inside.

State police said one of the dead was Kristian S. Ebsen of Bergen, Norway. The second victim was not immediately identified.

More than a dozen persons, including a nun, were treated for injuries suffered in the accident. Six of them were admitted to hospitals, two for emergency surgery.

The railroad said 76 persons were riding in sleeping cars and 250 more in coaches. The train left Grand Central Station in New York at 11 p.m. Friday and was scheduled to arrive in Montreal at 8:30 a.m. Saturday. It stopped in Albany shortly before the accident at about 4:30 a.m.

SHERIFF WOUNDED

Wife of Lawman Slain in Ambush

SELMER, Tenn. (UPI) — The attractive blonde wife of a crime-busting sheriff was killed by a shotgun blast and the sheriff was wounded Saturday when they apparently drove into a trap and were ambushed.

Pauline Pusser died from a blast that hit the side of her head. Her husband, Buford, suffered a chin wound.

Pusser is sheriff of McNairy County, reputedly one of the largest moonshining counties in the rolling hills of West Tennessee.

The slaying of Mrs. Pusser marked the second time in less than a week that the underworld has snuffed out a life in the South to retaliate for strict law enforcement. In Jefferson, Ga., last Monday, Piedmont Circuit Prosecutor Floyd Hoard was killed by a dynamite blast when he turned the ignition key on his booby-trapped car. He had been waging a war on car thieves and bootleggers.

Pusser reportedly has been relentless in efforts to rid McNairy of gambling and moonshiners, and many threats have been made on his life.

Police said Mrs. Pusser's fear for her husband's safety apparently was the reason she went along when Pusser got a call about 6 a.m. to quell a "disturbance" on New Hope Road, near the Tennessee-Mississippi state line.

T. W. Burks, McNairy County Constable, said authorities had been unable to learn any other details of the disturbance call.

Although wounded, Burks said, Pusser managed to stay at the wheel of his car and radio for help.

Impaled, He Flags Down Passing Car

ROGERSON, Idaho (AP) — A Nevada man was thrown from an auto and impaled on a five-foot section of wooden highway railing Saturday. He flagged a passing motorist, however, and was in fair condition after having the three-inch thick spear removed in a Twin Falls Hospital.

Idaho State Police said Troy W. Spencer, 31, Las Vegas, was thrown from a car driven by Warren L. Smith, 46, Bishop, Calif., when it rolled over on U.S. Highway 93.

Smith suffered a broken neck and was taken to a Boise hospital for treatment.

ABA Proposes Free Counsel

HONOLULU (AP) — An American Bar Association study group recommended Saturday that lawyers be provided for all needy criminal defendants whenever a jail term is a "practical possibility."

"Counsel should be provided to any person who is financially unable to obtain adequate representation without substantial hardship to himself or his family," the ABA advisory committee said.

It added: "Counsel should not be denied to any person merely because his friends or relatives have resources adequate to retain counsel or because he has posted or is capable of posting bond."

The committee's recommendations were made public following the ABA's 90th annual meeting here. They are tentative in form and subject to revision by other ABA groups.

* * * *

THE SUPREME COURT has ruled counsel must be provided for the trial of needy defendants charged with serious crimes. But it has yet to say whether the constitutional right to counsel applies in misdemeanor cases. Lower courts are divided.

In this sense, the ABA study committee, headed by Judge Warren E. Burger of the U.S. Circuit Court of the District of Columbia, took an advanced view of the constitutional guarantee.

"As a matter of sound judicial administration," the report said, "it is preferable to disregard the characterization of the offense as felony, misdemeanor or traffic offense."

The committee also recommended provision of counsel in extradition, mental competency, post-conviction and other adversary proceedings which arise from the initiation of a criminal action.

The report proposed partial payment of defense costs by those who can afford it, emphasized that defense lawyers should be supported with investigators and experts available to wealthy defendants, and said defender systems should be designed as a career service. Salaries should be set at a level that will attract and retain skilled and experienced lawyers, the commitee said.

Diaz to Visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House announced Saturday that President Gustavo Diaz Ordaz of Mexico had accepted President Johnson's invitation for a state visit in Washington Oct. 26-27.

Senate Battle in S.F. Puts Reagan Strength to a Test

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan puts his power and popularity to an important test Tuesday in a special election which could give Republicans control of the California State Senate.

The San Francisco election, which pits a young, liberal Reagan critic against a mainline Republican moderate, could have significant effect on the outcome of the GOP presidential race in 1968.

The battle is for the vital swing vote in California's upper house, now controlled by Democrats by a 20-19 edge. A Republican victory would throw the Senate into a 20-20 deadlock, giving the tie-breaking vote to Republican Lt. Gov. Robert H. Finch.

The candidates are Municipal Court Judge Milton Marks, a former Republican assemblyman who has Reagans full support, and two-term Democratic Assemblyman John L. Burton, the Democratic hope to stem the rising tide of Republican power in Sacramento.

* * * *

A MARKS' victory would give Reagan an important boost in his efforts to push his "Creative Society' programs through the legislature next year — a point which apparently has not been missed by the Johnson administration.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, in a telegram to Burton expressed a "confident prediction that thoughtful San Francisco voters — Democrats and Republicans alike — will assure your election to the California Senate . . ."

What Humphrey didn't mention was that Burton and his older brother, Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., are Vietnam war "doves" and strident critics of President Johnson's handling of the conflict.

Marks, a supporter of the war, has nurtured the division in his campaign and denounced the younger Burton's antiwar views.

Burton attacks Reagan's "Creative Society" policies and cutbacks in state spending, declaring: "Whether there will be a Republican governor in control of the Senate, this is what is at stake."

Burton's campaign has been given a helping hand by U.S. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., and powerful Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh.

Marks' bid has strong backing of Reagan and Finch.

Voter registration in San Francisco give Burton a seemingly huge advantage. Registered Democrats outnumber Republicans 189,980 to 100,756.

* * * *

SAN FRANCISCO was the only metropolitan county in California to vote heavily against Reagan for governor last Nov. 8.

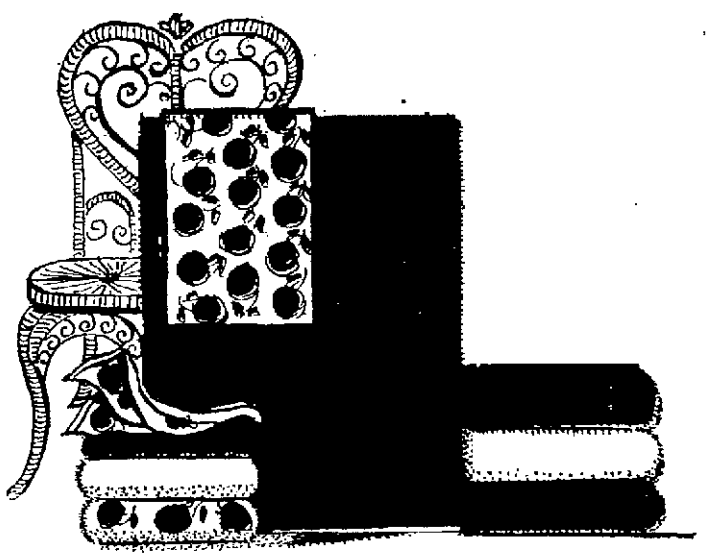

But Reagan's statewide million-vote triumph over Edmund G. Brown left the state's Democratic Party structure a shambles.

Murder Enters the Kirschke Family

uty district attorney, indicted by the Los Angeles County grand jury, accused of the slaying of his wife and Drankhan. Kirschke, a native of Oklahoma, attended Long Beach schools, saw Coast Guard service during World War II, returned to Long Beach, where he carried mail and studied law. A yatching enthusiast and partygoer, Kirschke was on the way up. He likes the "good" life, and he lived it. Tuesday, he goes on trial for his life in Los Angeles.

And LaVona Charlote Drankhan, tall, striking and reserved wife of Bill Drankhan, who friends describe as, "protective, and maybe a bit stern in her relationship with her husband." Known to close friends as "Jo" — she and Bill were often called "Willie and Jo" — La Vona Drankhan, at 48, has spent much of her life in Long Beach, the last 12 as Bill's wife.

JACK KIRSCHKE WAS a 19-year-old freshman at Long Beach Junior College in 1940, when he met pert Elaine Terry, 17-year-old advertising manager for the Poly High School High Life. They met on a blind date for a "backward" dance — girl invites boy — and began seeing each other often during the next couple of years.

"Even in high school she had a good head for business," Kirschke commented, recalling his wife's later success in the rough-and-tumble garment industry.

Kirschke was born Sept. 16, 1921, in tiny Seiling, Okla.

"My earliest and only memory of my father is seeing him stomped to death by a team of horses on our farm in Oklahoma," Kirschke said.

Before his mother brought Jack, his two sisters and brother, to Long Beach in 1936, the family lived several years in Denver, and later in Seattle, where young Kirschke carried a paper route.

"I graduated from Poly in 1939, and started to Long Beach JC. That's where I met Elaine."

Jack and Elaine made a handsome couple as they attended football games, went to dances, dated for school activities, and even made a trip together to San Francisco, "chaperoned by my two sisters," Kirschke said.

ELAINE TERRY CAME to Long Beach almost 10 years before Jack arrived. Born Jan. 11, 1924, in Genoa, a small hamlet in east central Nebraska, Elaine's family moved to Long Beach when she was 2.

Kirschke's family also originated in Nebraska.

"I was working as a temporary substitute mail carrier out of the Long Beach Post Office in 1942, when Elaine and I were engaged that June.

"One of the guys carrying mail with me was Max Rothberg. He was carrying mail to may apartment in Long Beach when Elaine was killed — 25 years later."

World War II was raging, and many of Jack's friends were already in military service. A color vision problem delayed Kirschke's entry into the Coast Guard, and meanwhile, Nov. 1, 1942, the couple was married in nearby Lynwood, where Elaine's parents lived.

"I was called to active duty about two weeks later," Kirschke said.

During the three years which followed, while Kirschke served as a flight engineer on a PBY assigned to an air-sea rescue unit, their two children, Doug, now 24, and Mrs. Terryl Stacy, now 22, of Bainbridge, Md., were born.

The war's end took the Kirschke family to a tract house in San Pedro, and sent Jack back to his job with the post office, where things rocked along for the next couple of years.

"But, Elaine was the burr under my saddle. She wanted better things for me, and her, and especially the kids. She encouraged me to become a lawyer, so we sold our house and I began attending night classes.

"A year later, in 1948, I resigned from the post office and started to school full-time on the GI Bill," Kirschke said, shifting uncomfortably on the hardwood seat in the JACK KIRSCHKE pins bars on uniform of his son Douglas, 23, during ceremony last June when the younger Kirschke was commissioned a Marine Corps second lieutenant.

MRS ELAINE KIRSCHKE
"A real go-getter . . ."

ORVILLE W. DRANKHAN
One of two killed April 8

ELAINE, MEANWHILE, left her youngsters with her mother, and began a career of her own. After a five-month course in pattern making and design at atrade school, she borrowed $500 from her father and went into the dress business.

Working with one sewing machine, her patterns strewn on an old pingpong table in her uncle's dress shop, she began scratching for orders. Her success was immediate. As Elaine Terry of California she soon became nationally known for her dress designs, and withing a few years her business was grossing $1.5 million yearly.

Things became easier, Kirschke graduated from UCLA with his bachelor's degree and was accepted at Stanford Law School.

He was only slightly slowed by appearance of a benign growth in the parotid gland under his left ear. The growth was removed in 1952, but it was to recur in 1956 and again in 1958, and leave Kirschke with a slight nerve paralysis in the left side of his face.

Law school was a grind for Kirschke. "I didn't exactly set the world on fire as a law student," he said.

He quit Stanford after two years, returned to work in Los Angeles, and finished his studies at Southwestern Law School. After his admission to the bar Kirschke went to work for the district attorney's office.

"I went to the Long Beach office in 1956 on a temporary assignment, and it lasted seven years," Kirschke said.

"I had just moved to Long Beach after selling our home in Norwalk, when I was reassigned to the Downey office."

THE YEAR TH EKIRSCHKES moved to Long Beach — 1963 — when Jack was reassigned to Downey, was also the year Elaine's business ran into trouble.

"Her firm went into a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, and the assets were used to pay off debts," Kirschke explained. Almost immediately Elaine went to work as designer for a Los Angeles fashion house at a salary of $250 a week, Kirschke said.

The business trouble left the Kirschkes with a tax problem, and he was forced to borrow $5,000. "We were perpetually in debt, and that loan in additionn to withholding taxes seemed like a millstone around my neck," he said.

"There've been reports we made $40,000 a year, but that isn't true. Our gross income was a lot closer to $30,000.

"I made $1,500 a month, and Elaine made $250 a week. Figure it out. My take-home pay was, about $407 every two weeks, and hers was $196 a week," Kirschke said.

And living at 185 Rivo Alto Canal, in the Naples area of Long Beach is expensive.

Although their modest duplex apartment rented for only $175 a month, there was the addtional cost of a slip for the 33-foot sloop Kirschke enjoyed sailing, there were parties, trips, college expenses for Doug, and the Long Beach Yatch Club, where Jack is secretary and a life member.

"Everyone sort of got swept up in things here, and something was always happening.

"I guess it probably costs a couple $250 a month for the Yatch Club . . . at least it did us," said Mrs. Patricia Katz, 171 Rivo Alto Canal, neighbor and close friend of the Kirschkes.

"People would sometimes just go from party to party on the weekend, and the conversations would carry from one place to the other.

"Then, there were the monthly club activities, and the trips . . . we went to Hawaii a couple of times, and down to Baja. We were a friendly group," she added.

JACK AND ELAINE were accepted as part of a group that was "almost inseparable for at least three years."

Friends say they were a sophisticated couple with a "relaxed" relationship toward each other. Jack knew Elaine was dating another man, and according to testimony before the grand jury, once remarked, when asked how he felt about it, "She's worked hard all her life, and she's over 40, so she might as well enjoy herself."

But everything wasn't idyllic in the relaxed relationship. Testimony before the grand jury relates to battles between Jack and Elaine, and friends say Kirschke was often "moody . . . sometimes depressed, other times jovial."

"He enjoyed parties, and he liked to talk about his work," Mrs. Katz said of Kirschke. "He was a stickler for precise language, and had great powers of concentration. Sometimes at a party we'd find him alone in a corner, just reading or thinking."

Elaine, Mrs. Katz said, had often talked of a divorce. "Just last Christmas, she called me down to her apartment and we talked about it. She said she wanted to wait until Doug finished school."

Investigators, examining the apartment where Mrs. Krischke and Drankhan met death, found a note written, according to testimony, by Elaine. It said the couple would live in separate bedrooms "without sexual provocation or invitation" until May 1, 1967. Then, the note added, "for a one-year period we will cohabitate with the understanding that neither one will seek out the companionship of the opposite sex in any manner."

"There was something else Elaine told me," Mrs. Katz said. "She told me she's had a premonition that something was going to happen to her while she lived in that house.

"She said it was an eerie feeling, but she didn't say what."

Sex Orgies Bared in Westminster

By BOB GEIVET

A lurid tale of sex orgies involving a Westminster couple, their two sons and at least seven teen-age high school boys and girls was unfolded Saturday to Westminster police.

They arrested William Mettler, 32, a car salesman in Paramount, his wife Eleanor, 34, and her 16-year old son on rape charges, stemming from the bacchanallan revels at the Mettler home at 9461 Jennrich St., on Westminster's east side.

* * * *

A WARRANT was issued for Mrs. Mettler's 19-year-old son, also wanted for rape.

Bail of $5,500 each was demanded of the Mettlers. It had not been posted late Saturday. The teen-age boy was in custody in Orange County Juvenile Home.

A 17-year-old high school boy who now lives in Riverside, a 15-year-old Long Beach girl and a 15-year-old girl who now lives in Garden Grove were credited with tipping the police.

They told officers they were "trapped" into the abuses after they were given liquor and otherwise "conditioned" to the lurid parties.

But they said they refused to return to the place.

* * * *

ALL OF THEM said that they believed pep pills and marijuana, were being used.

Capt. Walter Scott of Westminster police, who is heading the investigation into the ring, said the tip which triggered the probe was offered voluntarily by the youngsters.

Their sordid stories to Capt. Scott and Juvenile Officer Richard Grote detailed lurid sessions of sex play dating back to last May.

* * * *

THE OFFICERS learned that some free-love parties were during afternoons after school was out, and presumably sometimes when the Mettlers were away. They said they learned that other parties were in the evening hours, but mostly ranged through weekends when the teen-agers "could stay out later."

Police are seeking to question at least a dozen more young people who might have some knowledge of the sessions.

The Great Pension Mirage

MILLIONS OF AMERICANS WON'T GET A CENT

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of six articles by Mario E. Impellizeri, a leading authority on pension and welfare funds in the United States, revealing that most workers who think they are covered by private pension plans will never get anything at any age.

By MARIO IMPELLIZERI

Millions of Americans who think they are covered by pension plans won't get a cent.

In fact, 54 per cent of the men who think they will get private pensions will never see a pension check.

Worse, 70 per cent of the women depending on private pension plans for their retirement will get nothing except meager Social Security payments.

Involved, complicated rules deny benefits to many who have worked under pension plans for years.

Most pension plans are set up so that the trustees can do what they want with the funds.

This is true whether the trustees are named by management or by unions. Management trustees can use funds to take over other companies, and in turn use the pension funds of taken-over companies to buy still others), or use pension funds to unload their own stock, or for any other investment purposes they want.

Or they can call the whole thing off.

* * * *

LABOR TRUSTEES can — and have — shipped funds out of the country where no one can reach them except themselves. They can use funds to pay themselves fat fees and even fatter pensions. Wouldn't you like a $1,000 a week pension? One union official manages it. And trustees can use pension moneys for the wildest sort of investments.

Or they can call the whole thing off.

In fact, 7,000 pension funds blew up, collapsed or just faded away in the last 12 years.

Some pension funds are excellent. They are administered by dedicated, conscientious men, from both labor and management. Others are conserved because they are managed, for fees, by banks and insurance companies. But even these are subject to rules that can deny a pension to a woman who has worked in a garment factory eight hours a day for 29 years, or a man who built autos for 43 years.

These are real cases:

Mrs. X worked for a dress manufacturer covered by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union pension plan from January, 1931, to January, 1944. Then she stayed home for six years, giving birth to a daughter and rearing her to school age. Then, in January, 1950, she went back to work in the same industry under the same penion plan until January, 1966. She had worked 29 years under the pension plan.

At 62 Mrs. X, then a grandmother, was eligible for Social Security. She decided to retire. When she appllied for her ILGWU pension she found that she was not eligible for it, because the pension plan provides that women of 62 and men of 65 with 20 years "of attachment to the industry in the last 25 years immediately preceding retirement" are eligible for pension benefits. With 29 years of service, Mrs. X did not meet the specific "20 years in the last 25 years" requirement. She would have had to come back one year sooner after her break in service in order to be eligible at this time for a pension.

So she, and thousands of others who have left their jobs for varying periods, are entitled to no pensions.

Another typical case:

* * * *

WILLIAM KELLY was the chief mechanic in a biscuit manufacturing company in New Orleans. This small company had an employer-administered pension plan. "When I reached age 65," Kelly said, "I applied for my pension, but I could not get one. The bosses in the company replaced the cash in the pension fund with IOU's. Now those IOU's are worthless."

And still another:

Paul Mendez worked in the quality control division of a winery in California. One year before he was to retire, the winery was bought out by a competitor. When Mendez applied for his pension, he discovered that the new company had cut his pension in half.

These plans and thousands like them had promised the worker that when he retired not only would he find a Social Security check in his mailbox each month, but he would also find a check from his pension fund. These checks would have allowed him to live comfortable, even if modestly, for all his years of retirement.

The facts belie the promises. Of the millions of workers covered by private pension plans, only 4 out of every 10 will ever collect a cent. The other 6, some of whom may have participated in pension plans all their working years, will get absolutely nothing. They will have to struggle along on inadequate Social Security checks, gifts from their children or public welfare.

This sounds absurd. After all, there are 36,000 pension plans, covering 26 million workings in the U.S. These plans have combined estimated assests of over $100 billion and are growing at the rate of $7.5 billion a year.

These figures are staggering. But consider this: The U.S. Department of Labor predicts that by 1980 these plans will cover 42 million Americans and have assets of more than $225 billion. This will be an amount greater than the assets of all the life insurance companies in this country combined.

These billions are — or should be — the property of the beneficiaries.

Every company contracting to pay a pension, calculates its contribution to its pension system as part of the cost of labor, just as much as it counts workmen's compensation, hospitalization, cafeteria losses, coffee breaks, vacation, sick pay, life insurance, Social Security, gifts, bonuses and wages themselves.

IN FACT, in union negotiations, companies often say something like this: "We'll settle for 50 cents more an hour for the new contract, and you have it divided any way you want: in hourly wages, in increased hospital benefits, in longer vacations, in life insurance or in pensions." The fact that pension contributions are part of wages and that pensions belong to the men and women who earned them is beyond challenge.

Why, then, with all this hundred billion dollars piled up, can't the little-worked-out aging man or woman always get his pension?

There is one basic reason: Pension plans are so drawn up that the worker has little right to the money his labor has helped to accumulate. The catches in the plan wipe out a worker's right to his own accumulation unless he works a long, continuous period. They give the control of the funds to union officials or company officials, or both, with almost no checks. They allow funds to be used for Stock Market speculation, as William McChesney Martin warned a few days ago. They permit funds to be loaned to friends of the controllers at great risk. They permit funds to be used to accomplish mergers. They allow funds to be closed out. They sometimes make looting of funds as easy as — and quite comparable to — taking candy away from babies.

How these catches are used, and how they catch workers who expect to begin to live their dreams of bountiful retirement will be told in the next five articles.

progress in South Vietnam and believes if circumstances continue about as they are, 45,000 more troops should be enough to "see us through to a solution."

The Army chief of staff returned Thursday from 11 days in Vietnam and reported this morning to Johnson. The President then sent him to report his observations to newsmen.

3—U.S. Air Force planes returned to the Hanoi area Saturday for the second day in a row to bomb another key bridge in North Vietnam. American military spokesman Sunday said two American planes were shot down in the raids and their three crewmen were listed as missing.

The spokesmen declined comment on Communist reports that at least eight U.S. planes were shot down over North Vietnam Saturday.

In the new attack, the U.S. jets blasted a span across the Des Rapides Canal five miles northeast of the capital.

The first strikes carried out under the president's new orders, government's ficials said, were the raids Friday against the Paul Doumer Bridge, which stretches from the northeast edge of Hanoi's city limits across the Red River.

Officials said the new list includes a number of transportation and industrial installations in the Hanoi and Haiphong areas, and along the vital rail link from Hanoi to the Communist Chinese border. It was not disclosed whether the President's authorization would permit strikes against the port facilities of Haiphong.

In the past, the White House has imposed limitations on targets in the Hanoi-Haiphong areas for political reasons, largely to minimize civilian casualties and to avoid giving propaganda openings to the Communists.

Pontoon Plane Flips, Sinks; All Rescued

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — A small pontoon-equipped plane carrying five persons flipped over and sank Saturday as it was attempting to light on the Mississippi river.

All aboard were saved.

Authorities said the pilot, Lloyd M. Williams Jr., 28, of Moline, and Abe Santos, 56, of Upland, Calif., freed themselves from the cabin and Williams dived three times to rescue three children from the submerged plane.

The children, each 12 years of age, were Mark McElhinney and Kerry Karlix, both of Bettendorf, Ia., and Ronald Hink of Belleville, Mich.

Recorder Stolen

quences rests on the Chinese side."

In separate protest actions Saturday, the Soviet Union of Sea and River Fleet Workers demanded an immediate end to Chinese "hooligan actions."

Tass said seamen on ships or ashore held protest meetings in Leningrad, Riga, Odessa and Vladivostok.

The Svirsk has been held in the Yellow Sea port of Dairen since July 22. Its captain was arrested by Red Guards Friday, beaten up and then taunted by thousands of Chinese massed on the dockside, according to the official Soviet Tass News Agency.

Tass said Kosygin's telegram Saturday said the Soviet government expects the immediate adoption of appropriate measures by the (Chinese) government to ensure the safety of the crew and the return of the captain and other members of the crew to the ship, as well as to ensure the S.S. Svirsk unhindered departure from Port Dalny (Dairen)."

NEGRO BLOCKS ORDER

No Rifle Scopes to Poverty Group

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A Negro civilian at an air base, the last man in the chain of command, stopped seven telescopic rifle sights from being sent to a war on poverty organization for unexplained uses, he confirmed Saturday.

The civilian at Kelly Air Force Base here is Lester Washington, who said the requisition for the sights was in proper form after going from Houston, Tex., to Washington to Fort Worth, Tex., and being approved everywhere until it reached him.

* * * *

WASHINGTON said in an interview he turned down the order, not on technical grounds but "based on another factor." He refused to describe this other element, however, pending a conference Monday with the commanding officer of the base.

However, he said, "I didn't think it was a suitable item for this type of organization."

Washington is a supervisor of redistribution at Kelly, sending material to other agencies and programs.

The sights were ordered by the Houston war on poverty program, the agency for which is the Harris County Community Action Association.

* * * *

A SPOKESMAN for the Houston poverty agency said the sights probably were for use in "optical experiments."

The Office of Economic Opportunity in Washington issued a formal statement said the order "may have been a forgery or hoax" and pointed out that the sights were not provided, no money was alloted and an investigation is being made.

The Houston organization sought to locate the vacationing employe who ordered the sights.

Houston Police Chief Herman B. Short said the incident left him with "such a feeling of disgust and outrage."

He added, "I don't know how these things fit in with the poverty program."

The Washington Office of Economic Opportunity said six of the sights were useless for their intended purpose because they had been damaged through long storage. The office said the requistion had been investigated 10 days by it, the FBI and a security branch of the Air Force.

Q. My daughters have a dozen dolls they'd like to donate to some group or organization that would fix them and see that they're given to needy youngsters. Can you give us some ideas? Mrs. B. Z., Bellflower.

A. Yes. The dolls can be donated to the Toy Loan Office of the Los Angeles County Department of Social Services, 200 N. Avenue 18, Los Angeles, where the toys will be repaired by welfare recipients, then loaned to needy children through one of 37 toy centers. "When a child cares for and returns the toy for 20 weeks, he or she is given an honor toy to keep. A little girl can adopt a doll, and we have mock ceremonies presided over by a real judge," says Maury Stopps, vocational rehabilitation supervisor. He says the toy program is benficial because it provides work training for welfare recipients and builds a sense of responsibility in the youngsters. For more informaton, call 2M-2189

SOUND OFF!

I'd like to say thanks to the City of Long Beach, and sound off at the same time. For the past two weeks, my family has been attending Pony League play off games at Whaley Park. The park and baseball facilities provided by Long Beach are excellent, and it was nice to see one of your city councilmen there for the opening ceremonies. However, there is a problem. There's a drainage ditch which runs along the east end of the park that is in dire need of a good cleaning. The mosquitoes and other insects which must be breeding in that stagnant water are certainly obvious to spectators — as is the terrible odor rising from there on a summer night. I'm not a resident of your city, but I think the problem should be brought to the attention of the proper authorities, and I was sure a mention in Action Line was certainly the best way to do just that — and at the same time pass on my compliments to your city's recreation commission and the members of the Long Beach Pony League.

REACTION

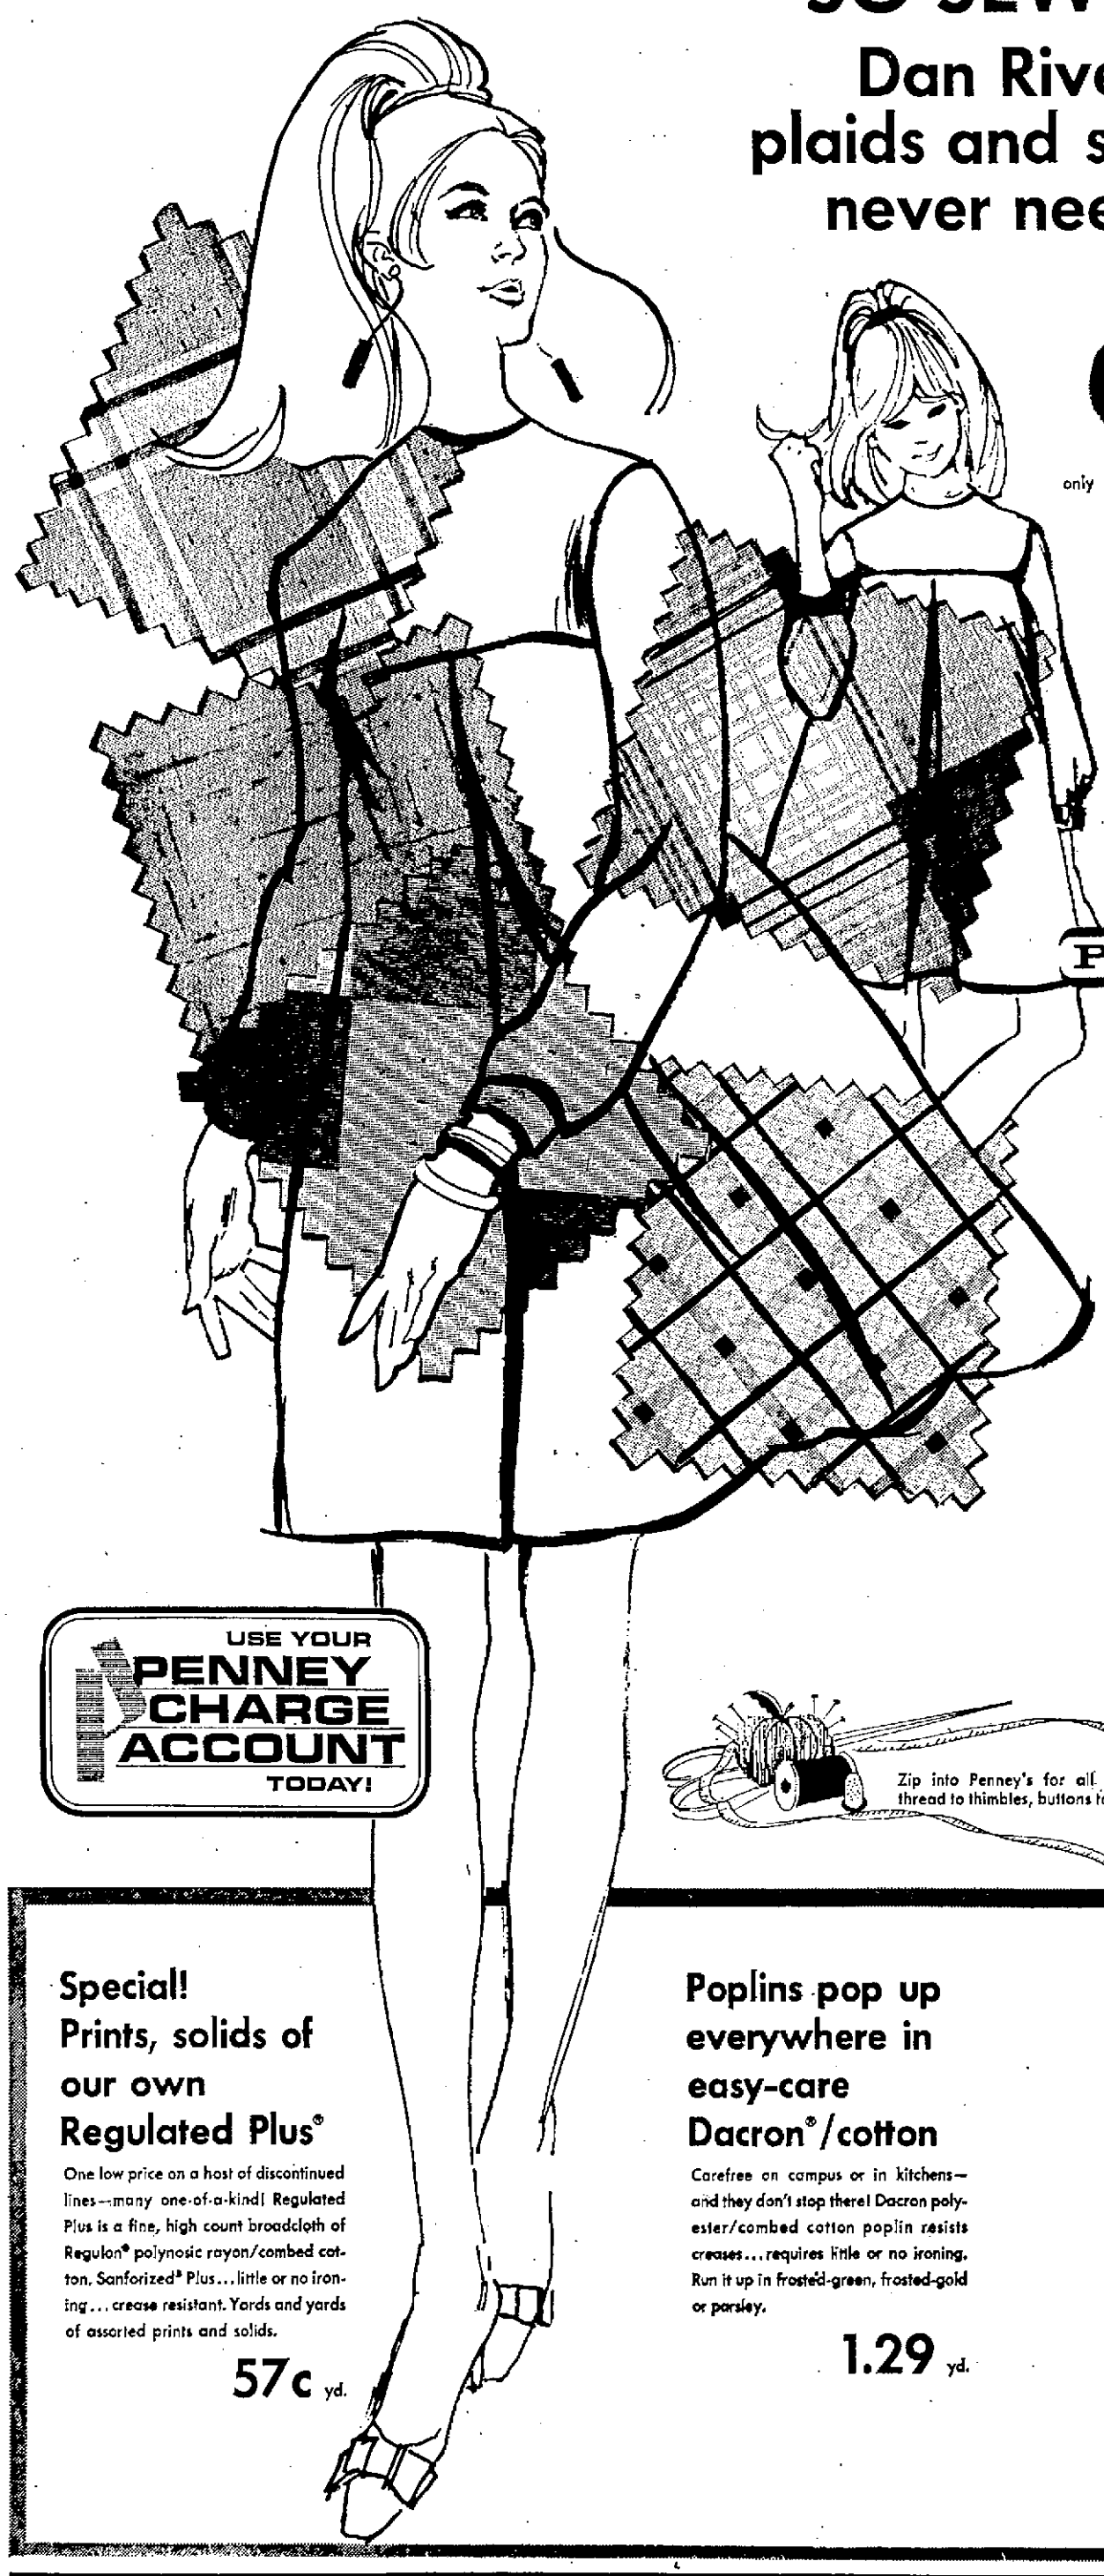

In response to the complaint about school buses, I'd like to say school will be starting again soon, and just the idea of driving this year turns my hair gray. I've never seen a city like Lakewood, where you have to go so far just to catch a bus to school. We live in an area a little more than a mile from school, and in the booklet it says anyone living a mile from school will have bus service, but what they don't say is that children have to walk a half-mile to catch the bus. Purple Heart Vets Convening in L.B.

Registration begins today for the Military Order of the Purple Heart and its Auxiliary's 35th annual national convention.

Headquarters is the Lafayette Hotel.

California Department Commander John J. Ungle of Long Beach said today three Long Beach police officers will be honored at the convention's Award Banquet Tuesday in Long Beach Arena.

George Madek, J. R. Starboard and Walter Williams will receive National Law Enforcement Citations from National Commander Joh H. Burgess.

* * * *

BURGESS said the trio will be recognized for "resolute actions and wounds received in the performance of their duties involving violators of the law."

The public is invited to attend the Joint Opening Tuesday at 9 a.m. in the Concert Hall of the Municipal Auditorium.

At 10:30 will be a memorial service in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of World War I. The Military Order of the Purple Heart was organized in 1932 by World War I veterans.

Other agenda items are a tour of the new Veterans Administration Hospital tower unit, business meetings, Vietnam veterans luncheon, panels and general sessions.

Former Gov. Goodwin J. Knight will address Thursday night's general session at 9:30.

New officers for the order and auxiliary will be announced Thursday night.

It's Time to Think of Yule

Long Beach chapter, American Red Cross, is urging individuals and groups to participate in a community Christmas project to provide gifts for every serviceman in Vietnam.

Some 500,000 brightly colored bags containing gifts will be mailed nationally by the American Red Cross in early September. The Long Beach quota is 1,500 bags.

Advance preparations have been underway since early spring and gifts have been purchased wholesale. The bags are being made.

Gordon Young, chairman of the project at the Long Beach chapter, 319 W. Broadway, said the cost of any number of bags may be contributed at $3 each. Greeting cards with the name of the donor will be inserted.

"Action must be now to assure a better Christmas for those serving in Vietnam," said Young. "Mail your gift check to the chapter. Telephone your questions. Red Cross suggests that youth groups volunteer to wrap the thousands of gifts."

'JOBS WITH DIGNITY'

NAPP Fights L.B. Unemployment

LONG BEACH Neighborhood Adult Participation Project workers and job applicants conduct forum at program headquarters at 1180 E. Anaheim St. NAPP's chief aim is to get jobs for the unemployed and the underemployed. —Staff Photo

By BILL DUNCAN

Richard Harris squinted against the sun beaming down through a roof skylight into his office and mopped beads of perspiration from his brow as he talked.

His office at midday was miserably hot — especially for a man whose main task is to keep things cool. Adding to the irony, Harris' office is in a partitioned section of a store building that once housed a refrigerator repair shop.

"We were really cramped in the old place," he said, referring to the Long Beach Neighborhood Adult Participation Project's old offices at 1959 Orange Ave. Harris heads the Long Beach NAPP which moved into a store building at 1180 E. Anaheim St. to make way for expanded operation.

* * * *

NAAP'S CHIEF AIM is to get jobs for the unemployed and underemployed.

Mrs. Bernice Lowery's case is an example of what the NAPP program is accomplishing.

For the first time in her life, Mrs. Lowery, mother of seven children, can see her way out of the maze of poverty. Her job didn't exist six months ago and if it had, she wouldn't have been eligible for it.

Today she is a community worker — a newly created position — for the Los Angeles County Department of Community Services. Hers is a civil service job that recognizes experience as a aide in an anti-poverty project as a job qualification — the first such official recognition in county government.

Mrs. Lowery of 1085 California Ave. started with NAPP as an aide. She was assigned to the county Probation Department in Long Beach to assist deputy probation officers by attending conferences, providing, transportation, helping families, doing paperwork and working with young offenders.

RICHARD HARRIS
Has a Hot Job

BURTON POWELL, director of the county's Department of Community Services, meanwhile won approval from the Civil Service Commission to create the job of community worker. Mrs. Lowery's experience with the probation department made her qualified for the post. She and another person were the first hired for the new county posts.

This again is only a step for Mrs. Lowery. She is involved in a work-study plan started by Powell's department and patterned after the trade apprenticeship program. She works a 40-hour week, and also attends Long Beach City College classes working toward an AB in sociology.

This will probably lead to a better job in the county department. For this Long Beach woman it is the beginning of a career and a way out of a series of dismal, deadend, unrewarding jobs.

Harris said unemployment and underemployment is a problem in Long Beach and needs the full attention of city officials and private industry. "Our purpose," he said," is not only to find employment, but to find jobs with dignity for both the unemployed and the underemployed."

* * * *

UNDEREMPLOYED, he said, is a person who is working for a low salary and not to his full potential.

Often, the jobs Harris seeks to find don't exist. "They are what we call new careers," he explained.

A new career might be a nurse's aide, social worker, school helper, child care aide, or an assistant teacher.

"Each of these jobs," he explained, "can lead the person into a professional career. A nurse's aide might continue studies and become a registered nurse. A teaching aide could become a teacher."

Long Beach, Harris said, should adopt a "do it yourself" philosophy about finding jobs for the less fortunate. "It is simply good, sound business," he asserted. "The more people you have working, the more money flows into the city's economy. The more people that are gainfully employed the less crime you have."

* * * *

HE DEPLORED the lack of opportunities available for this type of program in Long Beach. "There must be a change in thinking," welfare rolls and become productive citizens. They become a taxpayer instead of a taxeater."

He said he believes that "pride in the work and their job will create a need to aspire to better jobs."

That is the way, he said, to end poverty and all the problems that go with it.

Reds Hit British in Asia

HONG KONG (AP) — Communists from Red China swarmed across the Hong Kong border Saturday and attacked British police and guards with stones. They were repulsed by volleys of tear gas, and Hong Kong officials moved more troops up to the tense 17-mile border.

Before they were driven back, the Chinese smashed through doors in one building and daubed anti-British slogans on the walls at Sha Tau Kok, the village that straddles the border.

Hundreds of Gurkha soldiers, the tough, knife-swinging British mercenaries from Nepal, took up guard positions at Sha Tau Kok.

* * * *

THIS WAS the village where a mob from Red China shot and killed five Hong Kong border police July 8. A government official said the border situation is "the most serious and dangerous" since that date.

Border patrols were reinforced at Man Kam To and Ta Kwu Ling, two small roadcrossing stations where Communist Chinese broke through British barricades Friday and assaulted Hong Kong police and British troops.

At Man Kam To, the Communists captured a guard post, seized its weapons, held a dozen British soldiers hostage for almost five hours, and stood over a British border district officer with an ax while forcing him to sign an agreement.

Evans Products L.B. Terminal Lease OKd

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Federal Maritime Commission Firday announced initial approval of a marine terminal lease between the City of Long Beach and the Evans Products Co.

The lease, one of two considered by Examiner Charles E. Morgan, for a while was disputed by the City of Los Angeles and the San Francisco Port Authority.

BUT since the lease was amended, effective Aug. 9, by Evans and Long Beach, Morgan noted that the two protesters decided not to appear at a hearing July 18.

* * * *

THE OTHER lease, which was for a warehouse to be used by South Bay Warehouse Corp., was not an object of dispute because it was terminated before it became effective.

The pier lease, as amended, provides that Evans would pay Long Beach a minimum of $188,000 for a 12-month period. Once the minimum is paid, however, fees derived from the Pier would be shared, 25 per cent to Long Beach and 75 per cent to the firm.

San Francisco objected to this arrangement.

Los Angeles withdrew its protest "with reluctance" and said it would pursue its efforts to fight "special deals for the privileged few."

PUBLICLY-OWNED and publicly-operated ports should be operated as public utilities, said Los Angeles.

Morgan, in his report, said he found nothing unlawful in the lease — that it was well publicized before it was awarded to Evans and that no steamship company or shipper objected to such agreement.

Evans, a Delaware corporation, is an importer, exporter and manufacturer of plywood and a charterer of two vessels in foreign commerce.

AND RAP, TOO

Maybe Stokely Is With Congress as An Agent!

EDITOR'S NOTE: New York Times columnist Russell Baker triggered a spate of alarmed telephone reaction to his piece on the editorial pages of last Thursday's Independent, Press-Telegram. Baker, eminent among the nation's practicing satirists, had written that agitators H. Rap Brown and Stokeley Carmichael were in the employ of Congress as sort of hired scapegoats to relieve Congress of the need and expense of finding solutions to complex race problems. Baker herewith reacts to the reaction.

By RUSSELL BAKER
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Many persons have telephoned, written and wired to ask whether it is true, as written in this space a few days ago, that H. Rap Brown, the SNCC chairman, is actually an undercover outside agitator for the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The answer is: Who knows? The article was conceived as a satire on Congress's need for just such a pungent orator as Brown to help it avoid dealing with the deepest complexities of the race issue. In this sense, it was fictional, but a man would be a fool to state categorically that it was false.

Events these days have a whimsical habit of running ahead of satire. Those people who are willing to believe anything they read should no longer be dismissed as gullible, because the awkward fact is that satire and the day's news are often indistinguishable.

About a year ago, to cite a case, two writers collaborating on a theater script concocted a story in which Nikita Khrushchev's nephew defected from the Soviet Union, came to the United States and joined the John Birch Society. They abandoned it on the ground it was too implausible to hold an audience. Shortly afterwards, Stalin's daughter defected from the Soviet Union, came to the U.S. and joined Sam Levenson and Elia Kazan in the society of best-seller writers.

* * * *

NOW LET US imagine a very high-toned literary review and then imagine that its front page is illustrated with diagrammed instructions for building a homemade Molotov cocktail. This is obviously satire. It is inconceivable that at a time when the country needs to reduce domestic armament as much as possible, a respected and learned publication would issue directions for building incendiary bombs on a shoestring.

Surely some anti-intellectual is trying crudely to satirize the explosive effects of book-learning on the unwashed street mob.

In this conclusion, we are wrong again, for the diagram appears on the cover of the current issue of the New York Review of Books, which deals extensively with Negro violence.

* * * *

AND HERE is something from a back issue of "New Left Notes," publication of students far a Democratic Society. It was written by a gentlemen named Dick Walker and is part of a list of suggestions on how members of SDS should conduct themselves in mass assembly after asking Huber Humphrey a particularly awkward and hostile question about the administration's Vietnam policy.

"It is possible that should the speaker's answer to the question be obviously unresponsive that the audience might snap and softly whistle

"The Answer is Written in the Wind" or "The Horst Wessel Song' or 'The Yellow Submarine.' Or they could hum. But the effect should be that the sound is soft enough so that the answer can be heard above the soft whistling, humming and snapping (of fingers).

"The student body should be invited to practice these effects at rallies held the week before the speech is delivered."

The delightful absurdity of students holding rallies to practice whistling "The Yellow Submarine" to Hubert Humphrey in the cause of a Democratic society suggests that Walker is himself satirizing the whole student protest movement. The fact that "New Left Notes" chose to publish him, however, suggests that he is to be taken seriously.

Which have we — satire or earnest old fact? It is impossible to tell, for as in so much of modern life, satire and fact have become identical.

* * * *

Two years ago any satirist who depicted a day when every other gasoline filling station in the U.S. was running a gambling operation would have been accused of laying it on a bit thick. Today he would simply be reporting a fact.

Five years ago a description of a man spending $16 on French perfume for use on his own dewlap would have been a satiric commentary on the growing idleness, vanity and vacuity of the American male. Today it is business news.

Today anyone who wrote that General De Gaulle was on the payroll of the CIA would be satirizing the CIA's passion for creating trouble for foreign governments.

Tomorrow? — Well, who knows? It may turn out quite the opposite, with the CIA proving to have been, all along, a secret agency of De Gaulle. That would explain a great deal.

And Rap Brown, could he conceivably be a tool of the U.S. Congress? There is no doubt that he is, the real question is whether he, or the Congress, is aware of their relationship.

IBM Man Shot Dead at Party in Houston

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — John Clayton Hinds, 29, was felled by one of five urday as he stood talking with friends on the balcony of a garden apartment.

The IBM representative was felled by one of five shots fired from the dark courtyard. The large-caliber bullet wounded him under the left armpit. He staggered into the apartment of Carl Stewart, the next-door neighbor whose party Hinds was attending.

He was dead on arrival at a hospital.

Police Shadow Rap Brown on L.A. Tour

LOS ANGELES (CNS) — H. Rap Brown, fiery Black Power advocate, arrived in Los Angeles Saturday and promptly set out on a sightseeing trip — with a police escort.

Brown, leader of the militant Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, is scheduled to address a Black Power rally in Watts today.

The police intelligence detail placed an around-the clock watch on Brown, who is currently free on bond on Maryland charges of inciting a riot.

Lt. L. M. Simmons said his men will trail Brown as long as he stays in Los Angeles.

A group of about 25 Negroes greeted Brown at International Airport. His arrival time had been kept secret.

From the airport, he was driven to a home on the Westside. After a brief stay there, members of the Los Angeles Black Congress took him on a tour of the city.

Two police cars followed behind.

Lt. Simmons also met Brown at the airport.

"I advised him he could go where-ever he pleased and do whatever he pleased that's lawful," Simmons said. "But I told him some of our men would keep on eye on him.

"I advised him this was for the welfare of the community and for his own welfare.

Russia Takes Out Wrath on Jews for Arab Defeat

By JOHN M. TAYLOR
New York Times Service

UNITED NATIONS — Frustrated by Israel's triumph over the Arabs, the Soviet government is intensifying its persecution of three million Russian Jews, according to the Conference on the Status of Soviet Jews.

This accusation was made Friday in a report published by the conference entitled "Israel and the Jews in the Soviet Mirror." The conference is a non-sectarian group sponsored by James A. Pike, former Episcopal bishop of California, Norman Thomas, leader of the Socialist Party, William O. Douglas, Supreme Court justice, and others.

In an open letter accompanying the report, Bishop Pike and Thomas declared that "Soviet policy in the Middle East, culminating in its diplomatic break with Israel, has been accompanied by an enormous anti-semitic propaganda effort at home and abroad whose virulence has rarely been equalled in recent Soviet history."

TRIBE ON WARPATH

S.F. Indians Disclaim Hippie Link: 'That's Way of Bum'

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — There's an Indian-hippie war of sorts going on in San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district, home of the "flower children," and the Indians are giving no quarter.

Center of the Indians' fight is the headquarters of the American Indian Historical Society located just off Haight Street, and leading the battle to preserve Indian culture against hippie infiltration is the society's founder and president, Rupert Costo, 61.

Costo, a full blooded Cahuilla, went on the warpath against the hippies when a local columnist suggested "the hippies are American Indians . . . the gathering of beaded and bearded tribes has begun in San Francisco.

* * * *

COSTO THINKS the wearing of Indian garb by hippies is designed mainly to take advantage of certain southwest Indian religious rites, such as the use of the hallucinatory drug, peyote. But there can be no real comparison between the Indian and the hippie.

"Indian life, even in aboriginal times, was highly ordered," he said. "Everyone worked. No Indian would ever take peyote for kicks. And, no Indian went unbathed."

Lloyd House, a Navajo and member of the Arizona State Legislature, was a recent visitor to Costo's headquarters and had his first look at the flower children.

House had originally expected to meet them under less relaxed circumstances. An ex-Marine, he said there had been rumors of a hippie "invasion" of the Navajo reservation earlier this year.

* * * *

"WE WERE ready for them," House said. "The Navajo police were go ing to kick them out."

Like Costo, House thinks the hippie is not really hip to the Indian.

"The hippie says he likes the Indian life and many of them feel that means free love and drugs," he said.

"They're wrong if they think we use peyote as a drug. Peyote is used as wine and bread as in Christian churches."

"And an Indian used to be killed by other Indians for being unfaithful to his wife. Indians are clean. Holy mackerell The Spanish ordered the Indians not to wash so much."

Magic Mushrooms Get Attention of Scientists

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A group of scientists is studying Mexico's mind-bending mushroom, a psychedelic with a much longer history than its cousin, LSD.

A task force of biologists, chemists, doctors and psychologists from the National University and the National Polytechnical Institute is undertaking the research program.

The so-called "magic mushrooms" produce effects like those of LSD and other psychedelic drugs now in vogue in the United States. They have been used for centuries by witch doctors and priests of primitive cults among Mexico's Indians.

The study has two goals: to determine whether the mushrooms could be profitably used in psychiatry, and to investigate Indian customs in use of the drug.

With the spreading use of psychedelic drugs in the U.S., migrant hippies from north of the border have been seeking out Indian sources to provide them with samples of the mushroom.

Those who have tried the mushrooms say they have one serious drawback that tends to limit their appeal to thrill-seekers: They invariably make the used violently ill before "the trip" takes hold.

Nurse Begins New Career as Doctor-Lawyer Aide

By BOB SANDERS

Operating on the "better mousetrap" theory, a Long Beach registered nurse is providing a new service to lawyers and doctors designed to bridge some of the gap between the two professions.

Marie J. Blume, a personable former fashion model, has been a registered nurse for 28 years and brings a variety of experience to her new job.

About a year ago, after working for almost 20 years handling the insurance affairs of a large Long Beach medical clinic, Mrs. Blume decided there was a need for her kind of service outside the clinic.

So, she organized the Marie J. Blume Medico-Legal Coordinating and Consulting Service as a one-man—oops, there, one-woman—operation.

For an hourly fee, she will:

—Analyze and interpret medical terminology.

—Decipher the handwriting and abbreviations of doctors.

—Condense medical records to pertinent problems.

—Research available sources of medical information pertinent to the case, and —Summarize medical chart data.

In other words, she will take a file of medical data from doctors or hospital records and translate it into layman's language so that lawyers can then translate it into the legal gobbledegook they need to present in court.

The purpose is to save lawyers—and in some cases, doctors—from having to spend hours and hours going over medical records to sift out what is pertinent to their case and what is not.

Mrs. Blume is convinced, from talking to numbers of Long Beach lawyers and judges, that there is a need for this type of service.

That she can provide it is obvious from her experience and qualifications.

* * * *

A GRADUATE of St. Luke's Hospital School of Nursing in Spokane, Wash., with graduate work at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago, she has been an active registered nurse in California since 1946.

To top it off, she worked part-time as a fashion model and a coordinator of fashion shows in the Long Beach and Los Angeles area for 14 years.

A statuesque blonde with a personality to match, Mrs. Blume is now operating her new business out of her home at 3601 Vermont St.

"The possibilities are unlimited," she says.

So is the optimism.

NURSE-LEGAL EXPERT MARIE BLUME

Colonel Retires, Flew With Wright

Col. Robert M. Renneisen, deputy director of information for 15th Air Force and the last officer on active duty to have flown with Orville Wright, retired from the service at ceremonies held last week at March Air Force Base.

Renneisen was Wright's navigator when the air pioneer piloted the Army Air Force's first Lockheed Constellation in April 1944.

It was Wright's first flight in 10 years and the first time he had piloted a plane in 25 years, Renneisen recalls. It was also Wright's last time aloft — he died in 1948 at the age of 76.

Renneisen, who was widely known in Long Beach for his presentations for the Strategic Air Command, had served the ir Force for 26 years and SAC for the last 18 years.

During World War II, Renneisen saw combat duty in New Guinea and Australia, winning the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters. In SAC he served primarily in operations positions as a war plans officer.

Salvation Army Asks Donations

The Salvation Army Men's Social Service Department Saturday requested donatinns of home appliances, refrigerators, stoves, mattresses and summer clothing for resale in its Thrift Shop.

Families willing to donate household discards may call the Long Beach center, 1370 Alamitos Ave., to have "Red Shield" trucks dispatched to their homes.

Pharmacy Aide Appointed at L.B. Hospital

Officials at Long Beach Memorial Hospital have announced the appointment of Dr. William E. Smith to the post of assistant director of pharmacy service.

Dr. Smith, a native of Bell, lives at 3085 Knoxville Ave. He was formerly a research project coordinator at the University of California school of pharmacy, San Francisco. He took his doctorate degree there in 1965.

Town-Hall Type Meeting Scheduled

A town-hall type meeting to discuss all sorts of urban problems will be held in Long Beach Auditorium all day Labor Day by the Neighborhood Activities Organization.

Mrs. Virginia J. Cline, president-founder of NAO, said there would be speakers on various topics and panel discussions. The program will run from 7 a.m. to midnight, she said.

Festival Gig Award Goes to Sterett

The brand-new Navy ship USS Sterett took honors Saturday in captain's gig inspection competition, held in connection with the California International Sea Festival.

Judges chose the Sterett's gig — a small boat for the ship captain's personal use — as best overall, awarding the crew a third place for their entry in open class competition.

Top spot in the 26-foot motor whaleboat class was won by the USS Energy, while honors in the 35-foot wood motorboat class went to Fleet Boat Pool, Long Beach Naval Station.

Judging was done by the Long Beach Port Ambassadors, who viewed the Navy entries at Long Beah Yacht Club.

Bonn's A-Future Hangs on Meet With LBJ

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN, Germany (AP) — West Germany's nuclear potential will be at stake when Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger sees President Johnson in Washington Tuesday and Wednesday.

The West German forces are the strongest in Western Europe and they are capable of delivering a considerable nuclear punch — but only if the President releases the nuclear warheads. Now it seems likely this potential will be reduced.

The country's entire defense role is being scrutinized. Kiesinger has made a drastic slash in defense spending for as far ahead as 1971. The United States and Britain are cutting their troops on the continent. France has withdrawn from the Atlantic command, and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is working out a new defense concept for the whole alliance.

This will take shape when NATO moves from Paris to Brussels in the fall.

* * * *

THE REASON for the rethinking is that the governments in the alliance are acting now on a conviction they have held for some time: war with the Soviet Union in Europe is unlikely.

The West Germans have nearly 800 F104G Starfighters. Most of them are equipped to carry a nuclear bomb as far as western Russia — though they couldn't get back. They also have two battalions of Pershing missiles which could reach no further than Warsaw from West German soil, plus shorter range tactical nuclear weapons. American soldiers have trained West Germans in their use.

But none can be used without the American warheads. The chances of West Germans secretly making or otherwise obtaining a warhead of their own are considered remote. Konrad Adenauer promised when he was chancellor that he would not make such weapons in West Germany and his successors have repeated the pledge.

Communists nevertheless argue that this country is run by ex-Nazis thirsting to revenge their defeat of 1945. They contend that although West German leaders say they want no control of nuclear weapons, they have not promised to refrain from getting them in other countries or from building them on foreign soil. They note that a strong current of West German official opinion favors taking part in an Atlantic or European nuclear force, and an even stronger one wants to keep a hand in nuclear delivery systems.

* * * *

THE COMMUNISTS conclude that a West German nuclear attack on Russia is possible, unlikely as it seems to Western governments. This, they say, is why they are so eager to have a treaty to outlaw the spread of nuclear weapons.

President Johnson also wants such a treaty, but with the idea of improving relations with the Soviet Union, separating it still further from Red China — which would not sign the treaty — and halting trouble in such dangerous spots as the Middle East and the Indian subcontinent. A fading away of West German nuclear potential could help him.

There also are big strategic and financial questions.

Pentagon experts think planes are not the delivery vehicles for nuclear weapons of the future. Some have been heard to say that in view of the West Germans' bad experience with the Starfighter — they have had more than 70 crashes — it was probably a mistake in the first place to yield to thier wishes and redesign as a nuclear carrier what was originally meant to be an ordinary fighter-bomber.

The Starfighter can also deliver conventional bombs and at U.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's suggestion the West Germans now are giving more emphasis to that job in handling the Starfighter. American officials insist there is no basis for West German suspicion that he wants to denuclearize the Starfighter altogether, but the suspicion persists, nonetheless.

* * * *

IN ANY CASE, the Starfighter will become obsolete in the early 1970s and the West Germans have to start thinking about whether they want a successor and what its capabilities should be. This may be touched on in Washington and certainly will be part of the NATO discussions.

Chances appear slight that U.S. authorities will favor a nuclear role for the Starfighter's successor, or that they will be willing to sell the West Germans nuclear missiles with enough range to hit the Soviet Union.

South Viet Elections Criticized

LONDON (UPI) — The chairman of the Greater Los Angeles Clergy and Laymen Committee on Vietnam, just arrived after a 22-day fact finding mission to Saigon and South Vietnamese battle fields, said Saturday it was essential that the United States supply supervisors to guarantee that forthcoming elections were free.

Rev. Hugh Anwyl, minister of the Mt. Hollywood Church of Christ, said the U.S. reaction to the South Vietnamese elections is generally to say "We hope they are free elections."

The Rev. Anwyl, who interviewed the chairman of the election committee, Nguyen Tran, said, "I think it is cowardice not to do something about it."

The clergyman said he came away with the impression that the U.S. could not possible hope to win the war militarily because its troops are fighting a defensive war. Without negotiations, the war can go on for five or ten years, he said.

Reagan Continues Crime War

SACRAMENTO (AP) — In his inaugural address last January, Gov. Reagan repeated campaign pledges to wage war on crime in California, and he achieved more success in this area than in any other nonfinancial field.

He specifically mentioned plans to create an anti-crime technological foundation, stiffen laws to control pornography and keep smut out of children's hands and to give cities and counties the right to enact laws against certain activities without state interference.

* * * *

HIS PROGRAM was partly successful during the Republican governor's first session, even though he was faced with a Democratic-controlled legislature.

One of the more highlighted anticrime bills enacted this year was a stiff firearms control measure which prohibits unauthorized persons from carrying loaded guns in public places.

On the day it was scheduled for its first committee hearing — May 2 — a band of armed Negroes from the Oakland area carrying shotguns, rifles and hand guns strolled into the Capitol and burst onto the Assembly floor during a session.

* * * *

MEMBERS of the Black Panther Party for Self Defense, they said they were protesting the proposed gun control bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Don Mulford, R-Piedmont. They also said they were exercising their right to bear arms.

This dramatic incident, for which the state police were unprepared, was the center of conversation in the Capitol for weeks, and gave added impetus to Mulford's bill. It was passed and became law immediately.

Also declared out of bounds to persons with loaded firearms are residences of the governor, legislators and other constitutional officers, as well as the Capitol, legislative offices, legislative meeting places, public schools, the University of California and the state college campuses.

* * * *

ONE OF THE first anti-crime programs to be enacted during Reagan's initial term was a package of bills stiffening the penalties for intentionally inflicting great bodily harm in the commission of a robbery, rape or burglary. The penalties were increased to a sentence of 15 years to life imprisonment. The basic effect was to raise from 20 months to seven years the period during which the convicted person would not be eligible for parole.

When voters last November rejected Prop. 16, an anti-obscenity initiative, Reagan and many legislators agreed to seek legislative controls.

Measures to clamp down on pornography and establish a new set of rules governing printed matter made available to juveniles were introduced, but failed to win legislative approval.

Four Burn to Death in a Camper

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) — Four members in a vacation bound family who stopped to act as good samaritans were burned to death and at least 18 other persons were injured in flaming chain-reaction crashes on a fog-blanketed superhighway Saturday.

STATE police said some 20 semitrailer trucks and autos were involved n a series of grinding crashes along a four-mile stretch in the northbound lanes of U.S. 66-Interstate 55, about 14 miles south of Joliet and 60 miles from downtown Chicago.

POLICE said four members of the Charles Runions family, traveling from Kansas City, Kans., to visit relatives in Winfield, Illinois, died when a semitrailer truck burst into flames and showered their combination pickup-truck camper with burning liquid.

The family had stopped at the scene of a crash of two trucks to help set out flares, and the four who died were trapped in the camper unit where they had been sleeping, police said.

Wreckage Found

TRINIDAD, Colo. (AP) — Wreckage of a small plane missing for about 14 months on a flight from Pratt, Kan., to Cortez, Colo. has been found, authorities said Saturday. Killed in the crash was William Durall of Cortez, who formerly lived in the Pratt area.

Ex-Long Beach Resident Moves Up to High Pacific Command

By EV HOSKING
Sunday Editor

A former Santa Monica Junior College football player and one-time Long Beach resident recently became the second highest ranking Air Force officer in the Pacific.

Gen. Edmundson, who is married to the former Maddie Lee Turner of Long Beach and who himself lived here for a while on his return from Korea in the 1950s, first achieved fame when he was credited with sinking one of the first Japanese submarines during World War II and Korea. in Hawaii.

GEN. J. V. EDMUNDSON

QUEEN'S TOOTER IS EYE OPENER

LONG AND SLEEK

Mary's Measurements Give Her the Lines of a Queen

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

It would have been so much easier for people to remember the Queen Mary is an even 1,000 feet long if the builders had not tacked on an extra 19 feet, six inches.

Who can remember that the Long Beach-bound ship, the world's second largest, is 1,019 feet, six inches long?

Those extra 19 plus feet were not added just because it was the favorite number of Britain's Queen Mary—for whom the giant liner was unintentionally named.

It was calculated by marine architects who designed the Queen that she had to be 1,019 feet, six inches long so that she could sail from Southampton to New York every other Wednesday.

To be profitable for the Cunard-White Star Line, the Queen Mary and her slightly larger sister ship, the Queen Elizabeth, had to be able to make a round trip every two weeks.

* * * *

TO DO THIS, the Mary had to be capable of making an average of 30 knots during the 3,160-mile North Atlantic crossing.

Cunard's engineers added up the number of hours in a week, subtracted the number of hours it would take a brigade of scrubwomen to clean the huge liner in port while she took on supplies, such as 83,000 tons of fuel, 70 tons of meat, and 6,000 pounds of coffee especially ground to American tastes.

The ship had to make the crossing in 105 hours—less than four and a half days. To maintain an average speed of 30 knots would require an engine of 200,000 horsepower.

To carry such a huge engine, the hull had to be 80,000 tons, 118 feet wide and 1,019 feet, six inches long.

When the French learned the length of the Mary, they were accused of adding a rakish clipper bow to the Normandie to make it 11 feet longer and thus the world's largest liner at that time.

* * * *

WHEN THE 1,019-foot, six-inch ship arrives in the Port of Long Beach during the first week of December, she is to be met by an armada of whistle-tooting pleasure boats bidding her welcome to her retirement home.

When the captain of the Queen Mary answers with a blast of the ship's deep-throated whistle (which the British call a siren), the sound will reach every house in Long Beach including parts of Compton, Bellflower, Lakewood and as far west as the Port of Los Angeles.

The seven-foot long steam-powered whistle emits a low musical tone identified by bass fiddle players as "A—16 notes below middle C."

It has been suggested that as a daily reminder of her presence, the whistle be sounded at high noon each day. Another suggestion is that the big whistle be used as a supplementary air raid siren.

* * * *

THE GIANT ocean queen is due to arrive in Long Beach after departing on her final voyage the first week in October from her home port of Southampton.

The ship, costing $35 million when she was completed in 1936, would cost more than $1 billion to build today, according to city officials.

Long Beach bought the Queen for $3.4 million to be used as a maritime museum, hotel and convention center.

During her stay in Long Beach, she is certain to be revisited by some of the 765,429 servicemen who sailed aboard her during her service as a troop transport in World War II.

The speedy giant carried as many as 15,000 men at a time. Each bunk was used by several men who rotated their "sack time." They ate in shifts.

* * * *

COOKING was quite a problem—especially eggs.

The cooks solved the monumental task by filling clean GI garbage cans with raw eggs. They were cooked by running bubbling steam from the boilers through them.

Some ex-GIs may remember one of the Queen's saddening misadventures.

Because of her speed, the powerful Queen could outrun anything afloat. For this reason, she usually made her transoceanic crossing unescorted. But on one occasion she picked up an escort—including a cruiser. The war ship made a miscalculation and turned in front of the Queen Mary's knife-like bow. It was cut in half.

Several thousand soldiers watched hundreds of British sailors drown in the liner's mighty wake as the Mary's master gave the order to keep going.

The captain dared not risk the lives of the men on board by coming to a stop—an easy mark for a German torpedo.

* * * *

IN HER 31 years as one of the greatest ships afloat, the giant liner has made famous the name Queen Mary, a name she was never intended to bear.

While under construction by Cunard, a company representative asked Lord Royden, a personal friend of King George V, to beg the monarch's permission to name the big ship after the king's grandmother, Queen Victoria.

During a grouse hunt one day with the King, Royden popped the question:

"Would the King permit the giant liner to be named after the most illustrious and remarkable woman who had even been queen of England?"

"That is the greatest compliment that has ever been paid to me—and to my wife," the King said.

"I will ask the Queen for her permission," he added.

Queen Mary was delighted, indeed!

Britain Locks Up Cactus Exhibit

LONDON (AP) — Cactus collections at Kew Botanical Gardens have been put behind iron bars to keep them from the grasp of dabblers in hallucinatory drugs who could produce LSD-like trips from them.

"We had to take them off general display," said foreman Edward MacDonald of the succulent plants division, "because three 20-year-old specimens were stolen.

KANE, Pa. (AP) — People in this northwestern Pennsylvania town fired furnaces Saturday morning as the temperature dipped to an overnight low of 36 degrees.

Hiker Missing in Yosemite

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK (UPI) — A team of 20 searchers was airlifted to the Red Peak area of Yosemite National Park to search for a missing hiker.

Tom Opperman, 21, Fresno, left early Tuesday morning on a hike that was to take him to Lake Merced, as well as the Red Peak area and Glacier Point overlooking Yosemite Valley.

RAN PSYCHEDELIC SHOP

Nab Hippie, Girl on Drug Charge

Narcotics officers posing as hippies arrested the 28-year old owner of Strawberry Fields psychedelic shop and his teen-age girlfriend on suspicion of possessing and furnishing marijuana early Saturday.

The officers — two bearded policemen and a policewoman wearing a sweater and capris — arrested shop owner Patrick Francis McFadden and 18-year-old Tracy Lyn Garner at an apartment, 1505 E. 10th St.

Officer Mike Morgan said Miss Garner gave him a marijuana cigarette at a root beer stand last week and three more freshly rolled reefers outside the apartment early Saturday.

When the officers raided the apartment, they found another reefer in McFadden's shirt pocket and enough marijuana to make five cigarettes on top of a refrigerator, Officer Larry A. Carter said.

Carter also said McFadden was smoking a pipe which had recently contained marijuana.

The three officers raided the apartment, Saturday; minutes after Miss Garner reportedly gave a reefer to Morgan.

"I thought I was doing you a favor," Miss Garner told Morgan when she was placed under arrest.

McFadden protested that he had had no trouble with police since he'd started smoking marijuana, officers said.

Carter said the arrests were not connected with McFadden's psychedelic shop, which moved to 2730 E. 10th St. in late June from Seal Bach, where the hippies had been having landlord troubles.

Nigerian Troops Move to Halt Rebel Forces

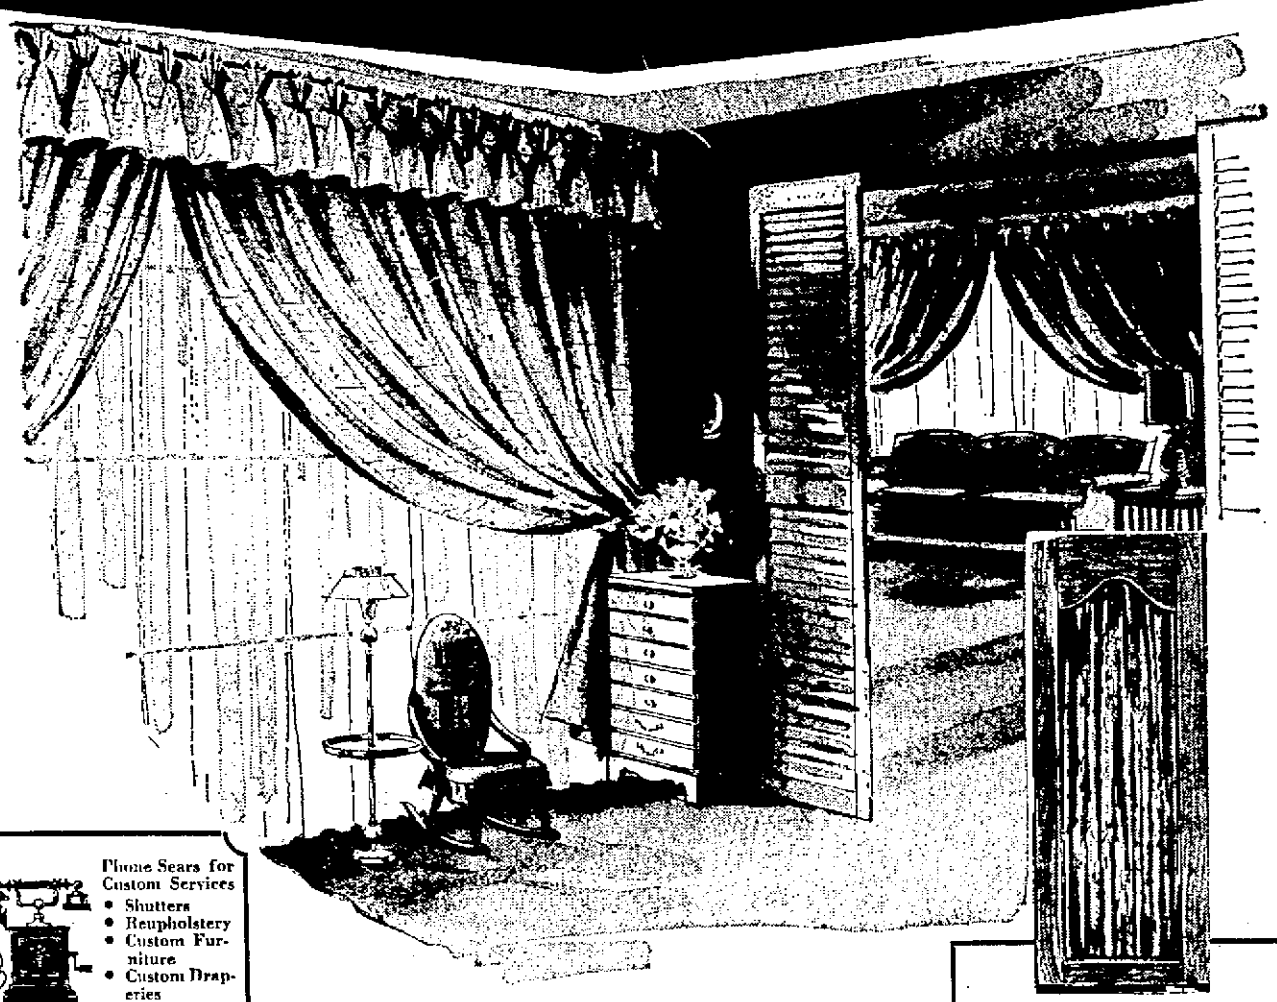

LAGOS (UPI) — Federal government troops have entered the middle western region of Nigeria in an attempt to hold back the advance of rebellious eastern forces, a government spokesman said Saturday night.

A Nigerian radio report said federal planes Saturday bombed Onitsha, a major market town in the breakaway region on the edge of the Niger River.

Onitsha is at one end of a vital bridge across the river to Asaba in the middle western region which was invaded by secessionist eastern forces earlier this week.

Schools Prepare Aviation-Education Course

A teaching team from Fountain Valley schools is putting together a unique aviation-education course based on the theory that flying isn't technical, but that it has broad socio-economic influences.

The "textbook" phase of the summer-long survey by two principals and seven teachers will be finished this week — and then begins the job of correlating the audio-visual aids such as models, movies, film slides study prints, books and brochures.

Planning the course for the Nieblas and Harper schools this fall, the teaching team hopes eventually to expand it to others of Fountain Valley's 10-school system — and see its acceptance nation-wide.

Principals Ron Hines of developed into a meaning-Daigle of Harper, and teachers Patty House, Suzanne McDowell and John Carlyle, all of Nieblas; and Marilyn Tabor, Ardis Burns, Mary Larkin and Pam McGrath of Harper, are doing the course outlines under a grant from Cessna Aircraft Co.

It all started eight months ago when Cessna asked the Fountain Valley School District to evaluate an outline of aviation instruction it hoped to offer to schools across the nation.

Hines said that Cessna offered to underwrite the study — and wanted it to be both "critical and constructive."

What the manufacturers of the popular small planes got was a hard-hitting report that the company outline "was too shallow" but that the idea had "great merit" and could be devloped into a meaningful study program.

Cessna agreed to grant $300 research scholarships to each of the seven teachers; the two principals are donating their time and talents. By now, the company has spent about $6,000 on the project, what with the audio-visual aids and other contributions.

The teaching team came up with the outline of a study for grades one through eight, by which children could be taught that aviation and all activities have guidelines by which people must live.

Aviation's impact on the economic life of the nation, and of the world, is noted. And so is the anthropological consequences — of developing interdependence of races on peaceful pursuits of business and cultures because aviation has brought peoples so close together.

In "advanced" studies, by pupils in the higher grades, there will be field trips such as to airports, and essays on the broad spectrum of their analysis and reasoning abilities to grasp the aviation course significance to other fields of study.

For those children who want details of the technical side of aviation — such as the theory of flight, nomenclature of airplanes and information about power plants — the course books will offer that, too.

Dr. Edward Beaubier, superintendent of Fountain Valley schools, said that the selection of his district for the aviation pilot project was "a natural."

Fountain Valley School District, which four years ago had one school and now is readying its 11th plant, is known nationwide as an "innovator" of ideas.

"We specialize in such challenges," he explained.

After the course of aviation study is used as a adjunct to classroom work, it will be evaluated. That's to be a project for weekends during the school year. Next summer, the teaching team expects to spend time upgrading the outline.

Fountain Valley's study developed from the Aerospace Workshop at California State College at Long Beach, which decided that it could well be a part of air-age education.

40 ENTRIES EXPECTED

Character Boat Parade Open to All

The famed Character Boat Parade, world's only nautical caper of its kind, will be open this year to out-of-county craft.

The show will be Aug. 26 at 3:30 p.m. around a circuitous course on Newport Harbor waters. It is expected to feature at least 40 out-of-this-world boats and be seen by 160,000 or more persons.

Sponsored by the Commodores' Club of the Newport Harbor Chamber of Commerce, it will be under the direction of parade chairman Richard S. Stevens, with John Parker as co-chairman. It will be the seventh annual showing.

Stevens said that the theme this year will be "Boat Parade Internationale," as a "salty salute to the friendly nations."

Eight perpetual trophies will be awarded, for theme boats and character boats. Special honors will be handed out to steam boats, best-costumed crews, and for animated entries.

In the parlance of the parade, a character boat is "a vessel of individual character either through its original design or special decoration or adaptation."

Skippers and crews will meet for brunch and briefing Aug. 26 at 12:30 p.m. at Balboa Bay Club, then start the parade from the club's marina, according to Commodores' Club skipper Bill Ring.

Actor, Brother In Death Valley

DEATH VALLEY (AP) — A Hollywood actor and his brother were near the halfway point Saturday in their 130-mile hike through the blistering heat of Death Valley.

Park rangers said they had spotted actor Arch Edwards, and Dennis Owens, 24, of Los Angeles about 9 miles from the Furnace Creek visitors' center.

'Host of Classes'

The Institute of Lifetime Learning will begin its fall term Oct. 6 in new quarters at the Times Building, Broadway and Long Beach Boulevard.

Dean Joe C. Gunn said the move will allow the Institute to offer a host of new classes.

Dr. Paul H. Sheets, dean of extension at the University of California at Los Angeles, will be speaker for the opening ceremonies. At the same time, students completing five or more Institute courses will be presented diplomas.

Because of the additional space, Dr. Gregor Ziemer, program director, said such courses as "Can You Avoid Probate?", "Adventures in Being and Relating," and "Great Political Issues of 1967-68" will be offered.

MALCOLM EPLEY

His Dignity Re-Covered

—Staff Photos by BOB SHUMWAY

AFTER a few days of "batching it" (with wife in hospital) I can testify to this: it has to be the fellows suddenly or temporarily bereft of wife and cook who are having the worst trouble about overstuffing and weight-gaining.

It's not what we do for ourselves with our unusual freedom in the kitchen that brings on the diet excesses and the zooming figures on the bathroom scales.

It's the work of friends and relatives who don't want us to mope in solitude in an empty house and invite us over for dinner.

I can understand how what happend to a friend of mine who, a while back, was suddenly and unceremoniously divorced. After a few weeks I observed a growing pot and a second chin.

"Divorce," I observed, "must be agreeing with you. In fact, it appears to be over-agreeing." Obviously, you like your own cooking."

"My own cooking!" he cried. "I've never tried it. I'm killing myself eating as the guest of friends who feel sorry for me."

WHAT happens, of course, is that each hostess for the "lonely" guest makes a production of the dinner she serves him. In some cases it may be that, knowing he has been invited around, she doesn't want her fare to suffer in comparison with that at other tables.

So the feasts grow more profuse, temptations to excess mount, and resistance weakens. I've been eating like a hog all week.

Let me give you an example of what Ted and Cleo Bowman, out of friendship and generosity, set in front of me.

Cocktails served with big chunks of freshly caught albacore as well as corn chips and a delicious avocado dip. (By the time I'd finished the cocktail hour I had ten times my allowance of calories for a meal.)

Dinner: A big vegetable salad richly endowed with a savory sauce; a huge barbecued steak; zuccini with another wonderful sauce; a big baked potato soaked with Danish butter; dinner wine; an immense piece of nut cake flanked by a generous slice of ice cream. (Sounds like a Tedd Thomey report.)

All of this in a pleasant, relaxed atmosphere conducive to on-and-on consumption of food and beverage. When I left the Bowmans I waddled to my car, and at home staggered to bed to get the weight off my feet.

It's all great, but when my wife gets home, I'll have to go on a long program of scrimpy meals. That's not a very pleasant outlook for a guy who has now grown accustomed to gourmet repasts every evening.

FOLLOWING a panegyric here on oleanders, who are blooming beautifully all over the area, I got a letter from Gladys Wells suggesting that I ought to tell something else about oleanders — they're poisonous.

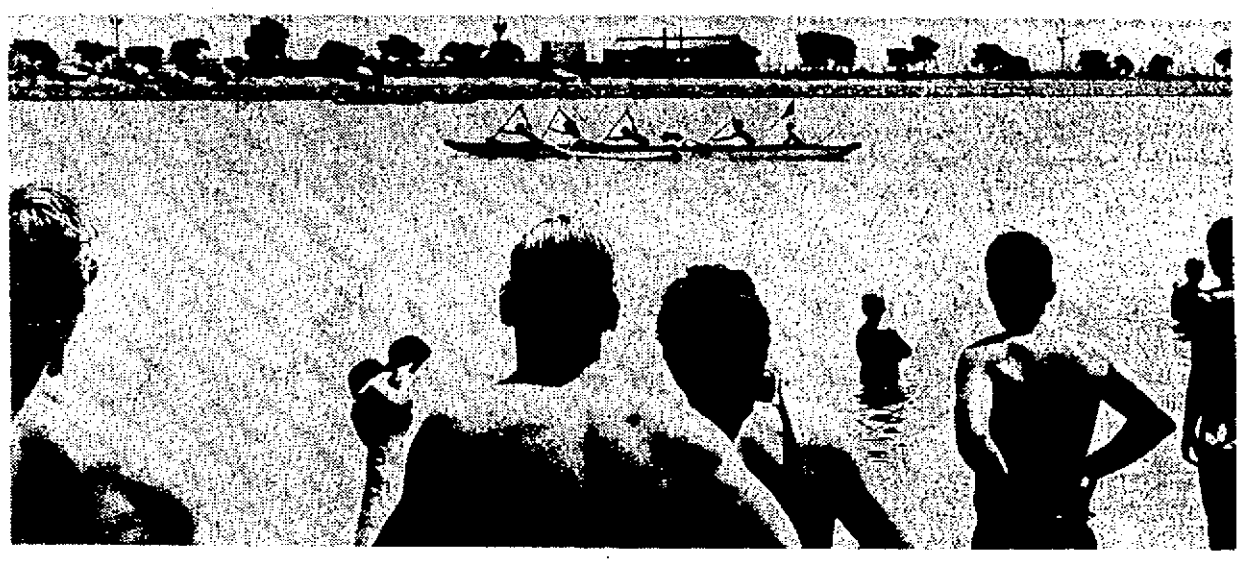

She noted that the University of California recently put out a detailed report on the dangers of the toxic oleander. Even the smoke from oleander twigs, if used to cook meat over an open fire, can be deadly.

Gladys warning is timely. Enjoy looking at these blooming shrubs, but for gosh sakes, don't eat them or burn them in the barbecue fire.

City Health Dept. reports a few cases of oleander poisoning in recent years. Another plant that has caused some trouble is the castor bean, which is very common in the Southland. The beans, especially, can make trouble.

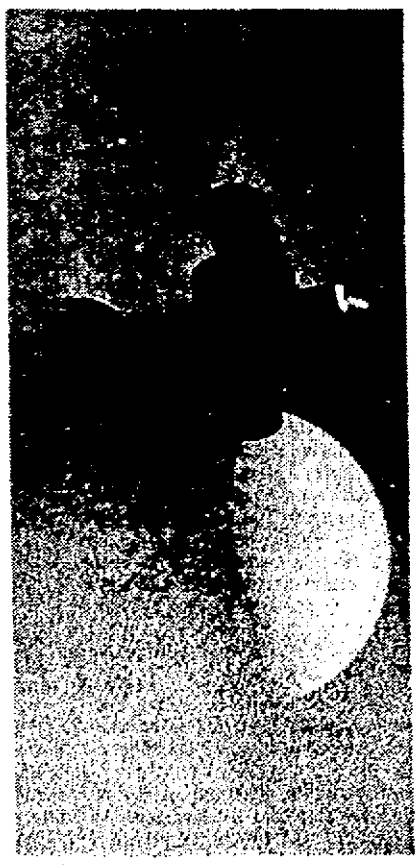

There's plenty to eat around, as I've indicated above, without browing on the garden shrubs.

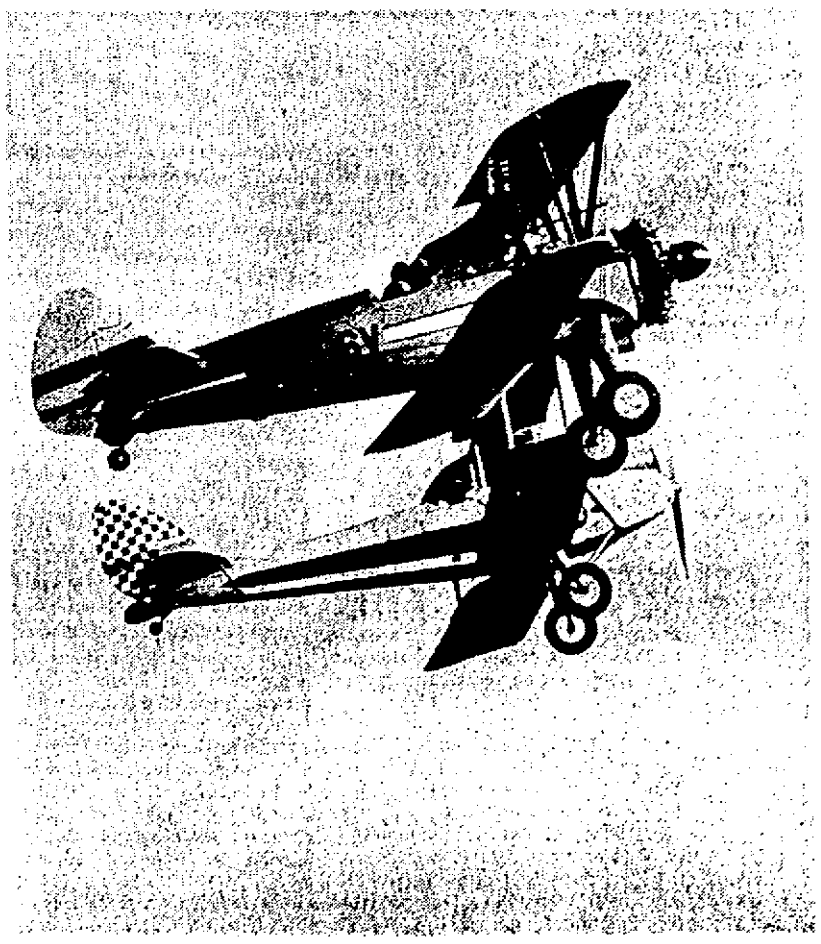

What's that shimmering on the bottom? A dime? a bottle cap? a shell? Bursting with enthusiasm over a romp in Marine Stadium waters, a fellow can forget that he's bursting out of his trunks and just about to become a bottomless bather. Must have all been imagination. Wonder if you could swim across to the other side without getting in the way of the Sea Festival Rowing Regatta? Uh-Oh, that sixth sense of propriety alerts of an approaching chick. Time for a quick, ummm . . . ahhh . . . face-saving move. Too late. Modesty in a teeny bikini prevails and gives a healthy assist in re-covering dignity, by raising the bounds of public decency to waistline level. But waaiiittt a minute! Look who's topless.

Sea Festival Begins in L.B.

Long Beach's celebration of its prime benefactress, the Pacific Ocean, formally opened Saturday with various events in the Second Annual California International Sea Festival. Aquatic show spectators watched as well-muscled crewmen (above) sent outrigger canoes lunging through marina waters. Other persons waited, with breath and hook baited, for the prize-winning nibble that will earn them a bite of the $5,000 prize purse offered in the Independent, Press-Telegram Fishing Derby (right). Shoreline spectators Saturday night were treated to an air show (below) featuring classic and antique aircraft of all kinds, plus parachutist exhibitions. Photographer Curt Johnson caught one plane against the moon, possibly significant as a good astrological omen for a successful Sea Festival. The aquatic show earlier in the day included 40 separate events. Today's events include the Grand National Catalina Water Ski Race at 8 a.m., Starting and finishing between the Reef Restaurant and the foot of Golden Avenue, and the American Power Boat Association Inboard Speedboat Races at noon in Marina Stadium. See sports section for results of Saturday's events.

LONG HAUL

Little fisherman Tad Balew, 4, gives a long, hard tug on with a big rod Saturday afternoon at Belmont Pier. Tad, of 1355 Redondo Ave., was one of the early participants in The Independent, Press-Telegram Fishing Derby.

Repeated History Makes Eerie Reading

By GEORGE McEVOY

THE YEARS 1929 and 1967 are twins in time.

An editor of 1929—on a twilight zone visit to the city room of this morning's newspaper—would have difficulty finding any difference in the flow of news from the world's capitals.

Only the names would be changed. The time traveler could use the same headlines that ran in the closing months of the flaming youth era.

But history always repeats itself, you say. Of course, but not with such accuracy within a 12-month span. The similarities between 1929 and 1967 are so many and so sharply akin as to be eerie. Consider these news events culled from the yellowed journals of 1929:

—China, ripped by civil war, has broken diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. Both nations have massed troops on the Manchurian border and there are reports of clashes.

—Fierce fighting has broken out between Jews and Arabs at the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem. American Jewry holds huge rallies to aid their co-religionists.

—Riots with much bloodshed and arson are erupting across the United States. The authories blame them alternately on economic despair, racial unrest and Communist agitation.

—Pacifists march and orate on campuses and through major cities.

—Scientists are seriously discussing going to the moon, and rockets are being tested.

—The U.S. Post Office is in a mess, losing millions of dollars and says rates must be boosted.

—The movie industry is under fire for too much nudity and violence. There are demands for censorship.

—The President of the United States and his Cabinet are rapped for distorting the news and attempting to control the press. The stench of corruption still hovers over Washington.

—The youth of the day are accused of lacking respect for authority and of being a generation of debauchers.

—Church leaders decry a breakdown in moral standards.

HAD ENOUGH? Those are only a sampling of the many strange similarities between the years 1929 and 1967. This reporter started noticing them while thumbing through "Time Capsule-1929," a compendium of that year's issues of Time Magazine. Some research on old newspaper files strengthened the belief that the years were time twins. And if we can learn from history, perhaps we can read our own future by going back 38 years and seeing how things turned out.

For China, of course, the situation became Turmoil Sub Gum. The forces of Chiang Kai-shek seized the Russian owned Chinese Eastern Railway. The Soviets immediately seized it right back after routing Chiang's troops. The Chinese army was uptorn by mutinies. All the western powers, including the U.S., sided with Russia, sent what were called "stiff warnings" to the Chinese, and then turned to other matters.

The situation in Palestine was kept from boiling over by the presence of British troops. President Herbert Hoover expressed his deep sorrow at the plight of the Jewish people, then turned to the fishing news.

The rioting in the U.S., while mainly of the labor variety, did have some racial tones and compared very strongly with today's outbreaks in the economic despair of the rioters. Almost all persons in authority called for stern, swift action. Police and troops fired on rioters, killing many of them. Others were imprisoned, some few were deported as aliens. Still more were lynched. "We know how to handle them," a policeman in North Carolina said.

As for the pacifists, they made a lot of noise, acting very unpacific in several fistfights, left college, got jobs. Most of them later fought in World War II.

HOLLYWOOD did crack down on nudity, though not on violence. There followed an era of milk-and-water films so maudlin and wholesome as to cause today's reaction—nudity.

As for the other big issues of 1929—scientists are still discussing going to the moon and rockets are still being tested; the youth who so shocked their elders now are writing letters to the editor signed "Irate Reader" condemining today's younger generation of debauchers; and the Post Office is still in a mess and says rates will have to be raised.

For the President, however, the criticism continued, sharpened once the Great Depression set in, and he was voted out of office, replaced by a popular young opponent of liberal persuasion.

OF COURSE, the year 1929 ended with a bang that was the sound of the Stock Market falling through the floor and the stockholders crashing through hotel windows. Today's market is said to be insured against any such disaster by higher margins and other federal controls.

But you will admit, I think, that 1929 and 1967 have a lot in common. It was a restless year, 1929. Then, as now, there was a restiveness in the air that almost could be heard to hum. People felt, if they didn't actually know, that some great change was coming in the destiny of mankind. The jazz babies were vo-do-de-oing off the stage and new players, a ragged company of transients, were marching on. It was the end and the beginning of eras.

The same impatient stirring grips the world today. We sense it and are alarmed and excited.

REPORTER'S NOTEBOOK

Race Track Case Only an Example

IT IS NO coincidence that the bad smell from the proposed Del Mar race track lease grows ranker with the disclosure of secret meetings by the official agency responsible for the award.

Atty. Gen. Thomas C. Lynch charges that the executive committee of the 22nd District Agricultural Association's board met secretly on 25 to 30 occasions to consider the lucrative lease for the state-owned property.

The board twice awarded the prize to Del Mar Associates, tossing out a higher bid by the San Diego County Turf Club.

Justifiably suspicious, the state's Department of General Services rejected the award. Later the legislature passed and Gov. Reagan signed a bill freezing any leasing of the track through Dec. 31.

According to Lynch's report, secret meetings of executive committee members occurred at San Diego hotels, Sacramento motels and on airplanes.

These closed sessions, the attorney general explained, were defended on the theory that a meeting does not occur officially unless a majority of the board is present.

Lynch commented that this kind of procedure makes the public board meeting a "predestined formality."

He has charged a conflict of interest on the part of one board member. This may or may not be provable; and if proved, it may not be a violation of state law.

In any event, the closed meetings, the excuse that the letter of the law does not apply under the conditions, the questionable award of what promised to be a profitable business — all form consistent parts of a bad package.

State law requires that the board meetings be public. Lynch now wants the law strengthened to make it mean what it seems to mean. He also recommends stronger safeguards against conflict of interest and for the protection of bidders.

By rejecting the lease, the legislature and the governor have demonstrated they are alert to this particular transaction. They should go further and reform the whole range of laws that enable state agencies to discharge public business in secret.

The race track lease is only one symptom of an abuse not limited to an agricultural district board.

Self-Taught Safety Plan for Boaters

ACCORDING to the State Harbors and Watercraft Commission, about 400,000 boats are using California waters, "indicating that boating has become one of our most popular sports."

In any event, the total is increasing fast.

One national estimate is that the number of pleasure craft in the U.S. has risen from 4,333,000 to 8 million within two years. And the trend is toward ever more powerful motors.

The net effect is to increase boating hazards, many of them arising from new and unqualified operators. Last year 1,318 persons died in boat accidents in this country and 1,555 others were injured.

Legislation has been introduced both in Congress and in the California Legislature to license power boat operators, such as auto drivers are licensed.

So far, none of the bills have been enacted. They are opposed by most boating people as well as the Coast Guard. The latter, which acts as the main enforcement and rescue agency offshore, lacks personnel for handling even these duties as efficiently as it would wish. A licensing law would be highly expensive and possibly ineffective.

The Coast Guard suggests, instead, more intensive instruction of boaters for their own safety. And the boat operators themselves must take some initiative if that is to be achieved.

One step that California enthusiasts can take is to study thoroughly the contents of a 24-page booklet issued by the State Department of Harbors and Watercraft. It is available to any boat owner upon request to the department at Sacramento.

The department also issues a number of special safety pamphlets. Fledgling boat operators who value their property as well as their lives would do well to keep the official guidance handy for use.

Butterfly New Victim of Sprawl

IF IT IS possible for a news story to be both alarming and charming, this is a fair description of the report that Miss Ivy Lemon of Massachusetts is concerned but optimistic about the decline in the butterfly population.

Miss Lemon told a conference of naturalists at Amherst that these rural creatures, so rich in color and poor in life-span, have decreased by as much as 75 per cent. But she stoutly refused to concede that they will go the way of the contrasting dinosaur, to total extinction.

Few of us expected to see the day when the survival of the butterfly would become a topic for serious study and a vigorous crusade. Apparently that time has come.

Miss Lemon blames the decline on the bulldozer. Others attribute it to the spray gun. In either case, the underlying reason is the increase in human population, which means urbanization of the countryside and the more intensive use of insecticide to grow more food for more people.

Unless people like Miss Lemon get the situation under control, it is possible that the butterfly may ultimately be found only in wildlife sanctuaries, no longer a pleasant and frequent attraction of the spaces between cities.

We hope the lady from Massachusetts rallies a successful campaign. After all, the dictionary makes the butterfly synonymous with light and brightness, two qualities also diminishing in our troubled world.

'I Don't Know if I'm Coming or Going'

The Captain Danced a Jig

JAMES KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Word came from the Pentagon last week that the venerable old battleship New Jersey will come out of mothballs and join the Seventh Fleet next year as a ship of the line. I happened to be at Pacific headquarters in Pearl Harbor when the announcement arrived. Three resident admirals hoisted smiles as bright as signal flags, and a visiting captain broke into a jig.

This is good news. The decision makes sense. It has made sense, in truth, for the past several years, but sad to say, this wise move apparently had to wait upon the retirement of Admiral David L. McDonald as Chief of Naval Operations. An able CNO in many ways, McDonald was preeminently a carrier man; he never accepted the concept of shore bombardment as a significant supplement to carrier operations.

THE NEW JERSEY will bring nine 16-inch guns to the coast of Vietnam, each of them capable of flinging a 1,900-pound projectile for more than 20 miles. It will cost $27 million to put her into action, but the sum, large as it is, has to be kept in perspective. It is no more than the cost of eight or nine Phantom fighter-bombers. Pound for pound, New Jersey will put explosives on target for a small fraction of the cost of similar carrier or Air Force operations.

Considerations of cost to one side (which is where considerations of cost have a way of winding up in Vietnam), this 45,000-ton behemoth will have two other assets working for her. One is accuracy. The other is the saving of American lives.

Techniques of naval gunnery have advanced remarkably since Spruance and Halsey were flying their flags from New Jersey in World War II. Sophisticated computers and other ingenious devices will make it possible for her guns to deliver their fire with a precision that bombers cannot approach. Some of the more voluble advocates of bombardment probably are stretching things when they say that 85 per cent of the targets now being hit in North Vietnam will fall within New Jersey's range. Even so, she will command the coastal Route 1 and its parallel rail line for 300 miles or more; she will present a constant threat to such cities as Thanh Hoa, Vinh, Thai Binh, and Nam Dinh. Some enemy movements, at least, will be forced to inland routes, over vastly more difficult terrain.

The New Jersey will become the Number One Puff in what is now tagged as Operation Seadragon—a limited program of bombardment waged by a couple of cruisers and whatever destroyers are handy. In recent months, the cruisers Providence and St. Paul have put their 8-inch guns to good use; a week or so ago, the destroyers Barney, Blue, Hubbard and Chandler, with the Australian Hobart, were lending a hand. Since October of 1966, the ships assigned to Seadragon have put 63,000 rounds ashore, damaged 1,100 targets and destroyed nearly 800 others—at a total loss of two killed and twelve wounded.

TWO OR THREE reservations ought to be voiced. The New Jersey cannot expect to sit off shore like a gray goose on some protected millpond. While the U.S. is spending ten months to get her ready, the enemy will be spending ten months in beefing up coastal batteries. The thought also crosses one's mind that the ten-month timetable provides a somber reflection of Pentagon thinking. No end to this war is remotely in sight.

It seems incredible that only a few years ago, most of the talk of weaponry centered upon the push-button concept—the ICBM's, the Polaris missiles, the satellite detectors. And now we go back to the battlewagon! As Mehitabel the Cat used to say, there is life in the old girl yet—and validity in old ideas, as well.

Well-Meant Law Seen As Woe to Poor

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Insiders at the Social Security Administration are concerned that upcoming changes in social security policies might create more hardships for the poor.

Little has been said publicly about it, but they're pointing out that proposed amendments would require welfare recipients to take jobs or training — or else.

CAPITAL CHATTER

Most affected by the change would be mothers of children on the welfare rolls. To qualify for aid-to-dependent-children relief, they would have to be enrolled in special government programs.

The new Social Security bill already has cleared the House Ways and Means Committee, and is expected to be on the House floor for debate before the end of the month. The Senate will start hearings on it next week.

The proposed bill increases by 12½ per cent the monthly benefits for retired workers — the average benefit would rise from $145 to $164; the minimum benefit from $44 to $50.

Among social security and welfare workers, there's little quarrel with the funding. But they're worried about the mother who won't — or can't — work because she wants to be with her children. They believe she's entitled to livelihood as well.

REP. JOHN McMILLAN, the South Carolina Democrat who heads the House District of Columbia Committee, may have sensed defeat last week during the debate over accepting an administration plan to reorganize the rusted machinery of the D.C. government.

After it became apparent that his arguments against the plan weren't swaying his colleagues, McMillan pulled all the stops by implying that if the plan passed, congressmen would lose many of the special privileges accorded them in the district.

"You people will even be required to get District of Columbia tags" for cars, McMillan warned.

Actually, McMillan was resorting to demogogic tactics by hinting that the reorganization plan would remove control of the District government from Congress by turning it over to the city.

Supporters of the plan reminded him that the plan does not call for home rule, just abolishes the 93-year-old three-man board of commissioners and replaces it with a single commissioner and a "broadly representative" nine-member city council. The plan was approved.

JAMES QUIGLEY, commissioner of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration, held aloft several bottles of bilious green liquid as he testified on a pilot project to restore polluted lakes before a Senate subcommittee last week.

Explaining that the bottles held samples of badly polluted water taken from lakes around the country, Quigley was taken aback when subcommittee chairman Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, reminded him that an earlier witness brought samples of water and offered to drink it.

"Yes," replied Quigley, "but he offers to drink it after and not before it's been cleaned up."

L. A. C. SAYS

Unemployment Pay for Lost Overtime

By L. A. COLLINS SR.

SOME DECISIONS by the State Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board indicate why the cost of this worthwhile program is so expensive. A recent decision provides for payments to a man who was working 40 hours a week. But because he was judged unable to work more than 40 hours he was awarded $45.30 a week for overtime he might have worked.

The man, an employe of a utility company, was injured on the job. He was paid for his time off by Workmen's Compensation Insurance. But when he went back to work he said he could not work more than the 40 hours a week. The overtime he had been receiving was then judged to be unemployment, so the unemployment insurance board awarded him that amount of unemployment insurance. This overruled the decision of an unemployment insurance referee who had denied the claim for overtime pay.

This is one more indication of why the two protection programs for workers out of a job for almost any reason has come to be a major payroll cost of doing business. If you think this applies only to employers' cost you are not realistic because any employer cost eventually is reflected in the price you pay for goods or services. In the above case it represents a part of the rates you pay for services from a utility company.

Under compensation insurance a worker is protected for on the job injuries. The cost of this insurance is paid by the employer. It has been going up at more than 5 per cent a year for the past 10 years. It is apparent it will increase at even higher rates in the future, due to the very high awards given by the courts for injuries.

Unemployment insurance is for the protection of workers who are out of a job for almost any reason. The employer cost of this has steadily increased. We have been enjoying almost full employment. The 4 per cent unemployment figure is considered about normal because it applies to many workers changing jobs and actually employed. But it also applies to many who are taking vacations and collecting unemployment insurance under various pretexts.

These are costs that come out of the pockets of every employed worker because he is contributing one per cent of a portion of his paycheck for this purpose. His employer is contributing as much as three times that amount. The fund so created is supposed to take care of unemployment compensation to the worker who through no fault of his own is deprived of a job. But no one expected that it would be construed to cover overtime for a worker who is working at good wages for the normal 40 hours a week.

In the case discussed above the question is raised: Why should this man be paid unemployment insurance for lost overtime? His injury was paid for by the compensation insurance plan. If he was to be paid additional compensation it should come from the agency covering his accident. Of course, the employer would be paying it in any case. He might be able to pass the cost on to you as the consumer. If he does not he reduces his profit, or he may be forced out of business if his rising payroll costs cause this. In that case many others will be unemployed.

It is this type of decision that is causing all such protective programs to be so costly. This decision is encouragement to others who may decide it is easier to collect unemployment checks than it is to work overtime. A lot more would welcome the opportunity to work and receive overtime pay.

IRS Checks Tax Status of 'Mafia in Overalls'

DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — An Internal Revenue task force has quietly started an investigation of the American Farm Bureau Federation, which wields such hidden power in the farm belt that it has been called "the Mafia in overalls," to determine whether it has violated its tax-exempt status.

This caused shocked disbelief at the Farm Bureau, which had been inclined to look upon itself as inviolate, in the same category as Plymouth Rock and the Statue of Liberty, properly exempt not only from taxes but from investigation.

However, the shock quickly wore off, and Internal Revenue began feeling the pressure. Hints came from pressure points on Capitol Hill that it would be wiser to forget the investigation.

As a measure of the Farm Bureau's political power, the House Agriculture Committee slapped down Rep. Joe Resnick, D-N.Y., by a 27-to-1 vote for daring to criticize the Farm Bureau. The vote came within 24 hours after Roger Fleming, the organization's secretary-treasurer wrote to the committee demanding that it adopt "a resolution in which it disassociates itself from the attacks on the Farm Bureau made by Subcommittee Chairman Resnick."

NEVERTHELESS, the T-men are checking into Resnick's charges that the Farm Bureau has abandoned its role as a farmers' organization and has become a gigantic combine of oil, chemical, fertilizer, insurance, and other businesses. This would violate the Farm Bureau's sworn statements to Internal Revenue that its members are engaged principally in activities with an agricultural purpose.

Resnick also turned over to Internal Revenue evidence that the Farm Bureau has played an active role in political campaigns in violation of its tax-exempt status. He charged, for example, that the Illinois Agriculture Association, a Farm Bureau affiliate, had used its resources to help re-elect Congressman Paul Findley, R-Ill.

Resnick produced evidence, too, that the Farm Bureau has been spreading right-wing extremist propaganda to its membership. Some of the most radical organizations in the nation, he charged, have had access to the Farm Bureau's mailing lists. Right-wing lecturers have also been featured at Farm Bureau conventions.

Resnick personally brought his evidence to Internal Revenue Commissioner Sheldon Cohen, who ordered an immediate investigation.

Note — Upon learning that a majority of the Agriculture Committee members are members of the Farm Bureau, Resnick called this to the attention of the House Ethics Committee.

THE GREEK military dictatorship, which has taken over the country where democracy was born, has launched an all-out publicity campaign to convince Americans that the new regime is exactly what the Greek people want and ordered.

G. D. Vranopoulos, information chief at the Greek Embassy in Washington, was summoned back to Athens immediately after the revolution and given a two-day briefing on how to persuade the American public.

He was then dispatched back to Wshington where he has been using the mimeograph machine and the typewriter to deluge newspapers and radio-TV stations with rosy views about the new regime, which, despite the billions of dollars of U.S. aid poured into Greece, recently voted against the United States and for Soviet Russia in the Near East showdown.

Vranopoulos can wage this propaganda campaign with sincerity, because he is the son of a police director in the Metaxis dictatorship, one of the toughest military regimes ever to rule Greece.

Vranopoulos is charming but discreet; his wife is more frank. At a Washington cocktail party she confided that Greece was not ready for democracy, that the military dictatorship was what the Greek people needed.

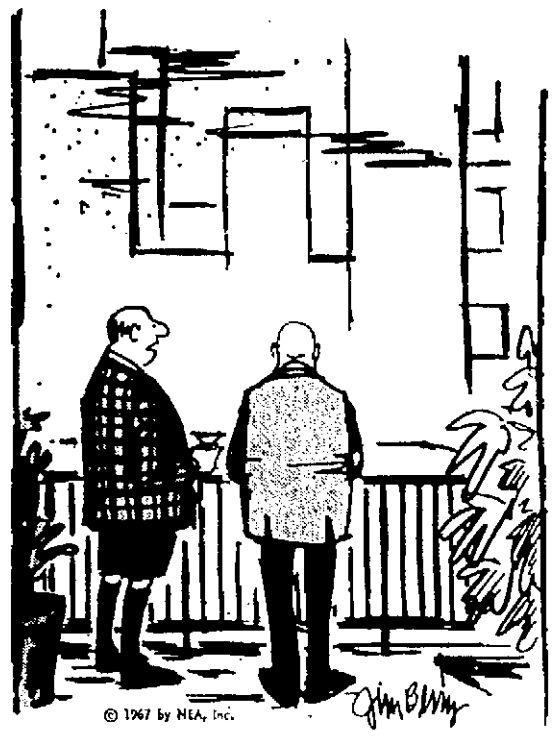

IN ORDER TO prove that the military junta is good for Greece, Vranopoulos has been telling American editors that the regime, though arresting 6,138 persons has now released 3,300.

But Vranopoulos neglected to point out that the 3,300 prisoners supposedly "released" were actually paroled after a pledge was exacted from them not to engage in political activity which might disturb the dictatorship. Technically they are still under detention and can be sent back to jail or exile if the dictatorship finds the parole rules have been violated.

Vranopoulos also tries to soothe American editors with his statement that George Papandreou, the ex-premier, is no longer a prisoner. The truth is that Papandreou has been transferred to a house where he continues to be a prisoner.

Should Atheists, Tribal Sects Guard Sepulcher?

RALPH McGILL

AN OLD FRIEND, who was an intelligent and competent man in the total pioneering of intelligence and dedication and labor that made it possible for Israel to become an independent nation in 1948 when she defeated five Arab armies, writes from Jerusalem:

"We, of course, still try to find our way in the new world — after the '6 Days in June.' We have to find our way without much guidance from outside. The only decision the U.N. produced was the one on the internationalization of Jerusalem: 99 votes for what? Who should run that city? The same set of people that was withdrawn from Sharem el Sheich, or the ones who were over-run in 'their' Government House by the Jordanians and rescued by our boys? And how would they run that city? How would they defend it, how would they feed it? Where else in the world is there an International City? Was Trieste such a success? And safeguarding the Holy Sites? Already, now we are doing better than the Jordanians during the last 19½ years. Or would it be better if some conventional atheists like Russia and good Buddhists and some believers in tribal gods from Africa would stand guard over the Church of the Holy Sepulcher?

"I wish the representatives of the 99 nations would come and join me when I drink coffee peacefully in that part of the city from where shells were lobbed into my street, six weeks ago, or join Arabs from the 'ex-other side' visiting neighbors of 20 years ago.

"What really did they think, these 99, when they wrote one more senseless decision in the name of the Community of Nations?"

THE LETTER from Jerusalem, where, in truth, there are quiet and calm, is understandingly cynical.

Under Jordan the city and the "Holy Places" were restricted. Free passage across the street from Israel's share of Jerusalem to Jordan's old Jerusalem was not possible. Jordan used the "Holy Places" for her best paying industry, tourism. It is folly to imagine that Israel would neglect or in any sense depreciate any of the Holy Places — the city was "holy" to the Jews before it was to Christians or Arabs.

Knowledgeable persons long have been cynical about the location of the Holy Places. It was not until Constantine's time that a committee sought to locate them. The Church of the Holy Sepulcher, for example, is almost certainly not properly located. The crucifixion was "outside the walls." Excavations made decades ago indicate the present site and church were within the old walls — not outside them. Christian influence and tourism hushed this discovery.

RECOMMENDATION OF an internationalized Jerusalem was an exhibition of escape from reality. Had the Arabs won, there would have been no cry for internationalization. Israel is more competent to govern and manage the city — free to all — than was Jordan.

The weakness of the U.N. recommendation was, as the letter says, that it did not suggest how the city would be governed, fed, guarded, and made viable. No international city has been a success. Those few established have been artificial stop-gaps to avert, for a time, some international pressures.

It is a paradox that the failure of 20 years of Arab aggression and pledges to destroy Israel have made the U.N. much weaker, and yet, perhaps, more necessary. U Thant, the Secretary General, destroyed much of his prestige by his quick removal of U.N. troops from the Gaza strip. No amount of explanation will erase the belief that he could, and should, have delayed the decisions with a formal U.N. request for reconsideration. The raw nature of the Arab aggression was so obvious even the General Assembly could not stomach all of it. There is a great need for the U.N. — but it cannot regain confidence by use of fantasy any more than by use of prejudice.

None Chose Color

EDITOR:

The nation-wide racial troubles could be more readily solved if everybody would remember one fact: white or black, we are all alike inside. White or black, each individual has his hopes and fears, joy and sorrow. None of us chose the color of our skin, consequently no person has a right to feel superior thereby.

I am a white man and a native of Virginia. I do not consider myself entitled to any special privileges because of this fact. What ever the color, we are all God's children, and as such we should all co-operate for our mutual betterment. The Spirit of Watts deserves world wide emulation. Who Is Them

EDITOR:

I would wonder just whom Mrs. Heatherington, in her letter published August 6, meant by "them."

Has she ever walked through the alleys in Lomita, Torrance and Harbor City? As a social worker for Los Angeles County I have and I've seen rats!

When I lived in Detroit in a "nice apartment house district" I saw rats and mice by the hundreds. And living in one of the fine old houses in New Orleans' French Quarter while on duty with the U.S. Coast Guard I found there were not one, but many, full time rat chasers employed by that city —"chasers" rather than exterminators because they never were able to keep up with the rat population explosion.

The very nice old Negro man who helped with our housework told us that while he was able to rid our apartment of roaches he knew he was just chasing them out into some other apartment. The beautiful old Monteleon Hotel was infested with rats and roaches and we SPARS generally carried a long stick as we hurried through the alleys on our way to the Custom House on Canal Street.

Any landlord will tell her the impossibility of completely exterminating all rats, mice, roaches etc. even in the NICE people's apartment buildings, and I doubt if the owners of the property she is thinking of either know or care about the varmints on the property.

Mrs. Heatherington, are you perhaps a landlord that you know so much about the conditions in "their" hopeless homes?

Was Baker Kidding?

EDITOR:

Your Thursday editorial page had an article by Russell Baker, entitled "Undercover Agitator Is Cheap Aide to Congress." Its main points were that H. Rap Brown and Stokeley Carmichael were in the hire of Congress and that those were not their real names.

I've discussed this article with several of my friends and we don't quite get it. Is this straight news or facetiousness or what?

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Baker, as is often his custom, was writing pure, if subtle satire. But, like the best satire, Baker's underscored a couple of basic truths, namely, that agitators such as Brown and Carmichael are doing nobody any good and that Congress often is on the make for excuses and an easy way out of complex challenges.

Name The Crime

EDITOR:

Your editorial on Mr. Carmichael is a good example of enlarging "the explosive forces that produce riots in the streets." Nowhere do you name a crime that he has committed or a law he has violated. Still he should be arrested. For what?

You proceed to state that the "attorney general's office has been studying methods of prosecution for many months. For what? You make it sound more like persecution than prosecution.

Now, if he should actually commit a crime it would be difficult to convince many that he wasn't being "railroaded".

In these tense times, the forces of legality should prevail. Every responsible organ should advance that principle, not incite illegality to do away with one whom you abhor.

The unfulfilled promise of "forty acres and a mule" translated into modern terms of schools, jobs and decent housing can be the answer to discontent, not only here, but in the rest of the world as well. The question today is, Are we up to it?

TRIBAL DANCES AT SCHOOLS

Cherokee and His English Wife Will Tour, Entertain

By MOLLY BURRELL

Once there was a little girl in England who was crazy about cowboy movies and she vowed, "When I grow up I'm going to America and marry a handsome Indian."

She did.

And they lived happily ever after for six years, globetrotting with a professional basketball team, performing before the great and near great of five continents the ancestral dances of the Cherokee Indians.

Today Gwen and Charlie Grey Eagle, 13361 Sorrell Dr. Garden Grove, are preparing to conquer Charlie's native land via the hearts of its children. Instead of a warpath on horseback, they'll travel freeways and parkways in a 21-foot air conditioned mobile bus, complete with bath and kitchen and an 80-pound German shepherd guard dog named Heidi. They have a three-year contract which specifies shows for millions of American school youngsters throughout the country.

* * * *

"I'M DELIGHTED with the prospects," says dancer musician-dental technician-student Charlie.

"I'm proud of my heritage, and happy to be able to convey some sense of history to schoolchildren. I'm also pleased with three months off in the summer—that means I'll be able to finish up my last year of work for a secondary teaching credential in science."

Charlie is the son of a school principal — "—one reason I was interested in making straight As in high school and getting accepted in dental school, even though I changed my mind about going there," he says. He has worked as a dental technician in Orange County between tours with the Harlem Globetrotter and appearances at Disneyland.

His English bride was adopted into the tribe when they married in 1961 and he subsequently taught her the dances which are a part of their performance. Courtship was a mixture of Cherokee romance and British determination. "I never really had a chance," Charlie sighs. "She wrote to me and I answered and she sent photos and next thing I knew I agreed to meet her, and, well, here we are."

* * * *

"I SAW HIS picture in a paper in Buffalo where I was riding in a western show, and he was so attractive I knew he was my Indian. . . . After we met he sereneaded me on an enchanting Indian love flute and I was completely smitten," says Gwen.

Charlie is one of the original longhairs, and could lay claim to launching the fad in London. "When I was in Piccadilly Circus before the Beatles, people stared and followed me around like I was really an odd specimen. Now look at the rock and roll groups and the hippies . . . Mine is for indentification with my tribe and because it is the proper wasy for a ceremonial dancer to look. Long hair is traditionally associated with bravery in most tribes."

Biggest thrills for the touring Grey Eagles were visits to Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, shows for heads of state in San Marino and Luxembourg, another for an Arabian prince, seeing Gwen's family in England, adoring fans in Japan, and a particularly warm reception in New Zealand.

One of the Maori tribesmen insisted they were related because a design on Charlies's costume is identical to the New Zealander's family symbol. "They are convinced they are descended from Indians who migrated south and drifted across the Pacific with the currents," says Charlie.

Migration for the Grey Eagles begins next month in Arkansas, just a short eagle's flight from the original Georgia-Tennessee-Carolina lands of his ancestors.

"Trend to Socialism" in Eastern U.S. Cited

By BOB GEIVET

There is a different outlook in the East on the responsibility of local governments to do for themselves, and the West may have to preach a bit about the values of independence.

That's the considered opinion of Chairman David L. Baker of the Orange County Board of Supervisors, who looked askance at what he said was the "trend toward socialism" evident in some governments in the East.

* * * *

HE SAID that "armies of thousands of public employes" in Maryland "do nothing but seek federal government handouts."

The same situation "is no doubt true elsewhere," Baker insisted, "because they look upon these things differently than we do."

Baker's comments followed hard discussion about something entirely foreign to the subject: the County Supervisors' Association of California wrote that the organization has a surplus of $12,855 and asked if there should be a dues moratorium for a year. In Orange County's case, it would eliminate a $700 dues payment for one year.

Supervisor William H. Hirstein of Orange favored the idea of a dues moratorium, but Baker opined that "maybe the money should be spent to send someone back East to explain our version of local government —and fight their trend toward socialism."

Specifically he decried "two Eastern-oriented programs the federal government is planning rent subsidies, and national standards for building codes."

Supervisors said they wouldn't decide anything right now, and set it aside for more study.

Battle Over Old Naples Span

By DON BRACKENBURY

Bridges have been the focal point of battles throughout history, and another such skirmish is scheduled Tuesday before the City Council.

This particular battle will be one of words only, and the bridge involved is a short span over Rivo Alto Canal on East Neapolitan Lane in Naples.

There actually are five bridges over the canals in Naples, but the Ravenna Drive bridge was rebuilt some years ago and is structurally sound.

THE OTHER four bridges — two on The Toledo over Rivo Alto Canal, one on West Neapolitan Lane over Naples Canal and the controversial East Neapolitan Lane span over Rivo Alto Canal — were built in 1913.

All four suffered damage in the 1933 earthquake. In 1957, the State Division of Highways, at the city's request, examined the bridges and recommended that they be restricted to loads of eight tons per vehicle or less. Since that time, they have not been open to use by busses or other heavy equipment.

* * * *

IN MAY, the City Council authorized a contract with Bole and Wilson to prepare engineering plans for the work, but, on the recommendation of city departments, directed that plans provide for replacement of all but the East Neapolitan Lane bridge.

City administrative officials had determined that access needs of the area could be "adequately met" by replacement of only three of the bridges. This also would permit a $270,000 savings.

Since that action, petitions have been circulated in Naples, both by persons favoring replacement of the East Neapolitan Lane bridge and by others opposed to such replacement.

SOME OF THE petitions are expected to be presented to councilmen Tuesday.

Residents urging replacement of the bridge contend its permanent removal would increase traffic congestion, reduce police and fire protection and decrease pedestrian access, particularly for children attending Naples Elementary School.

Residents who favor permanent removal of the span argue that the area is adequately served by direct land access, that the alleged problems of traffic congestion, police and fire protection are "exaggerated," that removal of the bridge would improve navigation on Rivo Alto Canal for 31 lots which now are blocked by the bridge and that tideland funds would be saved.

City Manager John R. Mansell said there are 42 parcels in the area which would be directly affected by removal of the bridge.

Mansell said City Engineer Jess D. Gilkerson ordered a 12-hour traffic count on East Neapolitan Lane on July 18, starting at 7 a.m.

A TOTAL OF 273 vehicles used the bridge during the period, Gilkerson said, but about 20 to 25 per cent immediately turned back, presumably because they were unfamiliar with the area and intended to go some other direction.

During the same period, Gilkerson said, the bridge was used by 234 pedestrians, about three-fourths of them children. He speculated that this large number of youngsters might have been due to the fact it was vacation time.

Mansell said the Long Beach Unified School District reported that only one child who lives in the area actually attends Naples Elementary School.

Mansell also told councilmen that the police and fire chiefs said removal of the bridge would have a "minimal" effect on their services and that changes in time or distance to reach the affected area if the bridge was permanently removed "would not be of consequence."

The city manager agreed, however, that permanent removal of the East Neapolitan Lane bridge would limit access to certain properties.

"While such limitation may not be severe, admittedly the affected property owners will be deprived of vehicular and pedestrian access which they have enjoyed for many years," Mansell said.

He advised councilmen to consider the matter of "public convenience" as an important factor in their decision on whether to replace the East Neapolitan Lane bridge along with the three others.

'Rainmaker' Precipitates Flood of Joy in Anaheim

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

I groaned inwardly when a teen-age orchestra soured a few notes in the overture to "110 in the Shade," one of three shows in Anaheim's ambitious summer musical repertory program.

When opening scenes were static, and there was evidence some of the principals needed more drill time with their lines, I whispered to my wife, "We'll go at intermission."

Yet when that break came I was hooked and couldn't leave — even to escape cool night breezes whistling through Katella High School's amphitheatrish outdoor theater.

* * * *

SOMEWHERE at midpoint in the first act, this adaptation of "The Rainmaker" had taken on cohesion and vitality, become thoroughly enjoyable.

When the closer came, a reprise of the show's finest production number, "The Rain Song," I was applauding as loudly as the rest.

There is an enormous vitality to the show which becomes apparent as it progresses. There are first-rate talents on stage, including Ellie Swindell and Thor Nielsen, whose performances were comparable to their very fine "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off" last year.

Another excellent voice was displayed by James Chapman, whose sheriff's role has been improved upon in the transition of play into musical. Teenage Alan Mokler proved a competant young scent stealer in dealings with the able Bernard Simon, Douglas Wood and Karen Penlick.

* * * *

DANCERS and townspeople in the production number were Robert Andersen, Bonnie Brown, Randall Cobb, Bob Fitzsimmons, Ed Hollinsworth, Darlene Hustead, Kathleen Melcher, Michael Melcher, Barbara Rome, Jayne Hamil; Lawrence Bishop, Gwenda Deacon, Chris Carol, Judy Elmblad, Richard Gould, Michelle Hamilton, Whitten Hamilton, Paul McKay, Alyson Reed, Steve Simons, Judy Simpson, Shirley Lou Tyler, David Van Houten and Robert Vaught.

Don Rickner directed, and production staffers were Hanley Jackson, musical director; Sandra Matthews, vocal director; Kathleen Melcher and Norma Hamilton, choreography, and Donald Rickner, designer.

The book by original playwright N. Richard Nash, recounts the trials and tribulations of marrying off potential old maid Lizzie Curry in the Nebraska of a generation past. Drought afflicts the land and a charismatic rainmaker is hired to bring moisture — which he does in Anaheim's most unusual closing.

* * * *

LIZZIE'S problems, of course, are solved along the way.

Because the wind is brisk and slat seats hard in the theater, jackets, sweaters and a cushion are recommended.

A complete schedule for repeats of "110 in the Shade" and its companions, "Oliver" and "Carnival," will be found in the "Living Theater's column which appeared Thursday in The Independent and Press-Telegram. Or a call to the sponsoring Anaheim Parks and Recreation Department will get it.

No U.S. Movies Scheduled for Venice Festival

VENICE, Italy (AP)—The 28th Venice Film Festival will show 15 films from six nations — Aug. 26-Sept 8 — But the United States will not be represented, organizers announced Saturday.

Italy was the biggest contributor with five films, including Lucchino Visconti's movie version of the Albert Camus novel "The Stranger."

France came next, with four films. The European Communist countries had representation with a film from Hungary, another from Czechoslovakia and a third from Yugoslavia.

The Americans claim that in recent years, outstanding U.S. entries have been snubbed and films showing the U.S. in a bad light have been favored.

MOVIES NEVER SEEN

007 Club Thrives; Bond a Hero to Indonesians

By RICHARD I. STONE

JAKARTA (UPI) — A car slices through the silent, sticky night air down a darkened Jakarta street, pulls into a narrow alleyway and comes to a screeching halt in front of a one-story stucco house.

A young man steps out and walks to the door. He is dressed in a smartly tapered dark silk suit. He draws a cigarette from his gun-metal case and raps on the door.

A dark-skinned girl in black tights and red leather boots opens the door just wide enough to see the night visitor. Her eye catch the glare of bright metal, the silent man's belt buckle. It says 007.

She escorts him into the house — to blaring electric guitar music and a perspiring throng wiggling the watusi and the monkey.

Thus the monthly meeting of the Jakarta 007 Club begins

The James Bond phenomenon has come to Jakarta and it has come big, even though Indonesians have never seen a James Bond movie.

James Bond is more than a fictional spy to Indonesian youth. He is a symbol of the outside world. He represents Beatle music, monkey dancing, sleek sports cars, jazz and sex.

One in every 10 automobiles has Bond's code number, 007, emblazoned on its rear bumper or rear window. Teen-age boys and young men wear 007 belt buckles.

A new underground movement in Indonesia is known as the Jakarta 007 Club. Its members are young people and they meet once a month at a member's house when the moon is full.

* * * *

EACH MALE MEMBER has the 007 emblem affixed to his car or motor scooter, leans to tight slacks, pointed-toed shoes, long hair and wrap-around sun glasses. The girls favor miniskirts or stretchpants.

Meetings are likely to begin with rocking electric guitar renditions of ppu movie themes. They are played in the electric bass-thumping, drum-pulsating rhythmic idiom of modern Jakarta.

Magazine cutouts of Sean Connery adorn the bedrooms of the boy and girl members, who also contribute to a booming underground market in bond books. Book pirates are getting fat on James Bond.

The books were banned in Indonesia when the Communist Party was strong. Now they are being in- Now they are being increasingly translated in Bahasa Indonesian. Since Indonesia does not adhere to international copyright laws, the books are sold in the open and can be seen on every street corner.

EARL WILSON

'Cabaret' Star Lotte Lenya, 66, Defends Young

NEW YORK — "I think Edith Piaf was the first one to marry a young husband, and then there was me, and then there was Sybil Burton," Lotte Lenya said.

Sitting in Sardi's the other dinner time, Miss Lenya, now 66, was enjoying her great success in "Cabaret." A new caricature of her had just been completed to be hung among the great at Sardi's. The caricaturist had slightly exaggerated her nose and chin.

"I look like Tammy Grimes and Carol Burnett," she commented. "I'm glad I got married before this caricature was finished, or I never would have."

Miss Lenya, the widow of Kurt Weill and editor George Davis, is now married to the painter Russell Detwiler, 26 years her junior. When he was asked once about marrying somebody 26 years older, he said:

"I am not marrying a passport. I love her."

* * * *

ALTHOUGH Miss Lenya approves of face-lifts for the great professional beauties, she says, "For myself, maybe 10 years from now — but I worked so hard to get these wrinkles, I want to keep them!"

"Face-lifting doesn't make you young. It's your attitude." She drives a red Jaguar and uses false eyelashes and loves miniskirts.

"They're cute but I wouldn't be caught in one of them—I'm too smart!"

And this roused her to a defense of the young. "The Long Look, the so-called New Look of some years ago, was just as shocking," she said. "And what are the kids of today doing that is really so wild? Think of the Romans and their orgies."

"Cabaret" is for Miss Lenya a poignant experience. In 1920, she left Vienna for Berlin — "it was every actor's dream to have a career in Berlin" — and eventually met and fell in love with Kurt Weill though they didn't marry for a few years.

* * * *

FORTY YEARS later came an opportunity to retell that story she saw unfolding in Germany when she was a young wife.

"At first," she said, "it made me sick to look at the swastika on stage . . ."

And the show was a smash hit, and her performance is acclaimed, and life is very good, and besides there's the young husband.

Women have asked her whether it's difficult to hold a husband 26 years younger.

"The age of the husband doesn't matter if he loves you," she replies. "I've always been lucky that way."

At her age Miss Lenya isn't concerned about new styles in acting. A well-known actress was discussing with her a scene in which she had to cross 5th Ave.

"What is my motivation in crossing the street?" the other actress asked Miss Lenya.

"You're just trying to beat the traffic and not get killed, that's all!" she said.

Lafayette Bell Captain Readies for Another Passing

FACING EVICTION from their jobs as another hotel goes out of business are Paul Grantham (left) bell captain, and Jimmy Chase, one of his crew of five at the Lafayette Hotel. Lobby of the hotel, scheduled to shut Sept. 3, is quiet as they carry up a few bags.

—Staff Photo

By VINT MADER

While the death of a hotel is nothing new to Paul Grantham, he has found the pace of their passing a little fast in recent years.

Grantham, bell captain at the doomed Lafayette Hotel, recently went through a similar demise of his job in 1963 at the old Breakers International Hotel when owner Fred Miller folded its operation in the face of losses.

He has seen hotels come and go in the 45 years since he started in the business at the old Kennebec Hotel at Ocean Boulevard and Pacific Avenue.

THOUGH THE DECADES have advanced him to age 62 when the disappearance of a job is not a light matter, Paul has developed, along with a shock of silvered hair and the polished mien of a veteran hotelier, a philosophic view of the hazards of innkeeping.

"I'm not too concerned for myself — and I'll pretty soon be ready to retire anyway," reflected Grantham, of 150 12th St., Seal Beach, in an interview in the quiet Lafayette lobby.

"But I've got a good five-man crew working for me here," he said. "They'll all be out at the same time, and I hope they'll make out all right, too."

In Paul's career he has seen some hotels revived after death, the Breakers is operating again under the shorter name and a new ownership, and at the location of the old Kennebec the Abode is now functioning.

However, some disappeared utterly — like the old Virginia on W. Ocean Boulevard where he worked from 1924 until its end in 1932.

That one, Paul recalled, was simply razed to the ground by its owner, Samuel K. Ridge, who watched the ravages ofthe depresion shatter the guest list while unable to budge city authorities on property tax concessions.

Chatting with Paul about their years of organizing baggage, seeking taxis and generally helping hotel guests was Jimmy Chase, one of Paul's bellmen who was likewise at the breakers when it closed. Jimmy, of 5743 Lanai St., has been in hotel work since 1939.

Surveying the ups and downs of the years, the recognized the closing of the Lafayette, which will convert to residential apartment hotel operation after Sept. 3, as a serious blow in the city's life as well as their own.

However, from their vantage point, they still see the desirability of Long Beach as a resort and convention mecca that can support a good hotel operation and needs it.

"A lot of people would like to stay in a real hotel," commented Jimmy. "A motel will never be able to do everything for its guests that a real hotel can."

Especially for conventions, the hotel must be modern, efficient and convenient for meetings, they recognized.

They saw as ideal a proposed 500-room hotel to be built in conjunction with the projected Long Beach Arena convention center.

"That's just what we need — a good clean hotel with reasonable rates to take care of both convention and commercial trade," said Paul.

Cerritos to Present Fifth Swim Capade

The fifth annual Swim Capade, presented by the Cerritos Communities Pool for the Handicapped Inc., will be held next Saturday at 1 p.m. in the pool at Long Beach's Lafayette Hotel.

More than 100 youngsters, both handicapped and normal students at the Cerritos pool, will perform with international aquatic stars. Evelyn Dempsey du-Pont, originator of the Cerritos pool for the handicapped, will give an 8-month-old baby his first swimming lesson.

ON INSPECTION Adm. Willard J. Smith, commandant of the U.S. Coast Guard and its only four-star admiral, arrived in Long Beach Saturday to inspect Southland Coast Guard facilities. Among units he will visit is world's largest icebreaker, the Coast Guard Cutter Glacier.

King-Spock Ticket Discussion Slated

Discussion of a Dr. Martin Luther King-Dr. Benjamin Spock presidential ticket is on the agenda of a town hall-type meeting of the Long Beach Community for New Politics (CNP) at 8 tonight in Unitarian Church, 5450 Atherton St.

The local unit is a part of CNP's statewide campaign to qualify a Peace and Freedom Party for the 1968 June primary ballot. Such qualification requires either registration of 67,000 voters or 670,000 signatures on petitions for the proposed party.

Long Beach CNP, 3046 E. Seventh St., has been active since June with its orientation toward local issues and problems, according to members Saul Stolzberg and Tom Foley.

Stolzberg said the group is not a protest movement "but rather a positive political organization . . . willing to cooperate with all other political groups working toward the same goals." He said the organization is open to all who are interested in participating.

Eight Scouts Back From Jamboree

Eight Long Beach-area Boy Scouts have returned from the 12th World Jamboree in Idaho impressed with the method of gaining greater international understanding.

All are Eagle Scouts and earned the scouting Adventure Award at the gathering, which drew 13,000 youths from 100 nations to the rugged lake country of Farragut State Park.

Bill Baker, Denny Grandle, Mel Markham, Greg Phillips, James Rottman and Jim Tomlinson, all of Long Beach, and Gary Robinett and Steve Schweitzer of Lakewood returned this week.

The boys, who also visited Seattle, Wash. and Vancouver, B.C., on the 17-day trip, are available to tell of the Jamboree at meetings of civic clubs and community groups, according to the Long Beach BSA Council.

Finals Set Today in Music Festival

Final competition in the sixth annual Southwestern Youth Music Festival will be held at 7:30 p.m. today in the auditorium of Long Beach City College, 4901 E. Carson St.

The program, which will feature performances by first-place winners, is open to the public. There is no charge.

Awards will be presented in categories of young artist finals, artist ensemble, chamber music and "pops" division.

President LaVoy Halle of the Southwestern Youth Music Festival announced Saturday that Greg Allen, a San Diego pianist, won first place in the amateur championship finals.

Other winners were Michael Gallup of Long Beach, voice, second place; Ken Ishii of Los Angeles, cello, third place; and Susan Svercek of Pasadena, piano, fourth place.

In the mixed-strings category, Jeff Bonnanberg of Long Beach, a classical guitarist, was first. Honorable mentions went to Karen Yarmat, North Hollywood, voice; John Schiavo, Los Angeles, string bass; and Kay Roby, Long Beach, voice.

Cash winners also will perform in later concerts with the Long Beach Philharmonic Orchestra.

Burglars Get $1,000 at Market

Crowbar-carrying burglars who pried open doors at a Long Beach market Saturday escaped with more than $1,000 in cash and 12 bottles of liquor.

Officer C. S. Roberson said the prowlers hid inside McCoy's Market, 4232 E. Anaheim St., until the store was closed, then pried open an office door.

They took the money from cash drawers inside, police said, then took liquor from nearby shelves.

Officers said the burglars jammed a paper match between a grocery receiving door and a burglar alarm button to keep the alarm from sounding when they fled through the door.

Total loss was $1,080, police said.

Noise Annoys, Ask $1.6 million

REDWOOD CITY (AP) — A West San Mateo couple, kept awake night after night by construction noise, wants $1.6 million recompense.

Attorney Norman I. Book Jr. and his wife, Judith Ann, filed suit in San Mateo County Superior Court. They named as defendants the builders of a three-mile tunnel project at Crystal Springs.

The Books' home is only 400 yards from the center of the project.

20,398 Reds Defect in Viet

SAIGON (AP) — The number of Communist defectors who turned themselves in last week brought the total this year to 20,398 — exceeding the total for all of 1966, officials said today.

Last week's total number of defectors included 260 military, 99 nonmilitary and 30 "other elements," for a total of 398.

TOWN'S OFFICIAL GREETER

The Duke Bends a Catalina Palm

Some say the Duke of Catalina is the reason why one of the towering palm trees that adorns the island's central beach area leans so far toward sea.

The story goes the Duke landed on Santa Catalina Island in 1934 and immediately filed squatter rights to the batch of sand beneath the tall palm.

He uses the tree as the president of a large industrial firm would an overstuffed swivel chair in his office.

"See the oil spot where I lean against it," the Duke beams. "It kind of leaned with me."

"Yeah I saw it grow up, you might say," he says nostalgically. Seconds later he flashes his same wide grin that is immortalized on countless Island postcards, to some tourists lingering nearby.

"HOWDY NEIGHBOR," he says. The people smile. Now they can walk on. They've seen the Duke.

"Shall we set into my office," the Duke asks, pointing to the straw mat at the base of the palm tree. Here the Duke has spent thousands of hours, entertaining thousands of visitors.

The Duke (I got one name—why do I need another?) is to Catalina what "Greeter" Eiler Larsen is to Laguna Beach, a living legend.

The bald, bronze islander who claims to be on the sunny side of 60, looks like a cross between Yul Brynner and Mr. Clean. As a movie extra, he has doubles as Brynner and served as the original Mr. Clean.

The Duke came to Catalina as a golf caddy. Later he joined the lifeguard crew and finally became the town's official greeter, leading the islanders in songs as the daily steamer arrived from the mainland.

"Ah," sighs the Duke, "that was something to really see. They stopped it a couple of years ago and it took something away from the island. I don't feel we are giving our visitors their money's worth and that is why they aren't coming like they used to.

"We have the potential here to become the most famous seaside resort but I don't feel we are tapping that potential."

He is interrupted by a passerby who asks when he is going to buy the island.

"When the man leaves, the Duke smiles.

THE DUKE OF CATALINA . . . Reigns as Town's Official Greeter

"That's one of the reasons I like it here," he says.

He looks down at the toy pink elephant which shares his "office."

"What's the significance of the elephant," asks a woman tourist.

The Duke laughs.

What elephant—his eyes are twinkling—"You sure you're not seeing anything."

Years ago, it was a real seal who served as his conversation piece.

"He'd (the seal) walk around town with me. Go out and greet the steamer. He'd show up early every morning go for swims during the day and sometimes even would spend the night in my bathtub," The Duke said.

Once more he is interrupted — this time by a Crescent Avenue businessman.

"Holding court again, Duke?" he queries.

The Duke smiles.

"And you ask me why I like this town," he says.

Designer Loans His 'New' Cord

Gordon M. Beuhrig of Laguna Hills, the man who designed the Cord front-drive luxury car of 1936 and who took delivery of the first custom-made revival model in 1965, has loaned his car to the Swigert Automotive Museum in Huntingdon, Penn.

Beuhrig watched this week while his car was crated for shipment to the museum where, he said, it will remain on display "for an indefinite time."

A Tulsa custom car works took orders on specially built Cords but ceased production after more than a year.

BEUHRIG SAID that the Tulsa plant had to suspend because of "high production costs" but expects to reorganize and reenter the field.

It scaled down the original Cord to eight-tenths the size of the model Beuhrig designed for Errett Lobban Cord, automotive financier who tried unsuccessfully to stave off financial collapse of the expensive Auburn and Deusenberg cars during the Depression days of the early 1930's.

Now that they are no longer made, the Auburn, Cord and Deusenberg cars are considered "classics" for automobile buffs. The revived Cord may eventually become a collector's item, Beuhrig believes. Now retired, Beuhrig lives at 100-R Via Estrada.

Lee Martin, in charge of the development, said that the financing is by a group of investors from Los Angeles. One of them is Bill Dana, a television personality, who will entertain at the groundbreaking ceremony.

Death Penalty to End?

By DONALD U. REED

SAN QUENTIN (UPI) — "About the only way to put it is that 'a state of cautious optimism' exists on death row. You can bet all 60 men will be listening to the radio for the news next week."

The remark came from Warden Louis E. Nelson of the grey-walled prison north of San Francisco — scene of the only execution this year in the nation.

A federal judge has indicated he would make an early ruling on a state request to dismess a blanket stay of execution in a suit challenging California's capital punishment laws.

"Many of the men," the warden said, "feel that there will be no executions for many months because of the suit. And, I suppose all hope there is a chance the death penalty will be abolished."

* * * *

THE CALIFORNIA suit, plus a similar case in Florida involving 51 condemned prisoners, are regarded as providing the groundwork for elimination of the death penalty in all states. Determination of the case most likely will have to come from the U.S. Supreme Court.

The assault on the death penalty has been spearheaded by the NAACP legal defense fund and the American Civil Liberties Union. Chief defense counsel for both cases is Prof. Anthony G. Amsterdam of the University of Pennsylvania.

Federal Judge Robert Peckham issued his stay of execution in San Francisco last month. The Florida case came a few days later before Federal Judge William McRae in Jacksonville.

Last Wednesday, Amsterdam successfully argued for extension of a moratorium on executions in Florida and then flew to San Francisco for arguments the following day before Peckham. The jurist said he probably would rule early next week.

* * * *

"IT WOULD BE incredibly callous to vacate the stay and let some of these men go to their deaths," Amsterdam told the jurist, "If they're not represented, which would occur if you do not allow this to be a class action."

Amsterdam's reference to McRae's decision to give ACLA attorneys permission to interview men held in Florida's death row, triggered a fiery argument from California Asst. Atty. Gen. Robert Granucci.

Granucci argued the attempt to make the suit "a class action," one in which all death row convicts are covered by the same ruling, "is unjustified and unwarranted and only an attempt to turn it into a Chessman case multiplied by 60."

For 12 years, redlight bandit Caryl Chessman battled to avoid San Quentin's apple-green gas chamber. The kidnap-rapist who never took a life authored a best-seller about his crimes and legal attempts against the death penalty.

Chessman went to his death in 1960. His record for stays still is unmatched in spite of subsequent U.S. Supreme Court rulings that opened new avenues of appeals for condemned prisoners.

* * * *

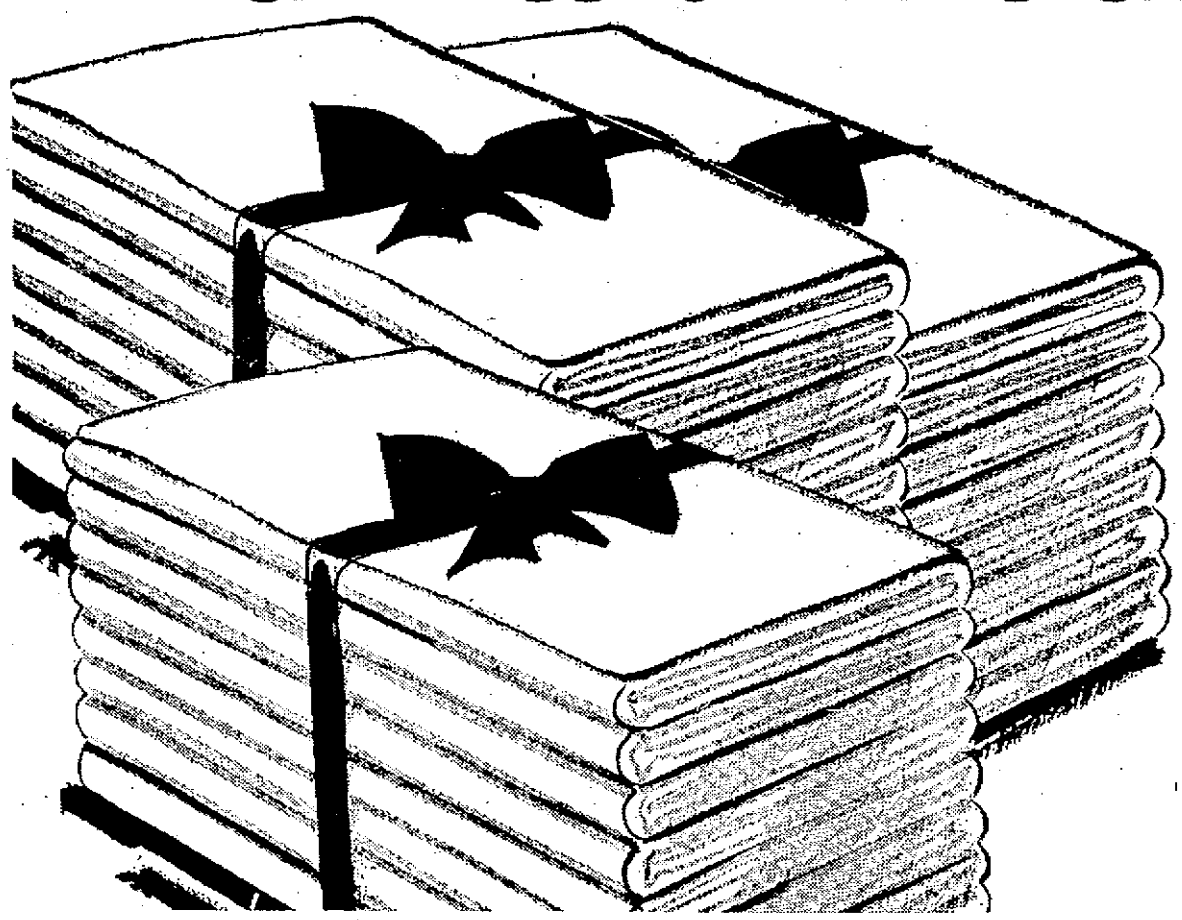

AN UNOFFICIAL moratorium on executions in California existed from early 1963 until last April 12 when a husky Negro, Aaron Mitchell, was executed in San Quentin for slaying a policeman. Within minutes after his death, another attempt to abolish capital punishment came before the State Legislature.

But abolition proposals were quickly rejected by a Senate committee. And legislative leaders even announced opposition to letting voters decide whether to repeal the death penalty.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

If an organization could be characterized by one word, the salespeople of Joe T. Warren Realty, Inc., 5511 Stearns St., would agree that the word is SERVICE! Joe Warren, broker, has always believed that the foundation of any successful company is service to its clients.

Mr. Warren entered the real estate business in 1954 as a salesman and soon learned that genuine concern for clients culminated in sales. After about seven years as a salesman, Joe became a broker and opened an office on Los Coyotes Diagonal. His volume of business expanded rapidly and he soon acquired two additional offices, one in Orange County.

In 1964, Mr. Warren opened a new and attractive office in the Los Altos Shopping Center. At present all the business of the firm is transacted here with a dedicated and loyal sales force.

Joe's selling talents were put to work at an early age when he worked as a salesman to help finance his college education. He attended the University of Texas, but graduated from the University of Missouri at Columbia, where he was affiliated with the A.T.O. fraternity.

Born and reared in Texas, Joe not only retains a taste for southern cooking, but fancies himself somewhat of a chef; barbecues, cornbread and old-fashioned southern style beans cooked with plenty of salt pork being his forte. Many an outdoor patio party at his home takes on the flavor of Texas when Joe serves up his special Texas fare to his friends.

Joe's family consists of his wife, Avalon, librarian at the Bay Shore branch library; a daughter, Mrs. Jane Stone, wife of Lt. Commander Donald Stone of Norfolk, Va.; a son, Tom, who teaches at Laguna Beach, and three delightful grandchildren. With the latter much of his spare time is spent. Coming off second best are reading, puttering around the house, golf and traveling.

This month the Warrens will be flying to Europe for a two-month vacation, visiting friends in Germany; cruising to the Canary Islands, picking up a new car and visiting parts of the continent missed on previous trips.

Viet Heats Up—In the Air and Politically

American pilots finally got the OK and went after the most important bridge in North Vietnam. The United States Command said they wrecked it, four hits dropping the center span into the river at Hanoi.

The bridge, carrying both highway and rail tracks, runs north out of Hanoi as the key link to Red China. Night and day, but mostly by night, it had carried vital war goods into Hanoi for movement south.

Hanoi radio blared that the attack was "a new and extremely serious escalation" of the war, and claimed three planes shot down.

IN SAIGON, POLICE ANNOUNCED they smashed a Viet Cong terror ring and arrested two of the leading Communist bomb experts shortly before they could blow up a downtown American military billet where some of the highest ranking officers live and eat.

Three bombs were scheduled to be planted at the Rex Hotel, next to the building housing the U.S. Mission's public affairs office, during the lunch hour. Police said they could have killed and injured literally hundreds of Americans and Vietnamese civilians who lounge in a small adjacent park.

The Vietnamese police sweep netted 30 Viet Cong terrorists, police said, including Nguyen Van Sum, 36, commander of one of the Communist's most elite sabotage units, who masterminded the 1965 My Canh floating restaurant bombing which killed 43 persons and injured 81 others.

IN THE BATTLE FOR South Vietnam's freedom, U.S. officials reported last week that 12,576 Americans have died, 75,882 have been wounded and 700 are missing since this nation became involved in 1961.

THE POLITICAL WARS in South Vietnam, leading up to the presidential election Sept. 3, became hotter as the date approached. The seven civilian candidates stopped campaigning, protesting what they called the military government's "tyranny." They said the military government was trying to make sure a military candidate won, and the seven went on strike to force "an end to harassment."

They said they would not campaign until the ruling military junta guarantees them transportation, crowds and security and stops intimidating prospective voters.

Asked if he would sign a statement making such a guarantee, which the candidates have requested, Premier Nguyen Cao Ky replied, "No sir, I have nothing to answer." Ky, an air force general, is the running mate of Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, an army general.

THE CAMPAIGN trouble developed when the civilian candidates started off on a joint tour of 22 cities in 22 days in two military transport planes provided by the government. When they arrived at their first stop in Quang Tri, just below the demilitarized zone, there was no one there to meet them.

Before the province chief could get an automobile to the airport, the enraged candidates ha dflown back to Saigon. A crowd of 1,000 waited under a broiling sun in Quang Tri for five 1,000 waited under a broiling sun in Quang Tri for five hours before being told the candidates would not appear.

The civilian candidates claimed the government had sabotaged their tour.

AS THE U.S. CONGRESS expressed increasing fears of a rigged election, Premier Ky invited Congress to send a delegation of observers. No thanks, said Congress.

Said Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield: "This is South Vietnam's business, not ours."

Said Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen: "If we did anything of that kind, the losers in the election would be certain to blame Congress for their defeat and to contend that the election had been rigged."

Another American official commented: "The Vietnamese are showing their unerring instinct for self-destruction again."

THE NATION

At the height of the Detroit riots, President Lynden B. Johnson named an Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders to probe causes and recommend curatives. The commission's report is not due until next July, but last week it fired off three quick recommendations: in immediate and substantial increase in the number of Negroes in the National Guard and the Air National Guard; speedy improvements in riot control training for the Guard, and thorough review of procedures used for appointing and promoting Guard officers.

The reason: Negroes make up only slightly more than 1 per cent of the National Guard and 0.6 per cent of the Air National Guard, and the summer unrest in the nation's cities had shown deficiencies in Guard training for handling crowds. President Johnson immediately sent the report over to Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara with the notation: "As you are well aware, this is a matter of the highest urgency and I know you will give it your immediate attention."

THE HOUSE PASSED by a vote of 377 to 23 a bill that would make block federal grants available to states to be used as they pleased to improve law enforcement agencies, but stressing riot control. It was a drastic revision of a bill introduced by President Johnson that he called an anticrime measure.

The Senate Friday ordered a $150,000 investigation of racial rioting. Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., who will preside over the inquiry, said, "Take our word for it, there is nothing related to rioting, unrest or disorders that will not be investigated."

IN DETROIT, TWO POLICEMEN were arrested and charged with the murder of two young Negroes in a motel during the Detroit rioting. The Negroes had been described at the time as "snipers" but an investigation was launched after it was determined the Negroes had been shot at close range. Reports of other similar shootings are being investigated.

THE LABOR DEPARTMENT report showed unprecedented strength: more Americans at work in July than in any other month in history; a summer flood of 3.6 million young jobseekers absorbed without any increase in unemployment; unemployment dropping a shade, from 4 per cent to 3.9 per cent of the labor force; total number of people at work 76.2 million, a record and up 1.6 million from a year earlier; average work week rising from 40.2 hours to 40.3.

A CONGRESSMAN CONFIRMED last week he had kept for his personal use $11,000 raised in a 1965 testimonial dinner in his honor. He is Rep. Thaddeus J. Dulski, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Post Office Committee.

When the dinner came to light and kicked up a fuss, there was some talk about impropriety.

"I've done nothing wrong," said Dulski.

"Mr. Dulski has said he has done nothing wrong," said House Speaker John McCormack. "I believe Mr. Dulski. He is an honorable man and trustworthy gentleman and a highly respected legislator."

THE SENATE VOTED 56 to 26 to prohibit export-import loans to nations furnishing goods or supplies to North Vietnam, a move that could affect 18 Allied nations. It defeated by a vote of 48 to 40 a proposal to impose a ban on export-import financing of arms sales to underdeveloped nations.

THE NATIONAL STUDENT ASSOCIATION (NSA) said it is being given title to its Washington headquarters building by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) as part of an agreement to sever completely the student group's association with the spy agency.

NSA President W. Eugene Groves told a news conference that under the title transfer, NSA will assume mortgage payments.

NSA in turn will acquire equity of $70,000 which CIA paid directly to the building contractor, Groves said.

Groves said the transaction was negotiated after public disclosure last February that NSA and dozens of other private organizations had received extensive covert support from CIA.

Groves said the disclosure that NSA had received secret financial support from CIA from 1952 through 1966 "has not damaged us because we made a prompt, firm admission of the relationship and a clean break."

"In a sense we were disgusted over our past association," he said.

THE WORLD

Southeast Asia is not the only part of the world plagued by armed conflict. Two nations in Africa, The Congo and Nigeria, are torn by rebellion.

The Congo has appealed to United Nations Security Council members for aid to maintain order in the face of alleged plans for subversion from the neighboring Portuguese territory of Angola. It did not ask for a council meeting.

In a letter to Roger Seydoux, president of the Security Council, Foreign Minister Justin Bomboko of The Congo said aircraft that had belonged to the former premier, Moise Tshombe, were at Luanda, Angola, and that "a number of former mercenaries," also had been there since July 21.

Bomboko said such actions were "in flagrant contradiction" to Security Council resolutions that called on member governments not to allow their territories to be used for subversive activities against The Congo.

In Bukavu, white mercenaries created a "save the nation's government of The Congo, headed by Congolese Col Leonard Monga.

Monga announced that he would give Congolese President Joseph Mobutu just 10 days to resign and free Tshombe, who is being held in Algiers for extradition to The Congo.

FEDERAL AND REBEL TROOPS in Nigerias five-week-old civil conflict have been ordered by their commanders to drop self-imposed restraints and fight an unlimited war.

An announcement in Lagos said Maj. Gen. Yakubu Gowon, head of the federal military government, instructed his forces "to carry out full-scale military operations against the revel forces wherever they are." The statement also quoted the commander in chief as ordering "an all-out drive until the rebellion is completely stamped out" and adding "no mercy will be shown to the revel clique and their collaborators anywhere."

The federal escalation followed a radio speech by the head of the eastern government saying the secessionists "shall not relent until every single enemy soldier in Biafran soil is destroyed, more territories liberated and the enemy vanquished."

Chukwuemeka Odumegwu Ojukwu, who was military governor of the eastern region when he declared it the Republic of Biafra on May 30, also said his regime had "been compelled to step up the offensive because of attempts by outsiders to aid the enemy."

SUDDENLY THERE SEEMED to be a break in the clouds. Ambassador William Foster departed hurriedly from Washington for Geneva, where talks have been going on for months with the Soviet Union on a nonproliferation treaty for atomic weapons.

The word was unclear, but hopeful, that the Russians had unexpectedly shown an inclination to come to an agreement. Foster said merely: "We are in the process of the final solution of the problem."

Clashes between Mao's followers and those opposed to the Chinese leader have been reported in various parts of the country.

Is Stanky Feeling the Pressure Now?

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI) — Did Eddie Stanky's use of Gary Peters in relief Thursday night make him too tired to be effective as a starter Saturday?

No one will ever know how Stanky feels about it.

After Stanky pulled Peters in the sixth inning and the White Sox lost to the Twins, 6-2, Saturday (game story on next page), UPI reporter Richard McFarland went down to the dressing room and asked Stanky if he felt the relief job hurt Peters against the Twins.

"What?" Stanky exclaimed.

McFarland repeated the question and told Stanky he'd been asked by UPI's baseball desk in New York to ask him the question.

"Let me talk to them then," Stanky barked.

So McFarland went to the phone in the dressing room and called New York and put Stanky on the phone. The question was asked again and Stanky fumed:

"It's none of your (censored) business."

He added, "I'm not going to tell you a (censored) thing; now what do you want to know?"

"What can I ask you when you say you're not going to say anything?" Stanky was asked on the phone.

"That's right. I'm not going to tell you a (censored) thing," Stanky said and hung up the phone.

Stanky then turned to McFarland and said, "I suppose now you're going to get fired."

"I hope not," McFarland replied. Stanky then said, "Well, you can come to work for me then."

Of course, McFarland isn't worrying about his job—but then Stanky would be the last man he'd want to work for anyway.

Stanky's temper tantrum was rather normal for the Chicago manager, who seems to be intent on losing friends and influencing enemies.

The fact that Chicago's lead was cut to a half-game by the second straight loss to the Twins didn't help his temper, either.

Stanky gambled by using Peters in relief Thursday night for the first time this season to strike out Norm Cash with the bases loaded and two out in the eighth inning to preserve a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Stanky then came back with Peters as a starter Saturday even though he pitched 7 1-3 innings against the Tigers Tuesday night. Last year Stanky used Peters in relief on June 7 and he lost his next three starts.

Stanky will send Joe Horlen against the Twins today in a battle for first place.

But Stanky didn't get around to saying when Peters will pitch again.

SHORT YARDAGE FOR RAM

Stampede by Rams, Win 20-6

By AL LARSON

The Dallas Cowboys came prepared to start what they hoped would be another rocket ride to the top of the NFL's Eastern Division, but the Rams had other ideas Saturday night.

With Roman Gabriel directing a balanced ground and air attack and coach George Allen's defensive assassins keeping constant pressure on the cowboys' quarterback triumverate of Don Meredith, Jerry Rhome and Craig Morton, the Rams registered a shocking 20-6 upset.

A Coliseum turnout of 57,595 saw the Rams strike for a touchdown in the opening quarter on Willie Ellison's four-yard run, add another six - pointer on Gabriel's 14-yard pass to Henry Dyer in the third period and lock up their second successive preseason game when Bruce Gossett kicked two field goals in the final period.

Meanwhile, the Cowboys, dubbed the fastest team in football in 1966, couldn't get untracked once they moved into scoring territory and had to settle for Mac Percival's two field goals.

"No first game should be that bad," Cowboy coach Tom Landry said in disgust afterward.

"It was a real comedy. I thought I was going to go through the whole game without seeing one bright spot. Thankfully, our rookie back from Georgia Tech, Craig Baynham, got in one good run (33-yard pass)."

Landry commented that the 69-yards in penalties hurt the Cowboys. "When you're playing poorly, that's where it shows up. It certainly wasn't a quarterback's night. The Rams ran over our pass blockers a number of times.

"Let's face it, the Rams played their game and we didn't. We have a long ways to go before we play good," Landry said in closing his dressing room orientation.

Allen, on the other hand, was pleased with the Rams' offense. "We made the short yardage plays when we needed them. We had been working all week on this phase of our game and it paid off.

"I think we also had the advance over Dallas since we had one game under our belt. We're ahead of last year both offensively and defensively at this point."

The Rams netted 217 yards (132 rushing and 85 passing).

Although the Cowboys had a statistics advantage, the Ram defense paid off when it counted.

"I think we took the ball aways at least five times, Allen pointed out. "When you shut out the Cowboys in the touchdown column, it's quite an achievement. I think Dallas is as good a football team as there is so you can see why I'm so pleased."

Allen announced that Kelton Winston, playing in place of the injured Eddie Meador at free safety, was awarded the game ball for his ball-hawking performance. The rookie from Wiley College, a member of the Rams' taxi squad in '66, intercepted two passes.

"When it was decided that Eddie wouldn't start, we had to make a decision whether to start Kelton or Willie Brown. We went with Winston and he turned in a real fine game," said Allen.

"I was pleased with our second defensive line which consisted of Diron Talbert, Bruce Anderson, Dave Ca-

ATTENDANCE PASSES MILLION

Angels Soar, 2-1 — 2 Off Top!

By ROSS NEWHAN

Gene Autry contracted Saturday for the construction of outfield bleachers at the Big A.

The cowboy anticipates an event of importance for October and his ranch hands took another step towards seeing that the money wasn't spent foolishly.

They roped the Red Sox, 2-1, and rode to within two games of the American League lead before a rocking, roaring crowd of 32,821 which spiraled Angel attendance over the million mark.

Matching Minnesota's ascension past the magic milestone, Anaheim reached 1,009,819 on its 57th date, marking a deficit of 120,000 from the pioneer season in Orange County.

There are, however, 17 openings remaining, including attractive doubleheaders with Detroit and Baltimore and a three-game series with Chicago, and the hurtling Halos could still eclipse last year's league-leading total of 1,400,321.

Now each game is the World Series and it was another nervous, numbing night at the Big A before Minnie Rojas, making his 100th appearance as an Angel and his 53rd this season, wrapped up his 18th save.

With it, the Angels were looking like a million on the field as well as off it. They are tied with Chicago, Minnesota and Detroit in the victory (61) column and the disparity in defeats is now only four.

A pitching staff which appeared to be cracking one week ago has sealed the cleavages and yielded just one run in the last 35 innings.

A team which collectively has never been exposed to pennant pressure has won two tense, taut struggles by one run from the rousing Red Sox and is 23-17 in games decided by that thin margin.

"We make the big play, get the key hit and don't beat ourselves," said Don Mincher, whose 18th home run got the Angels off on the right foot.

Mincher's 380-foot blast and 20-foot single by Jim Fregosi were the key hits. Mincher has been through it before, holding a hot hand in the Twins' pennant drive of '65.

"I definitely believe the Angels can win it," he predicted. "The attitude and spirit is the same as it was that year in Minnesota. Some one will have to beat us. We're not going to do it for them."

So the clutch hits and the pitching have been present and so has the steady, sometimes surprising influences of Bill Rigney. The manager lifted his pitcher for a pinch-hitter in the sixth inning although Jack Hamilton had allowed only one run, scattering six hits.

The pinch-hitter, Tom Satriano, doubled down the leftfield line. He was then sacrificed to third by Jose Cardenal. There was one out, the game tied and the infield in.

Fregosi tapped a slow grounder wide of third which Joe Foy cut off in front of shortstop Rico Petrocelli. Rick Reichardt, running for Satriano, was roaring home.

That is the way the Angels play it this year. You will recall that on Tuesday night Buck Rodgers was thrown out in a similar situation and the Yankees emerged with a 1-0 decision.

Rigney refused to back down. If the ball was hit to the infield, Reichardt was going to run. He did and Foy ate the ball.

Rick scored without a play and Fregosi even beat the throw to first.

It was the run which made a loser of Gary Bell (7 10) and winner of Hamilton (6-2), who was the first to congratulate Rojas on his three spotless innings of relief.

Hamilton's rhythm was interrupted by complaints over his delivery only once. Plate umpire Ed Runge suggested he sanitize his hands, and ironically, after the brief, third-inning delay Hamilton yielded the hit which produced Boston's lone run.

Foy singled to drive in Reggie Smith, who had singled and advanced on a sacrifice by Bell.

The Red Sox collected only three more hits and the noise you heard was workmen hammering the first of 3,100 bleacher seats into place.

While the turnstiles purred, the revolving door was also in motion. Out went Fred Newman and in

Pappas Pays Off at Last, Dodgers Fall

By GEORGE LEDERER
Staff Writer

CINCINNATI — The Frank Robinson deal was reopened to discussion, as was the National League pennant race by Cincinnati manager Dave Bristol Saturday night.

"I refuse to say that any team is out of this race, said Bristol after Milt Pappas had shut out the Dodgers, 4-0, on six hits.

"You don't have to go back any farther than 1964 to get what I'm talking about. We just have to get a streak going. Look at the Phillies; they've won 10 of 11 and jumped right into the race. We've won five in a row three times. We have to get a good streak."

Three years ago, the Phillies had a comfortable lead going into the last dozen games, but lost 10 in a row and the Cardinals edged the Reds on the final day.

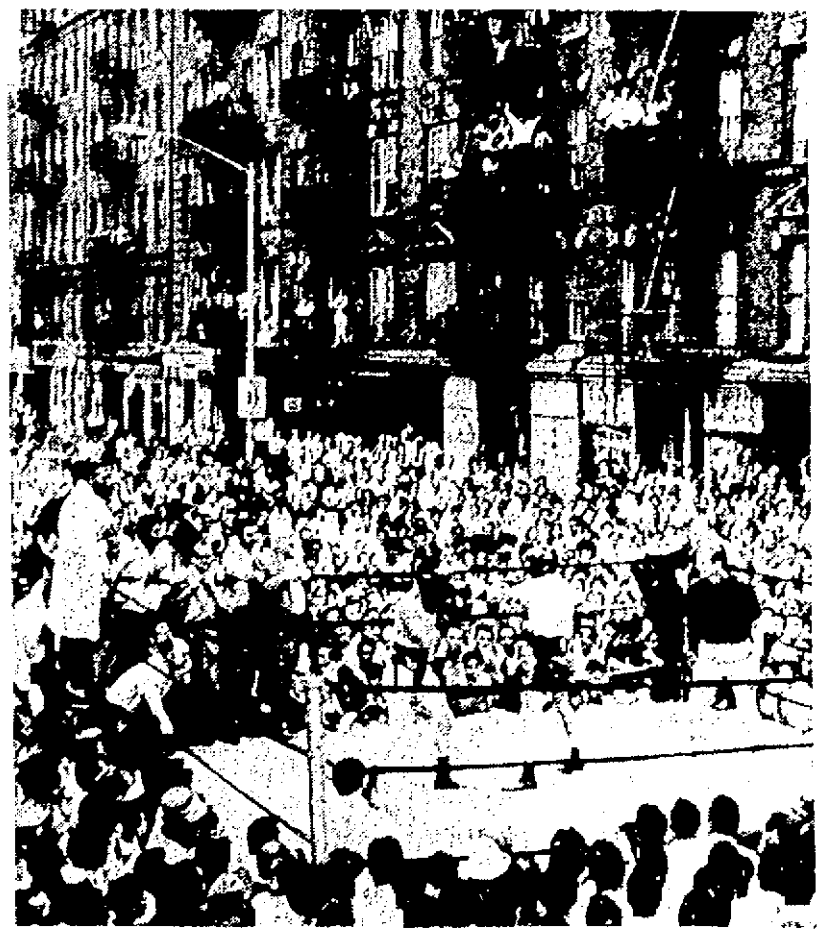

Bristol has hopes something similar may happen to the Cardinals this time.

"Baseball is an unpredictable game. Look at what happened today. Hoyt Wilhelm hadn't allowed a home run all year and Bob Allison hadn't been hitting much lately. So, Allison hits a home run against Wilhelm and Minnesota gains a game in the other league.

"Pitching is the important thing from now on and I think we're in good shape there physically."

In the best shape is Pappas, the man who came from Baltimore for Robinson and was a major disappointment last season. While Pappas had an 12-11

Batboy Hope 'Not Doing Very Good, Either'

Each year one of the most interesting — and also most difficult — factors in our sports dept. is the judging of the Dodger-batboy-for-a-day contest. The judging has to be serious because the day means so much to a youngster that it will be in his mind the remainder of his life.

The Dodgers fit him for his own uniform, which he can hang in the closet and glance at for the next 70 years, allow him to sit on the bench and permit him to mingle with the players. This will take place for Kenny Lorin, 3809 Volk Ave., on Saturday afternoon when the Dodgers oppose the Atlanta Braves.

Kenny's winning letter was published last Sunday, but we'd like to give you the privilege of reading the comments of the 10 runnersup — each of whom will be viewing Saturday's game, courtesy of the Dodgers — this Sunday. I think you'll appreciate both the soul and sincerity of each missive.

Steve Harrison, 3661 N. Senasac Ave.: "Baseball has always been my favorite sport. I've been playing baseball in Long Beach since eight. I now play in Plaza Little League, where one of our managers is a relative of the Dodgers' Jim Lefebvre. I can't think of a greater thrill than to be chosen THE batboy to represent Long Beach and August 19th is the perfect day, because that's my birthday. I'll be 14."

Philip Bollinger (age 15), 4844 Blackthorne Ave.: "I have spent most of my years enjoying the Dodgers, win or lose. The Dodgers' recent surge shows that they will finish at least in the first division. I would like to be a part of their inspiration as in previous years. I played Little League myself, but with little success. I get to see the Dodgers in person usually only once a year on my birthday. However, this year I got my trumpet instead."

MIKE J. ROSS (age 10), 5822 Hazelbrook, Lakewood: "I would like to be a Dodger batboy so I could meet some of the Dodgers and I would like to go to Dodger Stadium. I will take care of the bats good and try and memorize which bat each player uses. I would get their helmets, also. I will get their gloves and help the catcher get his gear on. I play on the Dodgers at a park. And we're not doing very good, either."

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Stephen Summers (age 13), 6241 Lemon Ave.: "So far I have had a pretty boring summer. Somehow I got talked into going to summer school. But summer school lets out on Aug. 18. It would be a thrilling experience for me if I was chosen to be the Dodger batboy on Aug. 19. That would be a perfect way to celebrate the end of summer school and would make this the most exciting summer vacation ever."

Ricky Bemis (age 12), 3507 Baltic Ave.: "I love my Dodgers so much. I ride my bike to grandpa's, cause I can't hog TV all the time. He can. When the Dodgers lose, mom says, 'It's nothing to cry about, Ricky.' I say it is. I think the Dodgers can win the pennant. I bet dad they'll be in the first division. If I were batboy for a day, it would be the joy of my life for always.

Pat O'Sullivan, 1829 W. Lincoln: "I would like to be Dodger batboy because I've entered your contest for four years and this is my last chance. I also would like to take Mr. Campbell, Stephen's Jr. High coach, and his wife to the game. He loves baseball and would get a big kick out of watching me at batboy. I would have to be a good batboy that day because a good coach would be watching me. P.S. I play third base for Stephens."

JOHN FRY (age 11), 3456 Hackett Ave.: "I would like to be the Dodger batboy because I would meet the players. I would especially like to meet Johnny Roseboro since I'm a catcher on my Little League team. I'd also like to meet Don Drysdale, Jim Lefebvre, Willy Davis, Clyde Osteen and Don Sutton. The best thing about winning the contest is that my parents and I would be able to see the Dodgers play in action. The important thing is I would actually be helping the Dodgers."

Phil Wagner (age 14), 1218 Stevely Ave.: "Millions of people would like to be Batman, but I'd rather be Batboy for the Dodgers for one day. It would be a thrill just to meet some of the players such as Don Drysdale, Jim LeFebre, Willie Davis, Ron Hunt and all the others. I would also enjoy meeting their great manager, Mr. Alston. The Dodgers are a LOT better team than they show on paper. If I were batboy for the Dodgers, I would still think I was batboy for the champs."

BEING A JUDGE ISN'T EASY, so I'll let you note the merits of the final two runnersup letters. There punch lines are precious.

Joe Causky (age 11), 11721 Foster Rd., Rossmoor: "I've played baseball for two years. I like baseball very much and especially the great Dodgers. I'm not much of a player so me and the bench are pals. Any players should know this is not as much fun as playing. But when I read in your paper a Dodger batboy, I thought this is a big chance to sit on a bench, but it should be different than with my team."

David Arritt (age 10), 3531 Thor Ave., Los Alamitos: "I would like to be a Dodger batboy because I like the Dodgers. I would like to ask Jim Lefebvre and Lou Johnson how to hit the ball because I'm 10 years old and played four years and I still can't hit the ball."

Don't worry, David. I've got a few years on you and I still can't hit the ball. Incidentally, does anybody in the audience want to be a judge next year?

Tommy D. Leads Hot Mets, 6-1

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Davis hit two home runs and Cal Koonce, in his first start for New York, limited Pittsburgh to six hits Saturday as the Mets beat the Pirates, 6-1.

It was the fourth triumph for the Mets in their last five games.

Davis' led off the fourth with a homer that put the Mets ahead 2-1 and came back with a two-run shot in the fifth inning when New York scored three unearned runs.

With two out and Jerry Grote on second, Bill Mazeroski let a grounder by Bob Johnson get through him and Grote scored.

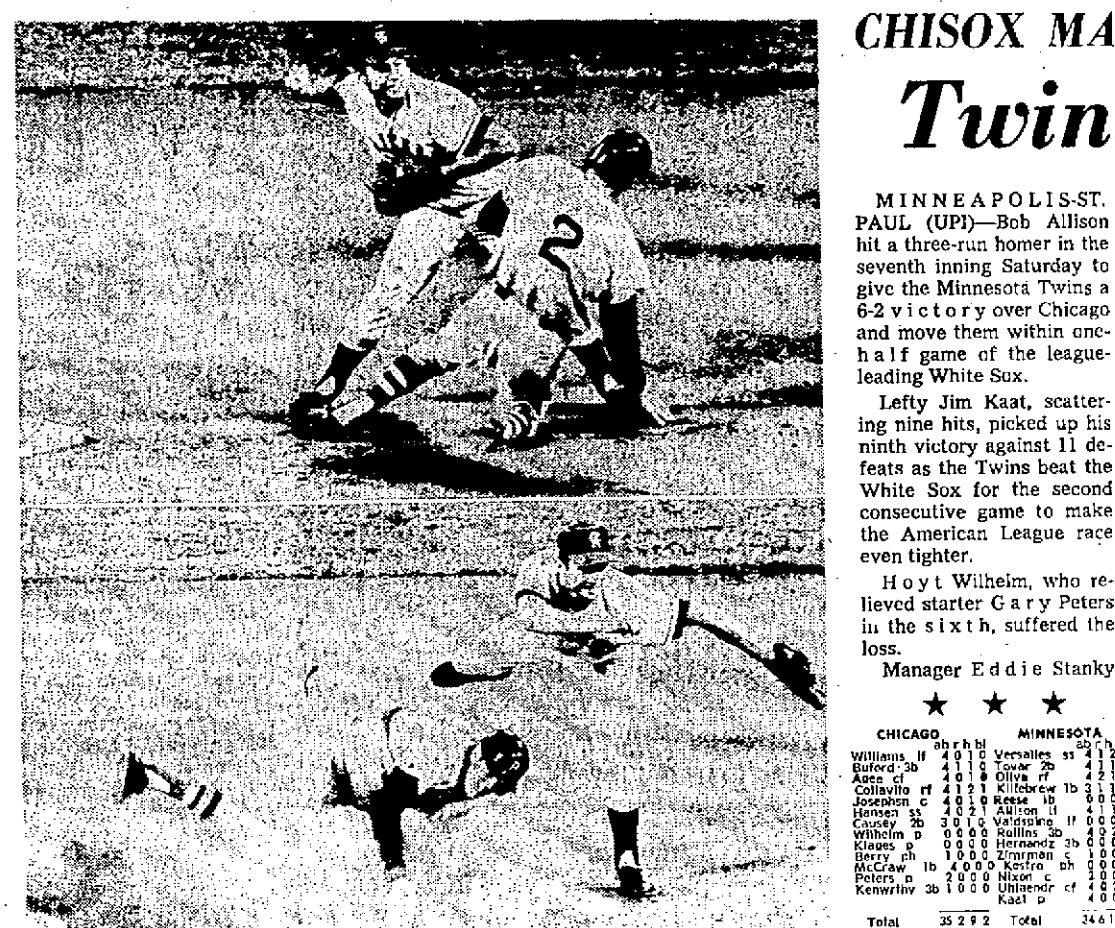

Koonce, acquired early this week from the Chicago Cubs, allowed the only Pirates' run in the first inning when Willie Stargell doubled in Roberto Clemente, who had singled.

Twins Near AL Lead, 6-2

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI)—Bob Allison hit a three-run homer in the seventh inning Saturday to give the Minnesota Twins a 6-2 victory over Chicago and move them within one-half game of the league-leading White Sox.

Lefty Jim Kaat, scattering nine hits, picked up his ninth victory against 11 defeats as the Twins beat the White Sox for the second consecutive game to make the American League race even tighter.

Hoyt Wilhelm, who relieved starter Gary Peters in the sixth, suffered the loss.

Manager Eddie Stanky gambled on using Peters as a starter after using him in relief Thursday night against Detroit. But Stanky pulled Peters after 5 1-3 in favor of Wilhelm, who was bombed for all Twins' four runs in the seventh that broke a 2-2 tie.

The seventh-inning rally started as Zoilo Versalles and Cesar Tovar singled and Tom McCraw made an error on Tony Oliva's grounder to fill the bases.

Harmon Killebrew then hit a sacrifice fly to left to put the Twins ahead, 3-2. Allison followed with his 19th homer of the season to put the game out of reach.

The score was tied 2-2 going into the seventh.

DODGERS--

record and the Reds finished seventh, 18 games back, Robinson won the triple crown and led the Orioles to the world championship.

Now, Pappas is the Reds' best pitcher with a 12-7 record, a four-game winning streak and a string of 20 shutout innings. He pitched a two-hitter in his last start against Houston and has been sharp for a month.

"That's six well-pitched games in a row for him," said Bristol. "He had a chance to win all six. He's been just great since he got over his back injury. His off-speed pitches have been effective and he knows how to pitch."

Pappas has been particularly tough against the Dodgers at band-box Crosley Field. He has four wins over the Dodgers, all here, and four losses, all at Dodger Stadium.

The Dodgers helped Pappas Saturday and also did it rapidly. Time of game was 1:59, the second fastest of the year for the Dodgers.

Phil Regan, filling in for Pvt. Don Sutton as a starter, was the loser for the fourth time in a row and had no help, either on offense or defense.

Two fielding lapses led to the Reds' first three runs. The fourth, against reliever Dick Egan, was unearned.

Len Gabrielson played Tommy Helms' drive to right field into a triple in the second inning, scoring Lee May, who had led off with a single. May was content to stop at second until Gabrielson over-ran the ball in trying for a shoe-top catch.

With two out in the third inning, Ron Fairly played Vada Pinson's grounder into an infield hit and Tony Perez delivered a two-run single with the bases filled. A throwing error by Lou Johnson gave the Reds their final run in the eighth.

Not a Dodger reached third base and four were left at second.

The Dodgers conclude their 1967 visit at Crosley this afternoon with Don Drysdale (8-11) pitching against Sammy Ellis (6-8).

McLain Wins 15th Despite Bird HRs

DETROIT (UPI) — Jim Northrup drove in three runs with a triple and a homer to give Denny McLain his 15th victory of the season Saturday as the Detroit Tigers edged the Baltimore Orioles, 5-4.

McLain was rocked for three homers before being lifted in the top of the ninth inning as he boosted his record to 15-12 for the season.

John Hiller replaced McLain when he served up the homer to Dave Johnson leading off the ninth and retired the Orioles in order to preserve the victory.

McLain, who gave up 42 homers last season, has now allowed 27 this season. But he had allowed just one in his last eight starts before being tagged for three by the Orioles Saturday.

Cepeda's Hit Beats Giants

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Orlando Cepeda singled home Curt Flood with the winning run in the sixth inning and Jack Lamabe pitched 6 2-3 innings of scoreless relief as St. Louis edged San Francisco, 3-2, Saturday night.

Flood's triple to right-center field had driven home Roger Maris with the tying run before Cepeda's sharp single.

Lamabe replaced starter Steve Carlton in the third inning and blanked the Giants on three hits. He captured his first decision of the year and now is 1-3 with the Cardinals and 1-6 on the season.

Jesus Alou opened the game with a single. He moved to second when the Cards' right fielder, Alex Johnson, tried unsuccessfully to pick him off first base.

Alou scored from second on an infield hit by Jim Hart and a throwing error by Carlton.

The Giants used an infield hit by Jack Hiatt and a single by Dick Dietz for another first inning run.

St. Louis bounced back in the bottom of the first to kayo Giant starter Joe Gibbon. Johnson singled and eventually scored when Mike Shannon walked on four pitches with the bases loaded.

Braves Sweep on Lemaster's Blank

ATLANTA (AP) — Denny Lemaster hurled a strong five-hitter and drove in the game's first run as Atlanta blanked Houston, 2-0, completing a sweep of a day-night doubleheader Saturday.

Ken Johnson won his 12th game with Rico Carty and Clete Boyer socking home runs for a 7-3 Atlanta victory in the afternoon game.

The double loss stretched Houston's losing streak to nine games. The Braves moved into second place, running their winning streak to four games.

The second-game victory snapped a two-month long winless streak for Lemaster. The veteran lefthander struck out 10 and delivered his key hit in the seventh inning.

Hank Aaron's 28th homer in the eighth gave the Braves their second run.

Going for a Long, Long Walk

"I admit it—it's a funny looking event. But people just have to realize that in order to get there it has to look funny."—Larry Young, Pan-American Games 50-kilometer walking champion.

Psychologists looking for new fields to explore would do well to consider the walker, the platypus of the track and field zoo.

Offhand, he could expect to find (a) a mind wrenched by misunderstanding or (b) an advanced frustration complex nurtured by the urge to run.

Mainly, though, men like Larry Young would simply like, in the public's eye, to belong to the athletic animal kingdom.

"That's the problem we have here in the U.S.," says Young, "the lack of spectator interest. Surprisingly, up in Winnipeg we had good coverage and the walking was recognized more by the spectators as an awesome sort of thing like they respected us, more than the laughing and the jeers we get back here."

No doubt about it, Young and his ilk have at least one foot on the ground at all times, which is more than can be said for other track and field performers, save the earthbound pachyderms of the weight-throwing events.

They are sensible enough to realize that they are apt to arouse derisive laughter among the ignorant majority when they come hip-swinging into the stadium, apparently coming apart at the joints as they turn on the speed for a furious march to the finish line.

"It's an exaggerated form of walking—that's all there is to it," says Young, whose San Pedro neighbors are by now accustomed to his training strolls.

"The reason for the so-called wiggling of the hips is to lengthen the stride and to facilitate ease of movement. You use your hips and your upper body to power through with your legs."

THEY MAY LAUGH in the U.S., but they didn't laugh at Winnipeg, Larry says, and they didn't laugh when Young's buddy, Ron Laird, followed his course up to a locked gate and almost blew the 20 kilometers.

"That was really a sad experience for him," sighs Larry, whose countrymen viewing the event later on national TV thought it was hilarious.

"I lost my way once here in a local meet. I just took a wrong turn and cut the course short. I crossed the finish line in front of Laird, who had been ahead of me, so I had to go back and finish off."

To a dedicated walker like Larry, dogs aren't as big a problem as hecklers ("you just have to stop and beat 'em off"), because a heckler can ruin one's concentration.

"Half of it's mental," he says, "mostly concentrating on technique, body balance and how everybody else in the race is doing. And just trying to keep yourself pushing on."

The next time you have to walk to the store, pause to consider that Young's 50-kilometer walk translates to 31 miles, a distance he bunioned in 4 hours, 26 minutes and 20.8 seconds, a Pan-Am record.

"Thirty-one miles and 121 yards, to be exact," says Young, wincing slightly. "It's a long time to be up on your feet."

THE OLYMPIC walking distances are 20 and 50 kilometers, and anything shorter is considered a sprint. For instance, the unofficial record for walking a mile is a little over six minutes, and few adults could run one that fast.

Literally, the walkers start in where the runners leave off. The longest internationally competitive distance, aside from the seldom-run marathon, is 10,000 meters, or about 6¼ miles. On a current tour of Europe, Young and Laird will walk that far in London and Rome and 20,000 meters (20 kilometers) in Germany.

Given enough time, one might think that such men could walk around the world non-stop at their apparently easy pace, but the event requires rigorous conditioning. Young walks 10 to 12 miles a day, every day, and 20 miles at least once a week.

"To put in an easy 10 miles is about an hour and 30 minutes," he says. "How long would it take Jim Ryun to cover 10 miles? Probably about half the time. That's one problem the walkers have. It takes much more time to train."

So, even the walkers are concerned about Mexico City's altitude for the '68 Olympics.

"Even in walking there is a certain amount of oxygen debt you acquire," says Young. "After a 50-kilometer race if I've really extended myself my lungs will ache for a couple of days, from the long extensive deep breathing."

LARRY BECAME interested in walking competitively at his high school in Fort Osage, Mo.

"I saw a film strip of the Olympics and I was quite fascinated with it. So I was goofing around and my track coach said, 'Hey, Young, you look like you have pretty good form there. Why don't you see how fast you can walk the 100 yards?'

"So I went out to the football field and walked it in about 18 seconds. I could only run it in about 12!"

Kilmer Hot, Saints Stun Cards, 23-14

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — Quarterback Bill Kilmer sparked the New Orleans Saints to their first victory ever Saturday night, throwing two touchdown passes for a 23-14 upset over the St. Louis Cardinals.

A crowd of 28,500 jammed the Louisiana State Fair Stadium for the National Football League exhibition game, the first for the Cardinals this year, second for the Saints.

The Saints, playing their first game in Louisiana, shocked the Cardinals with a touchdown in the first three minutes of the game.

Kilmer, playing only the first half, threw an 18-yard touchdown pass to flanker Tom Hall in the first quarter and connected to Ray Ogden for 28 and another touchdown in the last period.

Kilmer took over the starting quarterback job from Gary Cuozzo and completed nine of 19 passes for 142 yards. Cuozzo replaced him in the third quarter but was repeatedly thrown for losses by the Cardinal front line.

FIELD GOAL SAVES N.Y.

Giants Tie Falcons, 10-10

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Chuck Mercein kicked a 20-yard field goal with 4:06 left in the game Saturday as the New York Giants salvaged a 10-10 tie against the Atlanta Falcons in the fourth annual Finger Lakes Bowl exhibition football game.

Mercein's kick came after three consecutive errors pushed the Giants out of touchdown territory.

Quarterback Fran Tarkenton engineered a 69-yard drive that took New York to the Falcons' six-yard line in 11 plays. But halfback Bill Triplett was thrown for a two-yard loss and the Giants were penalized five yards on the next play for delaying the game.

Tarkenton attempted to hit Del Shofner at the two-yard line but his low pass was blocked at the line of scrimmage and Mercein was called into the game.

Atlanta's Bob Riggle picked off a partially blocked Tarkenton pass late in the third quarter, and after the final session opened Junior Coffey crashed through the middle of the New York line for the touchdown.

Faust Parker kicked the extra point to put Atlanta temporarily in front 10-7.

Atlanta's final effort, a 41-yard field goal attempt by Parker, fell four yards short with 10 seconds remaining in the game.

The Giants' top running back, Tucker Frederickson, playing for the first time since a knee operation kept him out all last season played the first half and gained 16 yards in six carries.

Donny Sparkles as Packers Win

GREEN BAY (AP) — Bonus back Donny Anderson passed 67 yards for one touchdown and raced 50 to set up another as the champion Green Bay Packers fought off Pittsburgh 31-20 Saturday night in their first National Football League exhibition test against a pro foe.

Anderson squirted through the line and moved half the distance of the field to the Pittsburgh 9, leading the Packers' last touchdown on a six-yard toss from backup quarterback Zeke Bratkowski to tight end Allen Brown.

The second-year halfback for Texas Tech, stepping into the spot vacated by the departed Paul Hornung, executed the option pass for a 67-yard touchdown strike to Carroll Dale on the fourth play of the second half.

Ex-49er End Scores TD to Win for S.D.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Steve Tensi fired a 47-yard touchdown pass to Steve Newell — a rookie end from Cal State Long Beach — with 2:35 to go Saturday night and the San Diego Chargers squeaked past the Miami Dolphins 20-19 in an American Football League exhibition.

A fumble by Billy Joe, recovered by Frank Buncom, set up the come-from-behind shot that handed the Dolphins, the AFL's surprising sophomores, their first defeat in three preseason games.

John Stofa, starting at quarterback for the Dolphins for the first time, threw two touchdown passes and Miami appeared to be coasting to a 19-14 victory behind a rugged defense when the big break came for the Chargers.

Eagles Humbled by Vikings, 34-0

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Karl Kassulke and Dick Wagoner returned second-half interceptions for touchdowns to help the Minnesota Vikings gain a 34-0 exhibition victory over the Philadelphia Eagles Saturday night.

Kicking specialist Fred Cox led the scoring with a 28-yard first-period field goal, a 29-yard fourth-quarter boot and four extra points.

Halfback Jim Lindsey punched over from one-yard out to score the Vikings first touchdown with 24 seconds remaining in the second period. The score climaxed an 81-yard, nine-play drive engineered by rookie quarterback John Hankinson.

Midway through the third quarter, Kassulke, a veteran linebacker, picked off a King Hill pass and ran 27 yards to the end zone. In the final quarter, Wagoner, a rookie, rambled 62 yards with an interception.

The Vikings final tally came on 31-yard pass from quarterback Bob Berry to end John Powers.

Hampered by key penalties and a sluggish passing attack, the Eagles never mounted a serious drive and their deepest penetration died on the Viking 40-yard line late in the game.

The Vikings offense rolled up 314 net yards while the Eagles were held to 111.

Unheralded Trio in Tee Lead

AKRON (AP) — South African Allan Henning, Kermit Zarley and Jack McGowan—a threesome with only one tournamaent victory among them — tied for the lead Saturday in a helter-skelter third round of the $100,000 American Golf Classic.

All three were two strokes under par with one round to go and a shaky one-stroke ahead of the more illustrious pair of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer.

Henning, a 23-year-old with a mod haircut who is making the tour for the first time, and Zarley, 25, have never won on the pro tour. McGowan, 36, a pro for 12 years, claims victory only in the 1964 Mountain View Open.

All three took advantage of the collapse of Rex Baxter Jr., who led the tournament after 36 holes and went from six-under-par to one over in a disastrous round of 42-35 — 77 and a 211 total, three strokes behind the leaders.

Henning had a one-under par 35-34 — 69 for 208, Zarley a 34-34 — 68 and McGowan 34-38 — 72. Nicklaus came in with 34-36—70 and Palmer a 36-36 —72 for their 209 totals.

There was a weird turn of events in the round. Baxter opened Saturday six strokes under par and two strokes ahead of McGowan. Palmer was one stroke behind McGowan and two ahead of Henning, Nicklaus and Bobby Nichols. Zarley was at even par, six shots off the pace.

Baxter, playing in the three-some with Palmer and Nicklaus, quickly fell apart with a bogey and a double bogey on the first three holes.

While Baxter was having his troubles, Nicklaus canned a 12-foot putt for an eagle three on No. 2 and Palmer came out of a trap on the same hole and dropped an eight-footer for a birdie.

Nicklaus also got a birdie on the fourth hole, but a double bogey six on No. 9 ruined his chances of breaking ahead when he three-putted from about 10 feet.

Palmer couldn't get going after his birdie and snagged three bogeys before completing the round.

ADVANCE IN CONNIE MACK

Mustangs Rout Santa Clara

By CHUCK MEDICK

Mel Burns Mustangs scored four runs in the first inning and went on to down Santa Clara, 8-1, in the first round of the Connie Mack Pacific-Southwest Regional tournament at Blair Field Saturday.

The Mustangs chased starter Rick Finney before he had retired a man in the opening inning.

Glenn Killingsworth led off with a double and before the smoke had cleared four runs had crossed the plate and Curt Hogeboom was on the mound.

Killingsworth, Steve Wilkerson and Pat Miller each collected two hits in the Mustangs' 10-hit barrage.

Winning pitcher Bob Wolfe was plagued by wildness, twice walking the bases loaded. Two double plays and some sparkling infield play kept Santa Clara from rallying.

Now the Mustangs and the Long Beach Cardinals, winners of the State tournament, will meet in a showdown battle at 2 today at Blair Field.

In Saturday's opener Bill Harms pitched three-hit ball as the Reno, Nev., Cardinals shutout Big Horn Life of Casper, Wyo., 2-0. Santa Clara and Casper meet in today's 4:30 game.

Nitehawks Register 3-0 Win

By CHUCK MEDICK

Don Sarno hurled his second shutout in two nights Saturday as the Long Beach Nitehawks defeated Lion D' Orr 3-0 in the ISC State Softball Tournament at Park Ave. Field.

Stan Hubert, recently returned to the Nitehawk fold, homered off loser Jerry Bowman in the second inning. The Lion D' Orr defense collapsed and the Hawks pushed across a pair of insurance tallies in the fifth.

Tonight's card will feature a winner's bracket game between the Anaheim Bobcats and San Diego Hawks. The lid-lifter, which begins at 7:30, brings together Schwenn Realty of Long Beach and Adco. Reynolds of La Puente.

The tournament is double elimination affair with the finals scheduled for next Sunday at 7:30 p.m.; the winner joins Lakewood and Gardena at the World Tourney in Rock Island, Ill.

Updegraff Nips Irwin by 1 Stroke

SEATTLE (AP) — An Arizona physician who got "a little shaky on that last hole," held on to win the first Pacific Coast Amateur Golf Tournament by one stroke Saturday.

Dr. Ed Updegraff, Tucson, carded a two-over-par 73 in his final 18-hole round at the Seattle Golf Club to edge Hale Irwin with a 72-hole total of 285, one over par.

Irwin, 1967 NCAA winner from Boulder, Colo., missed tying the former Western Amateur champion when his 12-foot eagle putt was a font shy on the 72nd hole.

Miller Hurls Four-Hitter, Salta Wins

SAN FERNANDO — Salta Pontiac won its first game in nearly three weeks Saturday with Joe Miller showing the form of a year ago in four-hitting San Fernando, 2-0.

The Saltans, still very much alive in the California Collegiate Baseball League pennant race, play Ontario at Ontario at 2 p.m. today and meet La Mesa on the same field at 6.

With one away in the ninth inning, Dale Duncan singled and went to third on Walt Weller's hit-and-run single to right. Steve Smith's sacrifice-fielder's choice got Dale home and Smith got Weller in with a flying takeout of shortstop Bill Kringlen to break up a doubleplay and force a wild throw.

Sea Festival Opens; Balboa, Newport Tie

By JIM McCORMACK

Sea Festival competition began in impressive fashion Saturday at Marine Stadium with Balboa and Newport battling down to the last paddle for the State Outrigger Championship in conjunction with the Rowing Regatta.

At that, the two outrigger clubs had to settle for a tie with 34 points.

The afternoon was like something out of "Sports Stories of the Century."

Balboa had to win and Newport had to finish third in the two-mile senior men's race for the tie.

Balboa, with a team of George Copa, Bob Ernst, Pete Jung, John Van Cleave, Herman Aki and Paul Ryan, went out to secure its end of the melodrama in a hurry.

After trailing for a few moments, Balboa began to pull away and led by 33 seconds after one mile. It finished the two miles in 16:49.0, swamping second-place Santa Monica by 47 seconds.

After the first mile, however, the interest focused on Newport's desperate attempt to catch Santa Monica.

The defending state champion, Newport trailed Santa Monica by five seconds or less throughout the race but was never able to pull its ponderous outrigger into the lead. Santa Monica held a nine-second advantage at the end.

The score had been tied at 27-all with two minutes to go, but Newport's senior women team took its 1½-mile race to give Newport a 32-29 advantage going into the decisive final event.

Outrigger competition began with boy's, 16 and under, representing Balboa and Newport. They deadheated.

The outrigger activity was supplemented by an assortment of events featuring nearly every type of paddle craft afloat.

Weightmasters for I,P-T Derby

One of the most important things about a tournament such as The Independent, Press-Telegram $5,000 Metropolitan Sportfishing Derby, which started Saturday, is to get potential fish winners properly weighed and registered. The I, P-T considers itself fortunate in obtaining plenty of weighmasters at 13 different locations.

Some of the landings maintain 24-hour service, while the bait and tackle shops are open through all daylight hours, some earlier and some later.

We are happy to publish today the names of all those weighmasters in alphabetical order as follows:

Art's Bait and Tackle, Seal Beach, Arthur R. Drent and Leonard B. Olsen; Belmont Pier, Arthur Ascolesi, June Ascolesi; W. R. Blair, Clayton Eaton, Roy Howarth; Huntington Beach Pier (two locations), Ron's Bait and Tackle, Greg Barlow, Ruth Lyon, John Santibanez and Ronald Smith; Vern's Bait and Tackle, Glenn Carr, John McColister, Jon McColister, and Clara B. Warner; Long Beach Marina, George Caillarec, Richard R. Camrin, Alfred Encinas, John Holmes, Robert Kennedy, Robert Kinley and Thomas McInturff.

Norm's Landing, San Pedro, Tod Brown, Bob Hester, Lynn Hollingsworth and Rose Lineberry, Norm's Bait and Tackle, Seal Beach (no connection with Norm's of San Pedro), Earl Cravens and Norm Cravens.

PACIFIC SPORTFISHING, INC., will have seven weighmasters. They are Ken Chilcote, F. E. (Eddie) McEwen, A. O. (Pop) Leavitt, Gene Roberts, Franklin Sandy, Ronald Schlecht and Lloyd Willis.

Pierpoint Landing will have eight weighmasters, who are Jim Denos, Cecil Herker, Jim Lemon, Howard Luckey, John Naples, H. B. Randall, Doc Severance and D. H. Warden.

Seal Beach Pier, Frank Costanzo, Ron Patterson, Geraldine Poitz, Paul Poitz, Joe Wilbur and M. G. Wilson; Sim's Bait and Tackle, J. B. Makemson, Ethel Makemson, George Sims and Lorraine Smith; Skippers' 22nd Street Landing, San Pedro, Nancy Creel, Dottie Cummins, Paul Landier and James Viola; Sunset Beach Bait and Tackle, Harvey Economy, Nel Economy, Ted Economy and Mary Helling.

Those weighmasters serve without pay from these newspapers; their pay comes from their own employers. Their service in the derby might be called one of "love for the business" because they are contributing to the ultimate success of the tournament.

It is most important for an angler to make out a weight slip in triplicate, forms for which are provided at all stations. One slip goes to the weighmaster, one to the auditing committee at the I, P-T and the fisherman keeps one for himself. Weekly standings and daily and weekly winners will be printed once a week and posted on easels at the various stations.

THERE IS ONLY ONE CATEGORY for the surf fishermen — corbina and croaker, linked together and the natural places to weigh in those fish will be Art's, Ron's, Vern's, Norm's Bait and Tackle, Sim's and Sunset Beach. All are equipped with good scales and will be prepared to help anglers with catches that may be potential winners.

There is a definite distinction between surf fishing and the piers and barges, which have five categories — barracuda, bass, bonito, halibut and corbina-croaker. Fishermen on piers and barges do no have to compete with surf fishermen in the corbina-croaker category, nor with anglers on boats in the other division.

Barges are situated off Huntington Beach Pier, Seal Beach Pier and Belmont Pier. In addition, there is a small barge, Davey Jones' Locker, anchored adjacent to Pierpoint Landing. Officials of the derby have ruled that the small Pierpoint barge is just as eligible as any other for the barge prizes. It just could be that a winning halibut or bonito might be caught there.

Naturally, any potential winner there would be weighed at Pierpoint Landing, the only place nearby that has good scales. However, as indicated above, the catches there will not be in competition with those caught on sportfishing, charter, private or rental boats.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS—I have just learned about the death of one of the Sierra Nevada's most famous guides, Nyle Fredrick Smith, 71, who with his wife, Ruth, owned Crowley Lake Resort, just north of McGee Creek Inn.

Nyle was almost as much a part of the Sierra Nevada as Mammoth Mountain itself, down which he hiked many hundred times. In the last few years Nyle had been retired from active guiding. He died while visiting in Bishop of a heart attack.

In years gone by I spent many happy hours with Nyle packing into Duck Lake and the wilderness area beyond and into other lakes in the Mammoth Lakes group. I remember well one instance at Crystal Lake, which hides behind Crystal Crag overlooking Mary and George Lakes. Nyle packed a small outboard motor on his back and I, fresh from the seashore, packed the lunch and fishing tackle.

We took down a boat which was locked to a tree trunk, broke ice to get into an open spot in the lake and started catching golden trout. Nyle hooked what I still consider the largest golden I ever saw.

After a battle lasting several minutes the fish, possibly an 18-incher, broke the leader. Nyle didn't swear—and that he could do—he just smiled and said: "He deserved to go free; he was a real fighter." That might explain just what kind of a sportsman Nyle was.

Ski Race, Hydros Go Today

By JIM McCORMACK

It seems like just yesterday that the Sea Festival began and yet today it offers some of the more attractive events on its fare.

Competition today begins at 8 a.m. at the Golden Ave. launch site in front of the Reef Restaurant with the 33rd running of the Grand National ski race around Catalina and concludes this evening at Marine Stadium with a Speed Regatta.

Although it will be difficult to get more than a glimpse of the ski race, this may be the most fascinating event on the program.

Normally being pulled at 50 mph over 60 miles of rough water would be a sport only for overdeveloped young men who have managed to live 22-25 years without meeting a football coach. Such is not the case for this race.

Besides the open men's competition, which does feature the above mentioned athletes, there are classes for women, men over 30, women over 30, for boys under 15 and for girls under 15.

Not wanting to emulate the National Football League, which traditionally underpublicizes its offensive linemen, the sponsoring Long Beach Boat and Ski Club also has special awards for the first outboard, V-bottom and outdrive-or jet boat to finish the race.

Amazingly, the record for this 60-mile excursion is just 1 hour, 13 minutes. Butch Peterson, one of today's contestants, managed that in 1963. Defending champion Randy Harker, who required 1:15 last year, is also in the field.

The No. 1 lady is Janie Welch, the defending champion and a five-time winner.

Word, however, has been circulating among the Catalina ski set that Carol Larson, a young lady from Long Beach, could be the best this time.

* * * *

EVERYONE coming back from Catalina should return by 11 a.m., leaving just enough time to get to Marine Stadium for the noon beginning of the Speed Regatta.

Admission for this event is $2 for adults. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

Competition here will run from the 48-horsepower hydros to the 600-hp Allisons. Each class will sprint madly five times around a surveyed 1-mile course. Eliminations will qualify boaters for the finals.

E-Racing runabout skippers, there are 20 entered, will chase the mythical national title. Early line favorites are a Whittier pair, Bud Murphy, 1967 Western Division king, and Joe Poty, 1966 National point champ.

The list of Who's Who in other classes includes several world record holders, namely: San Diego's Bob Frazzee (150 hydro), Van Nuy's Dick Maxwell (Crackerbox), Canoga Park's Phil Shipley (crackerhox), Marion Beaver of Parker, Ariz. (225 hydro) and San Pedro's Tony Maricich (super stock*).

*—Maricich's record pending.

It's Overlap Season Again

By JOSEPH DURSO for ARTHUR DALEY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The time has come to clarify the baseball-football seasonal muddle.

After all, the world may puzzle over reports that the St. Louis Cardinals are leading the National Baseball League while the St. Louis Cardinals are in spring training for the National Football League.

Or that Kansas City has the best team in the American Football League and the worst team in the American Baseball League. To say nothing of the New York Mets and the New York Jets.

Or, that at the height of the baseball season this weekend, Atlanta played New York at Ithaca, New Orleans met St. Louis at Shreveport, Philadelphia tangled with Minnesota at Tulsa and Kansas City played the other New York at Birmingham. In football.

To clear the air, we paid a call the other day at Shea Stadium, where the Mets had just blown another National League pennant. There was a tang of football in the August air, and even Lindsey Nelson's voice rose dramatically to describe how Sonny Jurgenson was uncorking a pitch to Charlie Taylor.

Almost to a man, the Mets cut across the seasons and said they favored Green Bay in 1967. How's that for front-running?

"I guess Green Bay is just too good to beat," said Ralph Kiner. "And I don't see how anybody can beat Kansas City in the other league. They're big and good. San Diego thinks it helped itself by getting some new defensive backs. They can score — that Lance Alworth is unbelievable — but they've had trouble on defense.

"I did the color broadcasts on radio for them last year and my partner was Emil Karras, the former player. But the Chargers got so desperate that they re-activated him as a player—right out of the radio booth."

KINER, WHO HIT 369 home runs before becoming a broadcaster, might give the Mets some ideas along that line. But this was football's day, and he observed that pro football was a game for super brutes.

"When I played baseball," he said, "I weighed 205 and was considered big. But these guys are a separate tribe. I've seen Ernie Ladd stripped, and there's not an ounce of fat on his 300-pound body. How would you like to fight him off all afternoon?"

"I wouldn't even like to rub him down," said Gus Mauch, the Mets' trainer, who doesn't get paid by the pound.

"I've always liked the Rams," said Jack Fisher, the former split-T quarterback for Richmond Academy in Augusta. "I think Fran Tarkenton will help the Giants, but it may take some time for them to get used to his style.

"In high school, I was the quarterback once against Tarkenton when he played for Athens High School in Georgia. I think every play was a pass by Tarkenton. But when we played him, we did okay. We even won the state championship."

"Ernie Ladd, Buck Buchanan, the Howell brothers. And we played in a league with guys like Bob Hayes, Verlon Biggs and Ben McGee. And Willis Reed was on our basketball team.

"In the NFL, I guess you've got to go with Green Bay. In the AFL, I think the Jets have a good chance. They'll always score points, with guys like Joe Namath, Emerson Boozer and Matt Snell. And this year their young defensive backs should be better. I saw them play four games last year, and if they stay healthy they could win it."

AS USUAL, the final word belonged to Yogi Berra, the one-time soccer, stickball, volleyball, punchball, softball and baseball star of the St. Louis playgrounds.

"I don't know about the Jets" he said, summarizing a complex situation in a few well chosen words. "Something always happens. So I'll pick Green Bay and Dallas in the NFL and Kansas City and Buffalo in the AFL."

"Why?" he asked rhetorically, showing his renowned talent for instant analysis. "Because they're good."

Lodging Problem Faces Mexicans

New York Times Service

MEXICO CITY — Applications for accommodations for the Olympic Games to be staged in Mexico City next year are arriving at such a rate that first-class lodgings are almost exhausted.

At the accommodations control office, set up by the government to handle all hotel bookings and tickets for events, Ramon E. Alatorre, the director, reports that an average of 375 requests are arriving daily from all over the world. The applications began arriving as far back as 1963.

To promote equity and to prevent speculation, the Mexican government decided months ago to handle requests for space through official channels.

Almost all hotels have signed contracts turning over 90 per cent of their rooms to the control office for the period from Oct. 8 to Oct. 31, 1968.

Between 60,000 and 65,000 beds, including about 8,000 in private homes, are expected to be available on any one day. Alatorre estimates that 85,000 to 90,000 persons will be able to attend the Olympics.

Medalist Raps 'Old Man' Role

CHICAGO (AP) — Don Schollander, 1964 Olympic star, blasted an "old man" role with a fantastic clocking of 1:55.7 in the 200-meter freestyle to take the spotlight from still sizzling 17-year-old Mark Spitz Saturday in the National AAU outdoor swimming meet.

Schollander, a badly-beaten fifth in Friday's 400-meter freestyle, slashed three tenths of a second from his pending world 200 freestyle record of 1:56.0 set in the recent Pan-American Games. He also smashed his current world record of 1:56.2.

Spitz, meanwhile, became a double winner by grabbing the 200-meter butterfly title in 2:06.4 to catch his pending world record also set in the Pan-Am Games two weeks ago. Friday, Spitz took the 100-meter butterfly in 56.7, bettering the existing world mark, but below his pending world mark of 56.3.

Two other double winners appeared in the second day of competition at the new Rehm pool in the Chicago suburb of Oak Park.

Charles Hickcox of Indiana University swam the second-fastest 100-meter backstroke in history at 59.7 and added that the 200 meter backstroke he won Friday.

Schollander finished eight feet ahead of Greg Charlton of Arcadia, Calif., to retain his 200-meter freestyle title.

Schollander set a pending world 200 mark of 1:56.0 in the recent Pan-Am Games. He also holds the existing world record of 1:56.2.

Winner of four gold medals in the 1964 Olympics at Tokyo, Schollander cruised over the first 100 meters in 56.6 seconds and closed with 59.1.

The breathless Schollander commented after his record-smashing race:

"I wanted to squelch the rumor that I'm an old man which I didn't particularly feel happy reading about after my 400 race."

Schollander won the 100 and 400 meter races in the 1964 Olympics, where he also won gold medals on two freestyle teams.

He said after his fifth place finish Friday he might drop the 400 and concentrate on the 200-meter freestyle which will be swum for the first time in the Olympics in Mexico City next year.

ANGELS---

came Larry (Moose) Stubing, a left-handed hitter who is completing his 11th year in the minors.

Newman was sold outright to San Jose while Stubing was purchased from the Angels' farm at El Paso where he compiled a .331 average as player-coach.

The 29-year-old Stubing will serve only as a pinch hitter, a left-handed bat for the bench when Rig employs his southpaw swingers in a starting capacity.

With his sale to San Jose, Newman must now stand the winter draft and the Angels will undoubtedly lose the 25-year-old right-hander for $20,000.

Said one Angel official: "The price is right if Stubing contributes one hit to one win and we win the pennant."

ANGEL ANGLE: JIM LONBORG 16-5), with two weeks of reserve training behind him, faces RICK CLARK (8-8) this afternoon. It's Camera Day and the Angels will be available for pictures starting at 11 a.m.... George Brunet (11-13) hurls Monday night's opener of a three-game series with Minnesota. A spectacular duel is on tap Tuesday night when CURT SIMMONS and DEAN CHANCE collide.

STUBING, 6-3 and 218, served in the Giant system for eight years, was purchased by the Cardinals in 1965 and had decided to quit baseball last winter until the Angels purchased the El Paso franchise bought Moose's interest in a beer distributorship there and persuaded him to return. ROCKY BRIDGES, managing at El Paso, told the Angels that Stubing will be a valuable pinch hitter down the stretch. During his 11 seasons in the minors, Moose collected 178 home runs and drove in 765 runs.

RYUN IN 3:56 RUNAWAY FROM KEINO

U.S. Spikers Rout Britain

LONDON — In what had been billed as a wonder mile, Jim Ryun simply ran away from Kipchoge Keino to win by 10 yards Saturday as the United States team annihilated the British, 139-84 in winning 19 of 21 events.

The prospect of a world record mile had pulled in a crowd of 35,000 — the largest to attend a track meet in Britain for 10 years — in the belief that the tall Kansan would better his world mark of 3.51.1 against Keino, a 27-year-old Nairobi policeman, one of the finest athletes that Africa has produced.

Conditions seemed perfect. There was a light crosswind and an overnight shower had gingered up this dusty, slow track. Both Ryun and Keino were fit from weeks of training in the thin air of high altitudes, which theoretically increases performances in the thicker oxygen at sea level.

Driver Killed, 2 Others Hurt

BEDFORD, Pa. (AP) — Driver Joe Csiki was fatally injured and two other drivers hospitalized Saturday when a three-car accident at the Bedford Speedway sent Csiki's Indianapolis-type sprint racer cartwheeling.

Csiki, 32, of Willington, Conn., died in Bedford County Memorial Hospital. Coroner S. Alton Barefoot attributed death to severe head and abdominal injuries.

Ryun had to produce the pace and he shot into the lead with Britain's Alan Simpson and Keino behind him.

Ryun explained his slow but winning mile as the result of too much travel, too little recent competition and too much caution between himself and Keino in the first lap.

"I was content to set behind the leaders and watch Kip and see what he was going to do," Ryun told reporters.

Golfer Equals Strokes, Holes, Age

Ever since he was 66, Dr. R. C. Spangler, retired West Virginia University botony and biology professor, has been playing holes of golf to match his years on his birthday.

Spangler turned 83 Friday and toured the par-70 Morgantown Country Club course three times plus 11 extra holes, firing an 83, 89, two 87s and 46 for the last 11.

He covered nearly 25 miles in 9 hours, 35 minutes — walking the entire distance.

GRADY Hatton, Houston Astros manager, denied quotes from unnamed players accusing him of unreasonable and unusually harsh criticism.

"Nobody is abused on this ball club," claimed Hatton. "You try to be nice to them. If I have a weakness, it's that I'm too easy on them."

Hatton also accused sportswriters and broadcasters of "babying" his players.

REARDON IN HIS PRIME

One can almost hear the insults flying, although picture of umpire Beans Reardon tangling with Casey Stengel, then manager of Boston Braves, is from 1938. Note dapper ump's ice cream pants.

YESTERDAY'S HEROES . . .

They Still Don't Buffalo Beans

While John E. (Beans) Reardon was being interviewed for a National League umpiring position in early 1926, president John A. Heydler tried to exact a pledge from the combative Irishman.

"Promise me you won't get into any fights," Heydler demanded.

"I can't promise that," flared the 125-pound Reardon.

"Well, promise me you won't take the first punch," Heydler countered.

"OK, I'll promise that," Reardon replied grudgingly.

Thus began the 24 years of clawing, bluffing, cussing and toiling which ultimately brought Reardon recognition as one of baseball's most colorful and competent umpires.

It has been 18 years since the staccato-talking Reardon retired from umpiring to concentrate his energies on a beer distributorship in Long Beach. The business venture is now behind him (he sold it recently for a handsome, six-figure price), but Reardon remains active.

"I can't sit around doing nothing," says Reardon, 69. "I'm staying on with the brewing company as a public relations representative. I'll make some personal appearances and speeches when I feel like doing so."

Reardon's speeches are laced with expletives common to baseball clubhouses, and his stories "are all true."

"I know a lot of guys who switch the names around to get themselves into their stories," he says. "Mine are all original. I'm not smart enough to make anything up."

From an umpire's point of view, Beans lumps players into three categories: (1) Good Guys, "If they say something to you, don't answer back." (2) Intermediate Guys, "If they say anything, give them a warning." (3) Bad Guys, "When one of them says anything, don't let him stay in the game or he'll give you trouble the rest of the day."

BEANS REARDON
Still Vocalizing

Umpiring, according to Reardon, is "a lot of psychology. If the players think they can buffalo you, you're dead."

A generation of ballplayers will testify that no one ever buffaloed Beans Reardon.

Clark, Goodrich Listed as Serious Holdouts

By DOUG IVES

With the Laker hierarchy — Jack Kent Cooke, Lou Mohs, Fred Schaus and Bill van Breda Kolff — in town the other night, there was good cause for some behind-the-scenes investigating.

Gleaned from these sources were the following tasty tidbits:

1. Archie Clark and Gail Goodrich are a long way from signing their 1967-68 contracts and are considered genuine holdouts, even though formal training camp doesn't open until Sept. 11.

CLARK

2. Schaus doesn't think the new American Basketball Assn. will survive the season.

3. Rudy LaRusso is hopping mad over a published report that he will drop his lawsuit against the NBA.

4. Rick Barry apparently got some very bad advice when he jumped the new league, and for the most comprehensive, inside look at the incident read this month's Sports Illustrated.

5. Jimmy King, the ex-Laker from Long Beach, is cashing in on the long wallet of San Francisco owner Franklin Mieuli.

6. Elgin Baylor hasn't been heard from, but no one is worried about him jumping to the ABA.

And now for the details:

"Let's just say we are far apart," Mohs said of his contract talks with Clark and Goodrich.

Off the record, Clark thinks he is a superstar and deserves upwards of $50,000. The Lakers, needless to say, are offering about half that amount. Goodrich, meanwhile, refuses to talk to anyone without his attorney being present.

Mohs won't say it for publication, but he doesn't appreciate a man who doesn't peddle his own wares. He feels Goodrich (once Lou's fair-haired boy) should bargain on his own and hammer out a contract.

Incidentally, Tommy Hawkins also is unsigned, but he is expected to agree to a nice raise in the next week.

Schaus's views on the ABA are shared by many, now that the NBA option clause has been upheld.

"They have no boxoffice attractions and no television tieup," said Schaus. "People won't buy an inferior product; the NBA has the best available talent, and even so half the teams are operating in the red every year."

Had Barry and the other "jumpers" been allowed to remain with their new teams, Schaus felt the league would have successfully survived the first year — which, of course, is the roughest.

There is no question that LaRusso was granted negotiation rights by Detroit and conferred seriously with the Warriors, but until the deal, if any, is closed he had no intention of dropping his lawsuit.

If San Francisco loses Barry, look for LaRusso to sign. If Barry returns to the Warriors, and Clyde Lee as well, then owner Mieuli has no need for LaRusso and his high salary request (about $40,000).

It is hard to imagine, but King, a reliable source tells us, signed for slightly over $30,000, which would be double (and then some) of his Laker salary two years ago.

As for Baylor, it is virtually certain he played for $60,000 last year, with a proviso that the figure go to $90,000 if his knees held up and he enjoyed a reasonably good year.

Elgin, of course, had an outstanding season and the Lakers couldn't have been more elated. They never dreamed, though, that he would be dissatisfied with a 50 per cent raise.

SHORT SHOTS: Van Breda Kolff feels he is just marking time until Clark, Goodrich and Baylor return . . . "I don't know what they can do or how they work with the men we have practicing now . . . We're losing valuable time. You must remember, I've not seen them play, or at least very, very little . . . Van has bought a home in Palos Verdes, near Schaus . . . Schaus, incidentally, says coaching was soft compared to his multiple duties as GM . . . "I have a big vacation planned; I'm going to take off two hours next Saturday morning," he says . . . None of the Laker rookies figure to help much this year . . . Cliff Anderson, No. 3 from St. Joseph's, looks better than Randy Mahaffey, No. 1 from Clemson . . . John Wetzel, No. 7 from VPI a year ago, may become a good interior passer, but he doesn't shoot or dribble real well . . . John Block, lost to San Diego (but unsigned) in the expansion draft, has looked great in intrasquad games . . . Jim Barnes suited up for the game in Long Beach Thursday but his Achilles tendon is still too tender . . . Gene Wiley is seriously considering a comeback, and if his knees can take the strain, the Lakers probably will keep him as the No. 3 center . . . The next intra-squad game will be at Rolling Hills High Tuesday night at 8.

Falcons Work Toward Aug. 16 Football Opener

The Long Beach Falcons open their 1967 football campaign Saturday, Aug. 26, hosting the San Diego Tornados at St. John Bosco field.

Among the returnees from last year's Western Football League second-place team are Ron Chronister, halfback; Roger Woods, center, and Ray Mathews, tackle.

Coach Al Williams hopes to build on this nucleus of strong Falcon veterans.

The Falcons work out evenings at Ford Park.

AMIGOS DRILL AT FULLERTON MONDAY

Some 30 candidates will report to coach Al Brightman Monday when the Anaheim Amigos of the American Basketball Assn. open their pre-season training at Cal State Fullerton.

The training schedule calls for three-a-day workouts with a morning session at 10, afternoon practice at 2 and an evening workout at 8.

The evening sessions will be open to the public at no charge.

Throughout the past several months, the Amigos' staff has watched more than 130 players before deciding on prospects they would bring to camp. The Amigos have personally scouted talent at various summer leagues throughout the country in addition to studying game films of other prospects.

* * * *

THE AMIGOS will stress speed and quickness in their offense, according to Brightman.

"With the players we have coming to camp, such as Jeff Congdon, we will play a fast-moving style of basketball," he guaranteed.

For ticket information and season reservations for choice seats, call 635-3180, or write to Anaheim Amigos, 1811 W. Katella Ave., Suite 229, Anaheim.

Fighters Ask Fans Behave

NEW YORK (AP) — Lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz and challenger Ismael Laguna of Panama will embrace each other in the ring Wednesday night, appeal to the fans for sportsmanship and then will attempt to belt each other out in a title fight at Shea Stadium.

Some 2,000 Panamanians, loaded with betting money, are coming north for the third title fight between the two evenly matched 135-pounders. Thousands of Puerto Rican residents of New York will be in the expected crowd of 20,000 or more.

The betting odds are 5-6 and take your pick. The fight will be telecast nationally.

The reason for the appeal is the riotous aftermaths of three main events involving Puerto Rican fighters in a period of 21 months at Madison Square Garden.

In the third and most recent, last May 16, Nigeria's Dick Tiger won the light heavyweight crown from Puerto Rican-born Jose Torres.

Ortiz, a Puerto Rican-born New Yorker who has business interests here and in San Juan, P.R., will appeal to the spectators to accept the decisions of the officials and not to dishonor Puerto Rico, Panama, New York and boxing.

Both said, however, that all they will need in the way of officials is a referee who can count to 10.

"This won't be close," said the slender, flashy, 24-year-old Laguna. "I'm going to put the pressure on him. He'll go by the 10th or 11th round."

Ortiz, who will be 31 in September, also picked the 10th and 11th rounds.

"I just hope he comes to me like he says he will," said Ortiz. "That will make it easier. I'll stretch him out."

Jungle Road Roars to Del Mar Win

By ERNIE MASON

DEL MAR — Exploding through the Del Mar stretch with the shattering effect of a sonic boom, Frank McMahon's small but mighty Jungle Road rocketed to a brilliant record-breaking triumph Saturday in the $19,525 La Jolla Mile before 18,648 observers at this seaside course.

Ridden with precision by the veteran Jack Robinson, Jungle Road took off as if detonated on the far turn to sweep by his rivals and win easily by two lengths in the race record time of 1:34 3-5.

Charlie Boots, a much-improved 3-year-old, ran the finest race of his life but still had to settle for second behind Jungle Road in the once-around affair, final steppingstone to the $30,000-added Del Mar Derby two weeks hence.

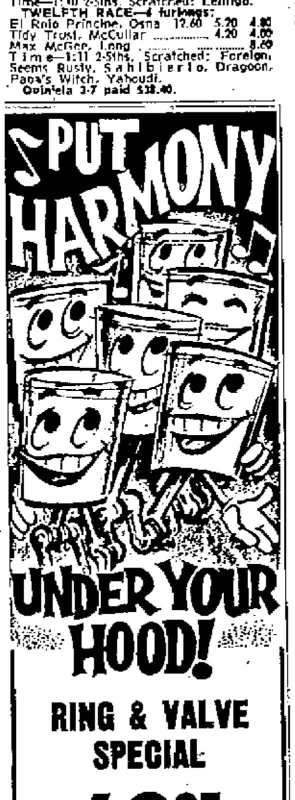

In typical Silky Sullivan-like fashion, Jungle Road dropped far back in the early running. Heading into the far turn, Robinson eased Jungle Road to the outside and the fuse was lit.

CAN YOU PICK A WINNER?

Gamely Boosts Bid for Filly Crown With Easy Victory

Combined Wire Services

Gamely strengthened her claim for the 3-year-old filly championship by winning the $60,200 Alabama Stakes at Saratoga race track Saturday before 27,632.

Ridden by Willie Shoemaker in the colors of William Haggin Perry, Gamely overtook the pace-setting Spire at the head of the stretch then held off Treacherous' late bid along the rail to win by two lengths.

Treacherous finished four lengths ahead of Muse with Silver True fourth in the 87th running of this historic filly stake.

Gamely, who gained prominence at Hollywood Park and won the test stakes here in her first Eastern appearance, ran the 1¼ miles in 2:03 1-5 and paid $3.80, $2.60 and $2.40. Treacherous returned $5.20 and $3.80 with Muse $5 to show.

In Chicago, Fusilier Boy, owned by Harvey Peltier of New Orleans nailed Swinging Mood at the wire and won the $55,700 Grassland Handicap before 28,676 at Arlington Park.

Climax II was third, 1¼ lengths behind Swinging Mood in the 1 1-16 mile grass race.

Fusilier Boy, recently purchased for $35,000 from William H. Bishop, was timed in 1:41 4-5 under Henry Moreno, tying a track record.

Dominar and Hill Clown, co-favorites at 5-2, finished sixth and ninth, respectively, in the field of 10.

Fusilier Boy, moving up gradually, was fourth in the midstretch and then closed swiftly under a left-handed whip ride by Moreno to win by a head at $21.40, $9.00 and $6.20. The victory was worth $33,200.

Elsewhere Star Garter got up in the last stride and won the $28,800 Margate Handicap at Atlantic City and Backbiter, ridden by Leroy Moyers, came from fourth place in the final quarter-mile to win the $15,000 General John W.A. Green Memorial Handicap at Rockingham Park.

From Washington, Pa., Romulus Hanover, racing on a gimpy leg, won the inaugural $85,510 Adios Stakes harness race Saturday by taking two of three heats under Billy Haughton's whip.

Romulus Hanover, a grandson of the sire for which the race was named, outpaced the 2-year-old champion, Best of All.

CRAZY WORLD

X-3 Equals Sex in Washington

By LEON BURNETT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Odds and ends from the nation's Capital — mostly odd:

Rep. Odin Langen, R-Minn., has come across an Agriculture Department equation "produced by an analysis of parity rates of return to farm operator, labor and management and unpaid family labor."

In it, Y equals income observations, X-1 equals age, X-2 equals education, X-3 equals sex. So:

Y equals -3371.3235 plus 226.60418(X X) X-1 minus 51.64458(X), X-2 plus 2.0954.5807(XX) X-3 minus 2.44571(X X) X-1(2) plus 14-94676(XX) X-2(2).

FOOTNOTES:

(X) — The coefficient is sugnificantly different from zero at the 0180 level of probability.

(XX) — The coefficient is significantly different from zero at the 0.999 level of probability.

LANGEN: "It's no wonder that farm income hasn't been what it ought to be."

WAYWARD WORDS

Gov. Otto Kerner, presenting a bust of Abe Lincoln to President Johnson: "Your very dear friends in Illinois wanted you to have this original head."

Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., was talking with the Rev. John Wells from Georgia during hearings by the constitutional rights subcommittee.

Ervin commented that you have to go quite a ways back to find a southerner in the White House — then leaned forward expectantly.

Wells: We now have Lyndon Baines Johnson in the White House. . . ."

Ervin pounced: "He's not a southerner! History shows that when Lyndon Johnson sought the nomination for President, he seceded Texas from the South and put it in the Southwest."

FLASH!

—Sen. Alan Bible, D-Nev., has introduced a bill to restore a dropped comma from a 1936 law granting land to some Indians.

—The State Department wangled the phone number US1-1776 for its consulate at Expo 67 in Montreal.

—Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-N.M., complained to the Pentagon because Armed Forces Radio in Vietnam refuses to play Spanish and Mexican music.

An FBI agent contacted a UPI man for a routine check and presented his credentials — which aren't the most unimpressive around.

The newsman put on his glasses and had a look, explaining, "It's not that I don't trust you, I just think that's pretty."

"Yes," said the agent, not hiding the pride, "we get a lot of compliments on our credentials."

Teen-Agers Protest Ease of Dope Laws

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, Eng. (UPI) — One thouands teen-agers marched through the streets of Newcastle Saturday in a demonstration against any easing of anti-narcotics laws.

The teen-agers carried placards reading "don't let Britain go to pot" (marijuana) and "the only place for LSD is in the bank."

LSD is an abbreviation for British currency — pounds, shillings and pence.

6 Burned Japanese Fishermen Rescued

HONOLULU (AP)—Six crewmen who were seriously burned in a fire aboard the Japanese fishing boat Shoichi Maru No. 28 were headed for Wake Island Saturday aboard the U.S. tanker Shenandoah.

They were taken aboard the ship about 200 miles north of Wake Friday night.

The Coast Guard reported that the boat is still afloat and other members of the 24-man crew are aboard.

Suspect in Slaying Arrested

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police arrested David E. Bernstein, 27, Saturday as a suspect in the slaying of a young mother of two in her apartment in the Baldwin Hills area.

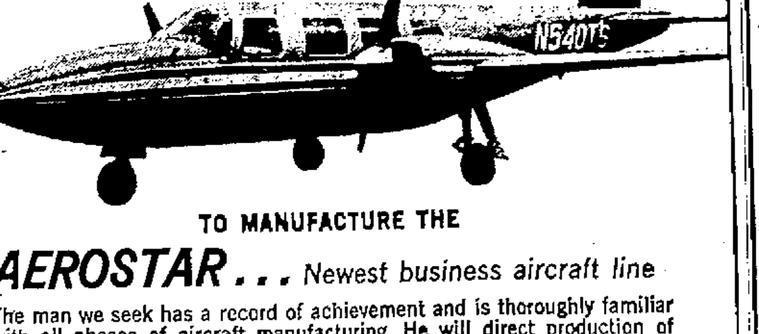

Mrs. Patricia Ann Walter, 24, was stabbed to death Friday night when she apparently opened a closet door in her bedroom and found a burglar, armed with a knife, hidden there, officers said.

Her two small sons, Robert 4, and Keith, 5, were watching television in another room when the slaying took place, officers said.

Neighbors, hearing the children's screams' saw the assailant as he fled the apartment. They gave his description to police.

Officers arrested Bernstein, a bill collector who lives about two blocks from the victim's apartment, several hours later. He was booked on suspicion of murder.

30 Compete for North American OK Dinghy Title at Alamitos Bay

The North American championship in the OK Dinghy sailboat class goes on the block here this week as Alamitos Bay Yacht Club plays host to an estimated 30 skippers.

The 13-foot cat-rigged boats primarily seem to attract young skippers, but at least one Olympic Class medal-winner will be competing. He is Pete Barrett of the host ABYC, who won a silver medal at the 1964 Tokyo Olympics in the Finn class.

Beverly Curry, Alamitos Bay OK Dinghy Fleet captain and one of the few women skippers who will compete, said also that one entry is expected from New Zealand.

Registration will take place Monday. Racing will commence Tuesday, with two races each day through Thursday.

Racing will be on ABYC's Olympic course, with skippers sailing a triangular course averaging 5.5 miles.

The defending champion is Ruddy Lewis of Seattle, but Miss Curry said there is some doubt that he will be able to make this year's competition.

An added bonus for this year's winner will be a $500 contributions from the National OK Dinghy Association to help finance transportation to next year's world championships in Australia.

First Oil Island Nears Its Millionth Barrel

WITH CITY IN BACKGROUND, LONG BEACH'S FIRST "PETROLEUM PARK" IS SHOWN. FIRST OF THUMS' ISLANDS SPROUTS OIL WELLS, PALM TREES AND "BUILDINGS" WITH EASE.

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

Sometime next month, about the time the first well on Oil Island Alfa becomes one year old, production from the camouflaged, man-made offshore island will pass the one million barrel mark.

Since the first well was spudded-in on Sept. 21, 1966 production rate has steadily increased with the completion of each well. Current production rate is approximately 7,700 barrels per day, according to a Thums Long Beach Co. official.

Current total production is in excess of 750,000 barrels, states Jack Russell, Thums general manager.

AS OF AUG. 1, a total of 38 wells had been completed by the four movable disguised drilling towers. Among the completed wells are nine water injection wells pumping back into the oil-rich East Wilmington Field one and quarter barrels of water for each barrel of oil removed.

The water is used to maintain underground pressures as a means of subsidence control.

Island Alfa, located just offshore between Alamitos and Cerritos Avenues, was built at a cost of $2.4 million. Each of the four covered drilling towers decorated to resemble high-rise buildings was built at an additional cost of $1.5 million.

* * * *

OIL-HANDLING FACILITIES added another $4 million to the cost. The figure does not include the cost of landscaping and "environmentalizing" of the island.

Thums, agent for the five companies who are field contractor to the City of Long Beach, operator of the Long Beach Unit, expects to drill a total of 191 wells on the island.

Rate of well completion is four wells approximately every 25 days. At this rate drilling is expected to continue for more than two and a half years.

Ultimate production from the island is expected to top 148,000,000 barrels during the lifetime of the field.

At the current price being offered by oil refineries, $2.02 per barrel, the revenue from Island Alpha is expected to exceed $300 million.

Opened in Grandeur, Famed Old Del Mar Hotel Doomed

DEL MAR — The story of the old Del Mar Hotel is one of grandeur, fame and disappointment — in that order.

Finis will be written to the hotel history by a Farewell Fiesta sponsored Sunday Aug. 27, by the Del Mar Chamber of Commerce.

The "grand old lady of Del Mar" will make way for a maiden in the form of a $10 million apartment complex on the bluff overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

CONSTRUCTION OF the hotel began in 1908 after Del Mar's first hostelry, the Newport Inn, burned to the ground in 1890 with only five year's existence.

It opened in 1910 as the Stratford Inn and became one of the most popular watering holes for early Hollywood stars and financiers.

Rudolph Valentino, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., Jack Dempsey all were among the regulars who populated the place.

In 1937, Bing Crosby and Pat O'Brien opened the Del Mar Race Track nearby and the hotel became a place where you actually needed a personal invitation even to register for a room.

JIMMY DURANTE recalls a night when the Ritz Brothers broke up a gin rummy game in the lobby by driving a midget car through the front entrance. He also remembers Crosby and friends doing their "girl watching" at the hotel-owned beach property near the plunge where Pola Negri and other shapely stars of the era could be seen.

After Crosby and O'Brien sold their interest in the Del Mar Race Track in 1954, the hotel's decline began, as the Hollywood stars became scarce.

Its openings and closings for summer months were like a revolving door through the late 1950's and early 1960s. Each new lesee would announce at summer's opening that this would be a return of the "Good Old Days." Each fall, as soon as the race track crowd would leave town, the grand old lady would go back to sleep.

DEL MAR'S FIRST City Hall opened in the hotel in Summer 1959 — but when the lessee failed to pay the power bill after the race season, the City Council found itself without electricity. Mainly for the sake of photographers, candles were held by the city attorney and mayor while a proclamation was read. When the flashbulbs stopped popping, the city fathers finished the meeting with flashlights.

After all attempts to keep the hotel going, she finally breathed her final gasp the day the races closed Sept .13, 1963. The place was closed, never to open again as a hotel.

This was after the once-famous Knight's Room bar had been converted unsuccessfully into the Pago-Pago Room, an oddity for Stratford-on-Avon architecture. The bamboo curtain walls still stand. A few years earlier, the same cocktail lounge had been tried out as a chapel for the retirement community which populated the hostelry briefly — in an episode which resulted in a District Attorney's investigation for alleged fraud.

IN THE YEARS of its glory, the hotel included 120 rooms in the original building and six "cottages." Two of the cottages were razed to make way for the new Del Mar Post Office two years ago.

Today the fresh water swimming pool stands empty. Instead of swishing tennis balls, the courts near the pool are visited by tumbling eucalyptus leaves.

The old "annex" motel on the beach has been sold to other interests, along with the beachfront restaurant. The acreage the hotel owners held to the east on Pacific Highway (now Camino Del Mar) is a shopping center.

The Chamber of Commerce has recruited various civic clubs to help spruce up the grounds for the "Farewell Fiesta." The lawns will be mowed; the four years of litter removed.

The public is invited to open house from 11 a.m. until dark. Dancing and a no-host buffet are planned.

GE Starts Big Repair Facility in Anaheim

General Electric Co. and city officials joined forces in Anaheim at groundbreaking ceremonies for construction of a new apparatus repair shop.

The high-bay facility, which is expected to be operational in November, will be used for large industrial apparatus repair. The facility will be the 61st operated by General Electric's Service Shops Dept.

The new 10,000-square-foot facility will be located on a six acre site on the north side of La Palma Avenue between Jefferson and Dowling Streets.

"This new operation will enable us to better serve our many customers in the Los Angeles and Southern California area," according to Donald P. Donovan, Los Angeles manager for the service shops.

Donovan explained that the new facility will house a variety of major machine tools and will provide ample room for the repair and maintenance of huge industrial and electric utility apparatus.

According to Donovan, the large machine shop will have boring mills, lathes, drill presses and tooling for repairs and modification to steam turbines, AC and DC motors and generators.

In addition, the facility will house a 50-ton crane, providing 35-foot lift clearance within the 50-foot, high-bay structure, thus providing a capability necessary for handling large transformers and generators.

The Anaheim shop will also be equipped to provide railroad switch engine repair, large traction motor generator machine and rewind work. A Santa Fe Railroad spur adjacent to the facility will provide convenient rail access for heavy equipment.

ANOTHER LANDMARK TO GO

The historic Del Mar Hotel at Del Mar, which started life as the Stratford Inn in 1910, is soon to be razed to make way for a $10 million apartment complex and a Farewell Fiesta to mark its passing is planned by the Chamber of Commerce Aug. 27. This is a reproduction of a photograph taken soon after it opened. The hotel holds nostalgic memories for many famous personalities for it was a favorite place for movie stars of old.

When Labor Costs Go Up, So Do Prices, Naturally

While the pace of the economy may be showing more and more signs of slow-down there seems to be no letup for the rising costs. Higher taxes we knew would come, but we didn't expect to get the blows that were dealt by announcements from the State, Federal Government and even the local school board all within a week.

So no one can blame labor for demanding more money when his tax problems are increased. And then when he gets higher pay, he and the rest of the buying public must pay for the increase.

For example, the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., announced this past week that rising labor, distribution and transportation costs require the company to increase prices on tires and tubes 5.1 per cent.

The new prices follow the recent signing of a three-year contract with the United Rubber Workers union that will increase labor costs 51.1 cents an hour or 11 per cent in the first year alone, it was explained. Labor cost increases in the second and third years of the URW contract will bring the total rise in labor costs to 18 per cent—or more than 85 cents an hour, Goodyear said.

THE RECENT SETTLEMENT on wages and non-wage benefits—pensions, insurance, hospitalization, vacations and supplemental unemployment benefits—are estimated to boost to 56 per cent the overall rise in rubber industry labor costs from the 1957-59 level.

Specifically, prices will rise 3.5 per cent to 9 per cent on all passenger car tires, 5 per cent to 7.5 per cent on truck tires, 5 per cent on industrial tires, 5 per cent to 10 per cent on farm tires, and 2.5 per cent to 5 per cent on inner tubes.

As an example, the company cited its most popular-selling replacement passenger tire the 7.75-14 Safety All-Weather reversible whitewall. This will increase in list price from $28.05 to $29.05, approximately 3.5 per cent. The comparable tire ten years ago listed at $33.50.

ENDORSING HOUSING PROPOSALS that would help people of low income, a representative of the National Association of Real Estate Boards is questioning the proliferation of bills directed toward the wrong target—federal housing subsidies for families of moderate income.

"I want to emphasize that the subsidy programs we endorse are designed to assist families of low incomes—those within the eligibility range of public housing—to become home owners. This is a most worthy objective," declared Silas F. Albert, Grand Rapids, Mich., chairman of the Realtors' Washington Committee of NAREB, in testifying before the Subcommittee on Housing and Urban Affairs, Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

Albert cited 1960 Bureau of Census figures to show that about 90 per cent of families of moderate income (between $4,000 and $8,000), home owners and renters alike, in the central cities, live in standard housing.

"Therefore, we oppose certain of the new bills primarily because they are directed at the wrong people. They would provide federal subsidies to families who have demonstrated a capability for providing adequate shelter for themselves."

POINTING TO THE highly-publicized Percy Plan, authored by Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., as an example, Albert criticized it for two major flaws:

1. It would generally benefit the family of moderate income rather than the family of low income where the major need exists.

2. It calls for a federal subsidy with little federal supervision. If enacted, the Home Ownership Foundation created by it would duplicate functions now performed by the FHA, but without comparable resources, experience, and statutory authority.

Albert pointed out that NAREB has endorsed FHA rent supplements, the rent certificate program for leasing existing homes, and the FHA section 221(h), two of which involve assistance to low-income groups for home ownership.

He also reiterated NAREB's positive proposals directed toward stabilizing the mortgage market and preventing the type of credit crunch which in 1966 prevented thousands of Americans from buying homes. These include:

1. Reorganize the Federal National Mortgage Association as an independent agency and authorize it to deal in conventional loans as well as government-insured and government-guaranteed loans.

2. Remove the statutory ceiling on FHA and VA interest rates as the only way to solve the problem of discounts.

AMERICANS MUST EXPECT inflation as inevitable. It has become as much a part of the American life as death and taxes.

This is the belief of Duane Evans, Long Beach divisional manager of Equity Funding Corp., 120 E. Ocean Blvd.

Evans, whose firm is a subsidiary of Los Angeles-based Equity Funding Corp. of America, which sells insurance and mutual funds, both separately and in coordinated acquisition programs, said that the American economy would probably grow about 6 per cent per year for the next year or so, but that inflation would offset half of the gain.

He attributed inflation's omnipresence to the desire of every American to better his own lot.

"AS LONG AS WE WANT to compete, as long as we have to have more than last year, we are going to pay more. Technology, such as automation, actually has proved a method to keep the rate of inflation down," Evans said.

"A study of our economy over the past 100 years would show a continually rising trend line of inflation. A study of the value of a bushel of wheat against the pound sterling in England since the year 1420 recently showed a continually rising value for the wheat and declining value for the pound."

Evans pointed out that even during deflationary intervals at least some people make money and help boost inflation to even higher levels upon recovery.

BANK OF AMERICA Travelers Cheques has launched project NIFTY—a summer experience for 10 youngsters from some of the nation's hardcore poverty areas, who will visit New York City and Canada's Expo 67.

NIFTY stands for New Impressions For Ten Youngsters.

Originator of the program is Ernest J. Young, Vice President of the bank's travelers cheques operations.

"Because our travelers cheques are so frequently used by visitors to Expo 67, we have had close commercial ties with the Exposition. Through these ties we have been impressed by the brotherhood theme that underlies the United Nations designation of 1967 as International Tourist Year, and of Canada's Exposition. Project NIFTY is our attempt to contribute."

In providing new impressions for 10 youngsters, said Young, the bank hopes to stress the broadening aspects of travel.

What makes the program unusual, according to Young, is the fact that an effort will be made to choose boys who have not previously been exposed to exceptional opportunities or experiences.

THE BOYS SELECTED will be between 14 and 16 years of age. They will come from the designated poverty areas of the nation and must never have traveled outside their home states. They must be better than average students, but need not be "A" students.

The youths will come from some of the largest cities in the country.

Young said that the Travelers Cheques department of the bank will fly the students to New York City on Aug. 19, outfit them in new clothes, provide accommodations, and take them sightseeing. Included in the New York itinerary is a baseball game and the meeting of some of the players.

After three days in New York City the boys will fly to Montreal to visit Expo 67 for three days. They will receive spending money allowances in both cities.

Index Falls After Riots and Strike

Copyright 1967 by McGraw-Hill, Inc.

BUSINESS WEEK index

1957-59 average	Year ago	Month ago	Week ago	Latest week
100	157.8	157.0	158.3	157.4

Extraordinary conditions across the nation combined to pull the Index almost a full point below the previous week. Civil disorder and a brief rail strike had a negative effect on economic activity, and the Index inched below its year ago level for the first time this year.

Although many auto plants were closed for model changeovers, rioting in Michigan extended the shutdowns several days. Auto production dropped 10.2 per cent in the latest week, and remains 2 per cent below a year ago.

Steel production — affected only slightly by Michigan's riots — slipped 1.5 per cent below the previous week, after seasonal adjustment. September orders for steel show an increase in demand, but producers are still anxiously watching auto schedules.

A two-day railroad walkout pulled both carloading components down this week. Miscellaneous carloadings dropped 11.3 per cent and all other carloadings decreased 7.2 per cent in the latest week.

New Builders Group Meets Monday Night

The first meeting of the Orange County Chapter of the Building Industry Association of California Inc. (formed by consolidation of the Building Contractors Association of California Inc. and the Home Builders Council of Los Angeles, Orange, and Ventura Counties) will be held at the Disneyland Hotel Monday evening. The dinner, scheduled for 7:15, will be held in the Poolside Room and will be preceded by cocktails at 6:30 p.m.

Past Prexies to Be Honored

Garden Grove realtors will honor past presidents of the 500-member board at a breakfast Tuesday in the board auditorium at 10042 Lampson Ave., Garden Grove.

Originally the board was known as the West Orange County Division of the Santa Ana Board, and retained the West Orange County name when less than 100 members decided in 1954 to separate completely from their parent board and "go it alone." Victor B. Smith, now retired, served as the charter president. For two years of the early growing pains period 1955 and 1956, Joe F. Furr was at the helm.

$500,000 Paramount Plant

Construction is underway on a new $500,000 Industrial Control System Plant on a two-acre site at Garfield Avenue and Jefferson Street in Paramount. The firm operates industrial laundry services.

The single-story, 20,000 square foot plant is scheduled to be completed in early 1968.

Industrial Control System, a subsidiary of Work Wear Corp. of Cleveland, presently operates a plant at 5701 Compton Blvd. which will be replaced by the Paramount facility.

E. E. Harris, AIA, of Redondo Beach is the architect for the project being built by Mark IV Construction, Inc. of Inglewood.

WORK WEAR expects to expand the operation in the new plant to 160 employes with an annual payroll in excess of $1 million. The Industrial Control Service Plant currently employs 95 people with an annual payroll of $600,000 and operates a fleet of 32 trucks.

The entire Paramount building will be gas air conditioned and will include keep water at a temperature of 200 degrees. It will feature an aluminum canopy entry, 4000 square feet of office space, 60,000 square feet of parking area for company trucks and customers, and a lunch room according to Charles I. Sam Lyons Back With Title Co.

Sam Lyons Sr., a leader in the business and civic activities of Orange County over three decades, has returned to the title insurance industry as director of community relations for the Stewart Title Co.

The announcement was made by Bob Moore, vice-president and manager of the Santa Ana-based firm.

He then turned to the newspaper profession where he was a staff reporter and columnist for the Anaheim Bulletin, before joining Stewart.

Lyons resides with his wife, Margaret, at 1115 North Flower Street, Santa Ana.

Many Bright Spots in Area's Economy

Southern California's economy continued its steady climb during the first half of 1967, according to a report by the Economic Research Department of Security First National Bank.

During the six-month period, record levels were set in employment, industrial power sales, demand deposits, business loans, personal income, manufacturing payrolls and department store sales.

Gains also were posted in population, petroleum production, engineering construction and industrial building.

Statistics also show 1967 improvements in area unemployment and business failures. Declines were recorded in real estate sales activity, commercial building and taxable retail sales.

* * * *

THE FOLLOWING are highlights from Security Bank's recap of mid-year business activity:

Business Activity — Since October, the 14 Southern counties' economic index has moved gradually upward to register a new high.

Population — Southern California has added 311,000 persons in the past 12 months to reach an estimated population of 12,615,000. Its growth rate has declined but remains substantial.

Employment — An average of 4.5 million civilians were employed in Southland metropolitan areas during the first half of 1967. The area had an average of 175,000 more jobholders at that time than during the first half of 1966. Manufacturing in the Los Angeles-Orange County area, alone, increased employment by 48,000 jobs, on a year-to-year comparative basis.

Unemployment — During the first half of 1967 the ratio of unemployed averaged 4.5 percent of the total civilian labor force in Southland metropolitan areas. The ratio was improved slightly from a year earlier, when it was 4.7 percent. National first-half unemployment averagss were 3.8 percent in 1966 and 3.7 percent in 1967.

Industrial Power Sales— Reflecting a higher level of manufacturing output, Los Angeles area power sales were up about 5.2 percent from year-earlier levels.

* * * *

PETROLEUM PRODUCTION — The average daily production of petroleum in California is now equal to on record in 11 years and up 4.6 percent above production in early 1966. Production has risen steadily for three years.

Business Failures — Approximately 980 local enterprises with liabilities of nearly $100 million have failed in the first half of 1967. Area failures reached a peak in late 1966 and have declined steadily since that time.

Personal Income — A ic Shops Dp. California total of $68.0 billion in personal income was recorded for the first quarter in 1967. Income increased 7.8 percent above the level for the first quarter of 1966 and 2.3 percent over the total for the fourth quarter of 1966.

Cost of Living — The Los Angeles area Consumer Price Index averaged 116.0 during the first few months of 1967, remaining about 2 percent above the year-ago period. Comparatively, the national CPI is up 3 percent.

Manufacturing Payrolls — In the Los Angeles-Orange area, manufacturing payrolls averaged 9.2 percent higher than a year ago. Additional workers and incaeased wages accounted nearly entirely for the gain. Average hours worked and overtime remained relatively unchanged.

Retail Sales — Southern California's taxable retail sales during the first quarter decreased slightly, by 1.4 percent. Department store sales index, however, indicated an increase of about 5 percent above the year-earlier period.

Construction — Southern California construction was down 7 percent from a year ago. In breaking down building activity, however, statistics revealed that engineering construction jumped by 23.3 percent, industrial building attained its highest level since 1957, and residential building has picked up month by month from its low point at the end of 1966.

Real Estate — As measured by number of deeds filed, real estate activity dropped 21.2 percent in Los Angeles County, 22.4 percent in Orange County and 11.0 percent in San Diego County. Real estate loan volume in the Los Angeles-Orange area dipped 35.3 percent from the previous year's volume. For the first time in the history of Security Bank's index, market prices for single family homes in the Los Angeles area remained constant for three consecutive periods. Home building costs in Greater Los Angeles declined slightly during the first quarter of 1967.

She'll Get $2,500 Prize Despite Contest Mixup

BEND, Ore. — Mrs. Carol Crandall of Bend, whose venture into the used car business almost cost her $2,500, was ahead by that much today.

Standard Oil Co. of California said it was going to pay her that sum as a first prize winner in the company's "Lucky License" contest, even though she had sold her automobile for $300 before learning that she was the winner.

"There was a mixup somewhere and although we do not feel we were responsible, we're paying the prize anyway in the interests of all concerned," a company spokesman said.

Standard has been running the contest on a trial basis in Oregon for the last two months and plans to extend it to California, Nevada, Arizona and Hawaii this coming Saturday.

The spokesman explained that the winning numbers were supplied directly to Standard Stations and Chevron Dealers by an outside contest agency and that the company itself had no part in the selection or distribution of the numbers.

He added that precautions are being rigidly tightened to prevent a recurrence of the Bend mixup.

Try New Way to Clean Air

CANOGA PARK (UPI) — A new method of extracting sulfur dioxide from polluted air in the form of useful sulfuric acid is being developed by Atomics International Division of North American Aviation, Inc., for the U.S. Public Health Service. If the method, called the molten salt process, proves completely feasible, it could play a substantial role in the control of air pollution.

Huge L.A. Project One Step Nearer

LOS ANGELES (CNS) — A Rockefeller Center-type complex of skyscrapers in downtown Los Angeles came one step closer to reality as a nationally known firm was named developer for the project.

Officials at Atlantic Richfield Co., the backers of the building complex, announced the appointment of Cushman & Wakefield, Inc., to supervise the planning, construction and development of project.

The New York-based development firm will guide the planned erection of two 55-story office towers, linked by a smaller building in a landscaped setting. it will be the largest private building project ever undertaken in the downtown area.

The complex would be erected under a concept being considered for redevelopment of the block bounded by Fifth, Sixth, Flower and Figueroa streets.

Expected to cost $120 million, the project will require the demolition of the black and gold Richfield Building — a downtown landmark since 1929.

Scheduled for completion by late 1970, the development is adjacent to the Bunker Hill renewal site. Preliminary demolition and land clearance are slated for mid-1968.

Paint on New Floor Over Former Surface

You can now have a new floor by simply painting one on — right over almost any surface. This new concept in flooring systems — Electo Seamless (TM)—is a colorful combination of random-shaped flakes that you sprinkle between layers of plastic, which paints on easily with roller or brush. This results in a finished floor that is as beautiful as it is durable. And maintenance is cut in half! No waxing, no buffing, the easiest floor to clean imaginable!

With Electo Seamless (TM), anyone can do the average kitchen floor in a total of four working hours. And it isn't necessary to close down the working area. It can be used on kitchens, bathrooms, hallways, patios, terraces and table tops. It can be applied over almost any surface inside or outside, including linoleum, wood, concrete and resilient tile. And it will not yellow, even outdoors.

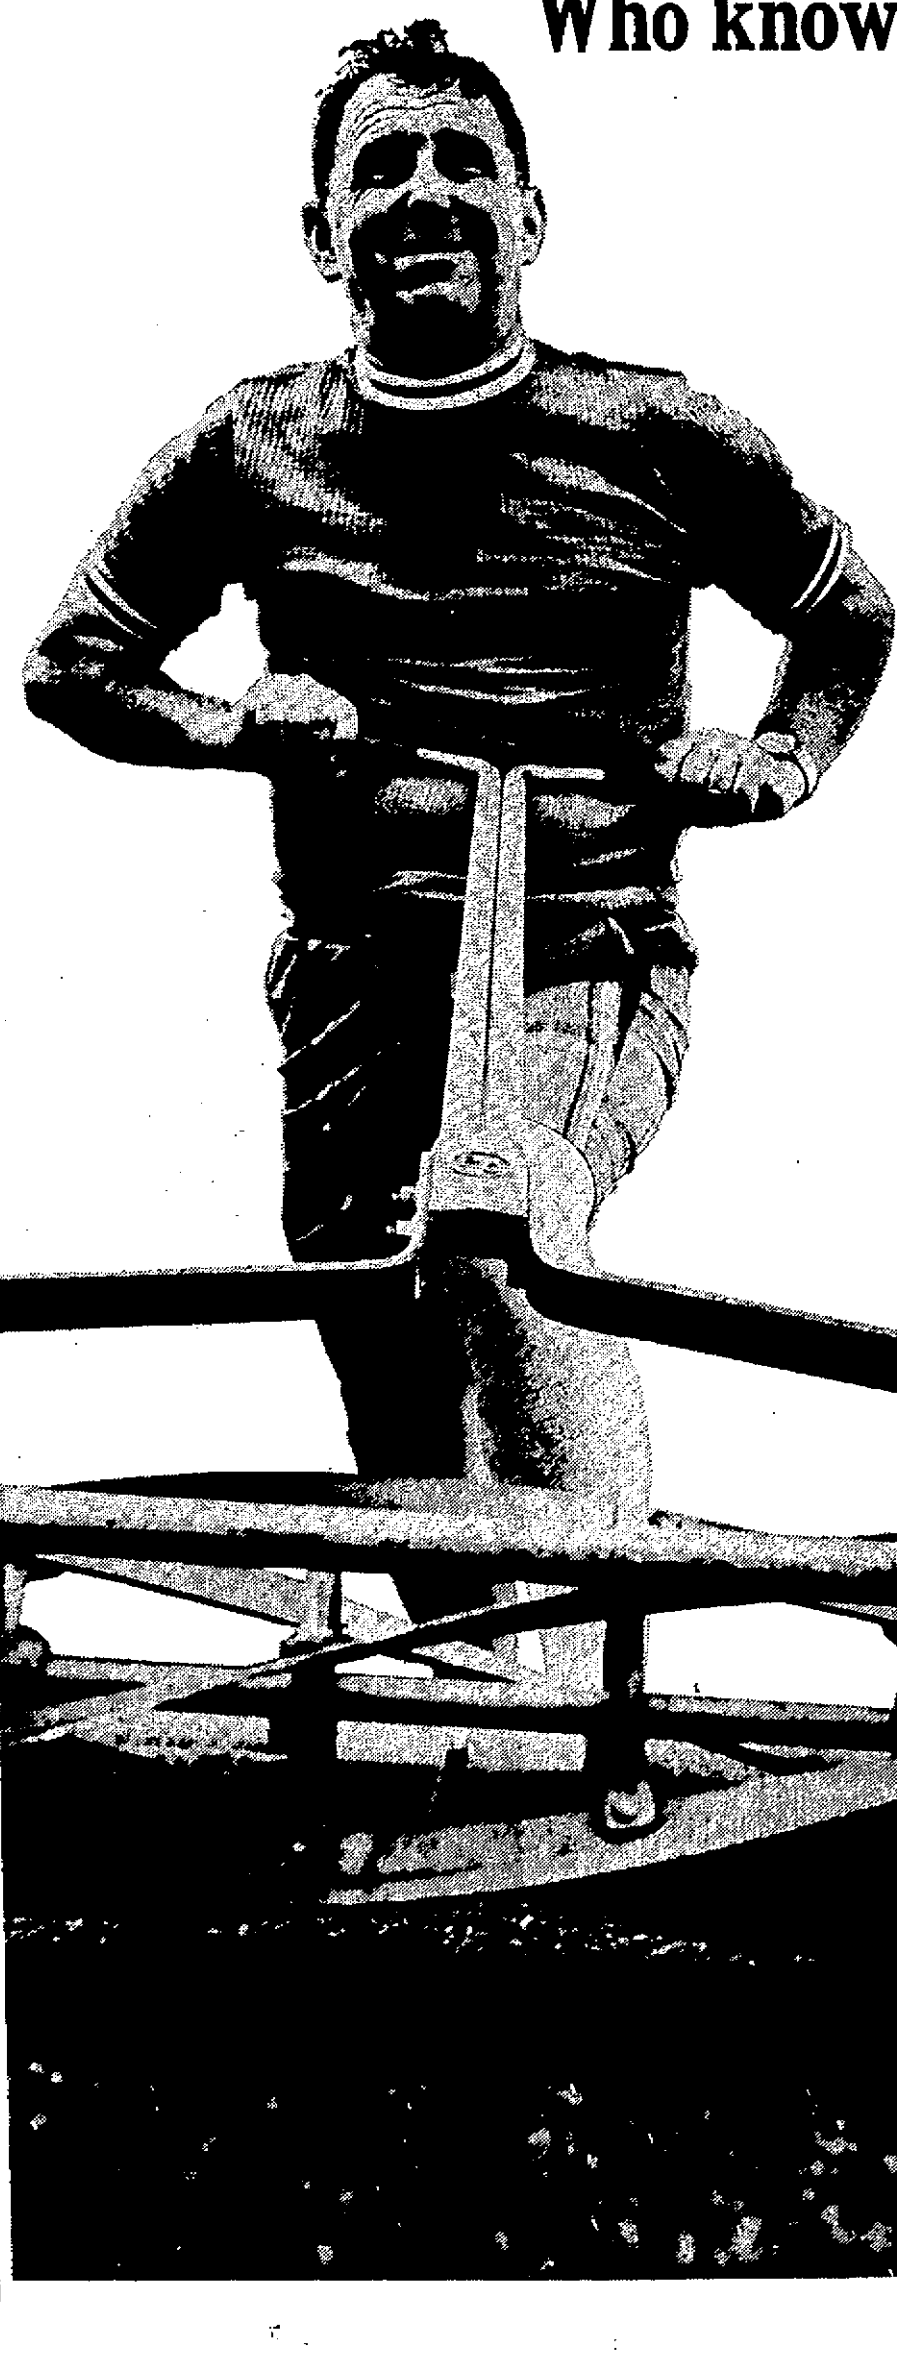

The color flakes are premixed to insure a consistent pattern, and the floor can be touched-up at any stage — even after the final finish coat.

Royal Hawaiian Saved

HONOLULU (AP) — Waikiki's famous Royal Hawaiian Hotel will not be demolished.

The Sheraton Hawaii Corp. which owns the "Pink Palace," and the Bishop estate, which owns most of the land on which the hotel is situated, have announced a $50 million development program which will include restoration and improvement of the Royal Hawaiian.

The Bishop estate had earlier announced plans to tear down the old hotel to make way for a high-rise hotel complex.

A 1,200-room high-rise hotel and convention center will be included in the development program, along with a new 120-room wing to the existing hotel and a 650-space parking garage.

The estate also extended Sheraton's lease on the property for 75 years.

The complex is expected to be completed before January 1970.

Joint Meeting Set for Harbor Boards

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

The Board of Harbor Commissioners of the Port of Long Beach have accepted an invitation to sit down with their highly competitive counterparts on the Los Angeles Harbor Commission in an attempt to solve some mutual problems.

Llewellyn Bixby Jr., president of the Long Beach Board agreed to accept the invitation extended by Pietro Di Carlo, president of the Los Angeles Board, to meet for lunch Aug. 16.

The historic meeting is to take place on the fantail of the Princess Louise overlooking the Main Channel in the Port of Los Angeles.

* * * *

THE GET TOGETHER is a result of a request of the Industry and Transportation Committee of the Los Angeles City Council.

Just what the two boards will discuss has not been established but it is a fair bet that neither commission is going to give away any secrets.

Although the two policy-making boards and administrative staffs of the side-by-side ports are highly competitive one program which has been suggested as lending itself to cooperation between the two harbors is overseas advertising and promotion.

* * * *

IT HAS BEEN SUGGESTED the two ports use a jointly sponsored campaign to promote the multi-billion dollar Southern California market.

Trade journal ads could carry the names of both ports. This would bring togegher the muscle of both ports in a two-fisted show of strength to fight off competition from San Francisco, Oakland, and San Diego.

With the names of both local ports appearing on overseas advertising and with management cooperating in the solicitation of foreign cargo one port would gain six new customers while the other picked a half dozen new customers.

AMERICAN PRESIDENT LINES claims there is nothing political behind the decision to change the name of its new cargo ship from President Johnson to President McKinley.

The reason for the change, says APL, is that the company had intended to dispose of its present President Johnson once the new C-4 cargo vessel now under construction was completed. Instead the line will continue to operate the older ship. It would be much too confusing to have two President Johnsons they concluded.

Work on all phases of the new unit, the first increment of which will contain 39 homes, is being expedited to meet the opening date. Since the development opened, a little more than a year ago, he added, total sales are now well past the $4 million mark.

Homes at Westhaven range in price from $26,950, with excellent financing terms available, including FHA, VA and conventional terms. McFarland added that 30-year FHA loans with interest rates of 5¾ per cent are also available.

Third Real Estate Store Is Operating

SHADES OF PAST REVIVED . . . In New Realty Office

Official opening of the Real Estate Store No. 3 at 5318 E. Second St., in Belmont Shore, was announced by Jack B. Krueger, president. This is the third in a planned expansion of 10 stores to service the areas of Lakewood, Long Beach and their surroundings. Once again, old fashioned decor combined with their motto of "old fashioned courtesy and service" is the theme for this unique real estate chain.

Each office has something rare and different for the antique lovers. It began with store No. 1, which opened at the corner of Clark Avenue and Spring Street in March of 1966 with its traditional furnishings developed around the pot bellied stove, the old roll top desk and Grandma's kitchen hoosier. The firm expanded in September to their own building at 2281 E. Carson Street, which features an old fashioned pool room "in the back for the boys." This building was planned completely to serve the needs of the real estate buying and selling public and yet adheres to the traditional American look of days gone by.

The Real Estate Store currently employes 38 associates and has sold approximately $7,000,000 worth of property since its inception. All kinds of property are sold, exchanged and escrowed ranging from single family residences to shopping centers and businesses in a complete one-stop real estate service. All associates are people with many years of experience in this business. The three owners, Dick Mulder, Jack Krueger and Curt Gray all previously managed offices for a major real estate firm prior to the advent of the Real Estate Store.

Orange County Apartment Rentals to Increase $10 to $50 Monthly

The apartment house dweller in Orange County will soon have to come up with more money for his monthly rent payment, says Mr. Allen L. Banick, vice-president of the Orange County Apartment House Association. The rent increase, which will take place within the next two months, will cost the tenant from $10 to $50 per month more.

Many factors are contributing to this increase said Banick, who also is regional vice-president for the California Apartment Owners Association and a director of the National Apartment Owners Association.

Some of these factors are a direct result of local conditions and the rest are because of State andNational conditions that influence operating costs.

* * * *

"THE MAJOR contributing factor here in Orange County is the recent reassessment of all property by the county assessors office.

"All property in the county, regardless of what improvements are on it, has been increased in value from 16 per cent to 500 per cent, This new value is not only affecting the apartment house owner but the home owner as well stated Banick.

"Because of the new assessed value and if the tax rate increases by approximately 5.5 per cent as it did last year, the apartment house owner can count on paying almost 17 per cent of his annual gross income for property taxes. In the past year alone operating costs have increased 10 per cent while the rental price structure has remained on par with that charged in 1960. Thomas H. Bearden, a specialist in the apartment appraisal field, recently reported his cost index shows apartment building costs have also gone up 13.6 per cent since 1963.

* * * *

"THE APARTMENT house owner that refuses to face the economic facts of building life and operating costs and continues to hold rental rates steady is losing money.

"One other major factor was the recent increase of fire insurance rates. On April 1, 1967, the Pacific Fire Rating Bureau increases the fire insurance rates on apartment houses 30 per cent.

"The apartment owner can no longer absorb any further cost increase and conduct a profitable operation. He has cut his operating costs to the bone to try to avoid a rent increase but he no longer has any alternative if he is to stay in business.

"Sooner or later the day of reckoning must come," Banick said. "For many, that day has come." Orange County tenants have enjoyed some of the lowest rental rates in the nation for many years because of the overbuilding that existed here a few years ago. Most apartments have rented for $25 to $50 per month below what they were originally designed to rent for, but those days are over."

ALL STORES NOW OCCUPIED

The Candlewood Shopping Center, at 4419 Candlewood St. in Lakewood is now open, with all 24 stores occupied. The $700,000 center is owned by Lakewood Commercial Enterprises, Inc. and features a complete Home Center, comprising several specialty shops. Architect was Robert Clement & Asssociates, and general contractor was Willens & Bertisch, with Al Hillberry as project supervisor. Leasing agent is J. K. Eichenbaum & Associates. All stores in the 80,000 square foot project were leased prior to ground breaking, and construction was completed within five months of the ground breaking.

WORLD OF WINGS

By LEE CRAIG
Aviation Eidtor

For those with more family than money, Aero Commander's solution is their four-place Model 100, which comes with standard equipment for $8,500.

Now handling the 100, along with other, bigger Aero Commanders, is a new firm at Long Beach Airport, Competition Aircraft Sales, 2611 E. Spring St., with Jerry Hadrin dealing.

With Jerry along, we flew the 100 recently and, with its price in mind — considerably below Cessna's 172 — were favorably impressed with its flying qualities.

The favorable impression, however, comes with several reservations.

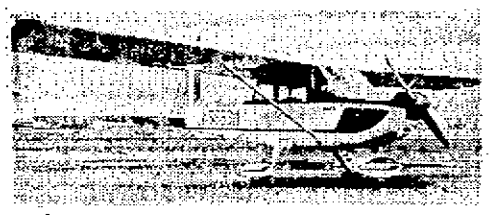

* * * *

THE LAST HIGH-WING airplane we've flown other than a 172 was a Ford Tri-motor, which had a cockpit noise level roughly comparable with the 100. A super-soundproofing option, Jerry says, is in the mill.

Also, the left-hand seat was a trifle too close to the cabin top for our outsize frame and there was no adjustment available. Ventilation is poor, but this, too, is being fixed.

The 100 is neatly, functionally arranged inside with washable plastic seats, panels and headliner. Visibility is excellent and workmanship is of high quality.

Plush, the 100 is not. But, if you'd rather have the money than the frills and need four seats, it's worth a look.

To Place Some Desilu Facilities for Sale

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gulf and Western, Inc., has agreed to comply with a federal anti-trust order to sell some of the facilities it is acquiring from Desilu Productions.

The government contends that the sale of Desilu to Gulf and Western, parent company of Paramount Pictures, violates the Clayton Anti-trust Act by limiting existing or potential competition in studio equipment rentals.

The order requires Gulf and Western to sell 20 of Desilu's 34 sound stages and a backlot with a year or to to engage a Broker acceptable to the government to seek a buyer in the second year.

Gulf and Western's purchase provided that Desilu shareholders would receive a half share of Gulf and Western $5.75 sinking fund preferred stock in return for 10 shares of Desilu common stock.

Cities Must Get New Transit Systems At Once to Survive

HONOLULU — Preservation of the nation's cities in the face of mounting traffic congestion requires prompt rejuvenation of the rapid transit industry, a financial consultant to San Francisco's transit system says.

Citing the dramatic $1 billion San Francisco Bay transit program as an example of progress, Winthrop S. Curvin, vice president of Smith Barney & Co., Inc., told the American Bar Association that New York, Boston, Washington, Atlanta, Los Angeles and other metropolitan centers require similar projects.

"The San Francisco Bay area is rightly proud of being in the forefront of those communities that recognize the need for a modern transit system," Curvin said. "Despite an inflationary cycle that has raised costs the San Francisco district is putting together the first truly modern transit system to be constructed in this country," he said.

DISCUSSING the financial aspects, the Smith Barney executive noted that from the beginning a basic consideration was the provision that the Trans-Bay Tube between San Francisco and Oakland would be financed by the California Toll Bridge Authority. Despite the complexity of the undertaking and the support needed from many citizen groups, the project has moved ahead, Curvin said.

"It is recognized that if the San Francisco system is to accomplish its basic purpose of alleviating traffic congestion it must be attractive enough to pull commuters from their automobiles. To do so the system must be fast enough, comfortable and dependable and it must bring people close to where they wish to go for business or for living," Curvin said.

"IT REMAINS to be seen whether the Bay Area commuter who, like so many thousands elsewhere in the country uses his car to go to work and back, can indeed be induced to use mass transit facilities of premium design and performance. The San Francisco 'experiment' as it has called itself, is being closely watched by most other major cities where traffic congestion is rapidly choking the central business districts," the investment banker said.

The direct measurable savings in terms of travel time, insurance and parking charges will amount to nearly $60 million a year while the annual capital costs supported by taxes will not exceed $50 million a year, the Smith Barney executive said. "Additionally there will be an increase in property values due in large measure to the access afforded by rapid transit," he said.

That Quarter in Your Pocket Really Worth 34 Cents Today

PHILADELPHIA — The next silver quarter you spend may be worth only 25 cents to a vending machine — but to a large segment of American industry it's worth 34 cents and rising.

The silver in it is worth more than the face value of the quarter.

The price of the metal jumped from $1.20 an ounce to $1.87 an ounce in mid-July after the Treasury Department, which was running out of silver, stopped selling at the lower price.

This put a squeeze on manufacturers, who need silver in space age industry, silverware manufacturing, and photography; and as the price rose, the value of your small change rose with it, according to Chilton Co. business magazine of the jewelry and silverware industries.

Coin holders made an instant paper profit of $800 million.

* * * *

AMERICANS hold $2.2 billion in face value silver half dollars, quarters and dimes, the magazine says, but the 1.6 billion ounces of silver they contain is worth $3 billion on the open industrial market.

On July 24, a silver half-dollar minted before 1965 was worth 68 cents, a quarter worth 34 cents, and a dime worth 14 cents. Silver dollars and silver certificates were worth $1.44.

"But don't rush out to sell those coins — yet, and don't melt them down, either," the magazine warns.

The Treasury Department on May 18, banned the melting of coins for their silver value. The fine for violation: $10,000.

This locked up an estimated billion ounces of silver in quarters and dimes.

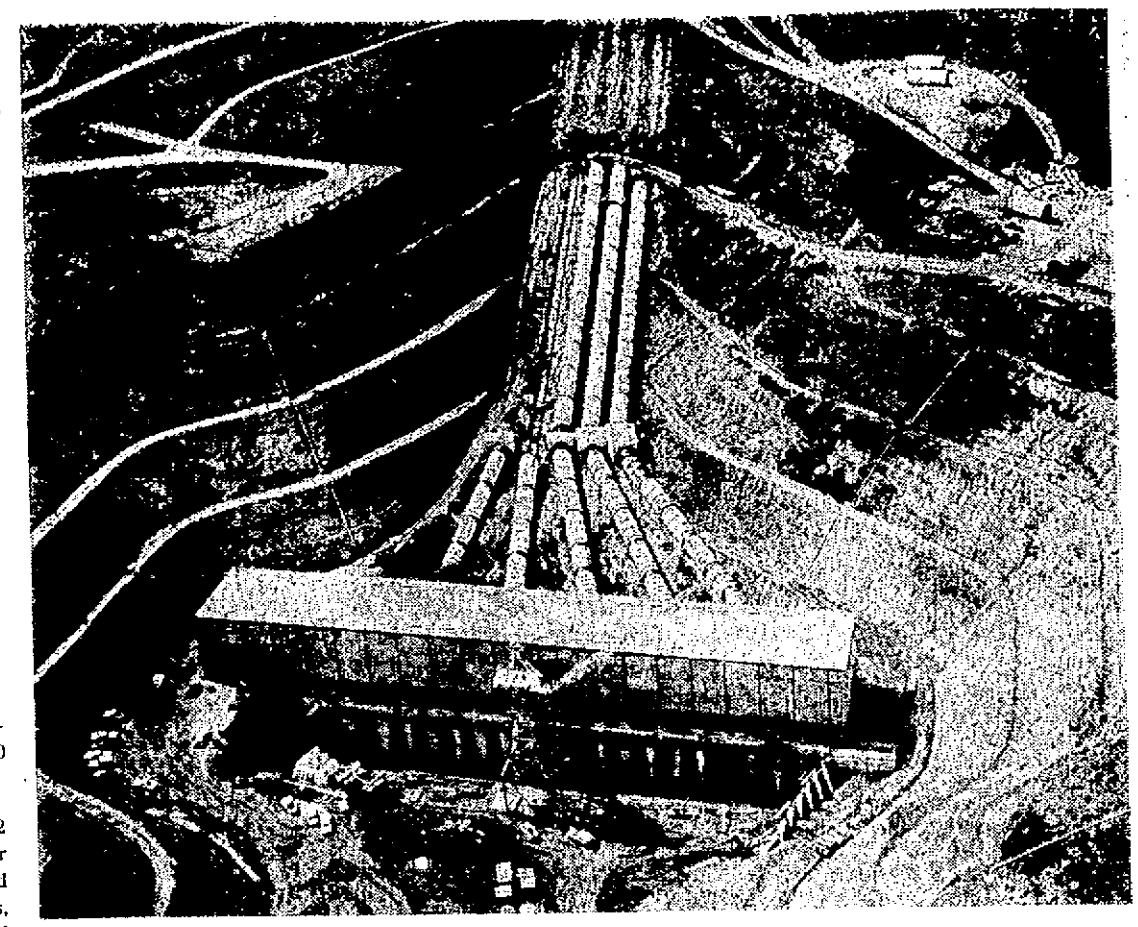

Suit Pends, Downing Back in Auto Business

His $20 million lawsuit against the Ford Motor Co. still pending, Mark Downing announced that he is going back into the automotive field. He has opened Five Points Service Center at Main Street and Beach Boulevard, the location of his former Ford sales agency.

The service operation will include a complete body shop as well as repair and maintenance facilities for all makes of vehicles, Downing said.

Harry Pinkus, well-known in the area as service manager for Costa Mesa Chrysler-Plymouth and Harbor Dodge for the past two years, will manage the new Downing facility.

Downing's complaint against Ford alleges that area Ford executives "conspired" to force him out of busjness.

BIG PUMPING PLANT READY SOON
The Delta Pumping Plant of the State Water Project, to be dedicated by Gov. Ronald Reagan Sept. 9, will provide the initial lift for the 6.7 billion gallons of water a day which will flow through the California Aqueduct. The Delta pumps will lift the water 244 feet up the hill in the huge pipes shown in this construction photo, taken just one year ago. The Delta plant is located near Byron and Tracy, not far from the Alameda-Contra Costa county line.

Delta Pumping Plant Dedication Set Sept. 9

Formal dedication of the State Water Plan's Delta Pumping Plant, the facility that will start Northern California water on its trip to Southern California users, will be held Sept. 9, at the facility site just West of Tracy.

Gov. Ronald Reagan will dedicate the facility before an expected gathering of 3,000 epople from throughout the state.

Water will be lifted 244 feet by the pumping facility and be sent flowing down the California Aqueduct to the San Luis Forebay, a distance of 67 miles.

THE DELTA PLANT, labeled "The Heart Beat of the California Water Plan," will provide the initial lift for the 6.7 billion gallons of water a day expected to flow from the Delta region of Northern California. The pumping plant was constructed at a cost of $134,783,000 and will require 1,258,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electrical energy annually for its operation.

Upon completion, the 444-mile long California Aqueduct, which begins at the Delta plant, will serve water users throughout the rich agricultural regions of both Central and Southern California. The aqueduct will terminate at the Perris Dam reservoir in Riverside County. Approximately 193 miles of the California Aqueduct are now under construction.

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN

Pontiac Motor Division has announced that the front bumper on all 1968 GTO models will be made of a revolutionary new chemical compound that will absorb energy on impact.

Under development for the past three years, the bumper, called Endura, is a combination of a special synthetic compound backed with a heavy gauge steel reinforcement that functions as an energy absorbing system, replacing the conventional rigid all-steel bumper.

It is a Pontiac exclusive and the first of its kind in the industry.

In announcing the details, John Z. DeLorean, a General Motors vice president and Pontiac's general manager said the new bumper is functionally superior to any metal bumper now being used.

THE SYNTHETIC front cushion is mar-resistant. When the bumper is hit under most circumstances it will depress and then return to its original form almost immediately.

If the bumper is damaged during a severe enough impact to leave a dent or mark in most cases the damaged area can easily be repaired by any Pontiac dealer.

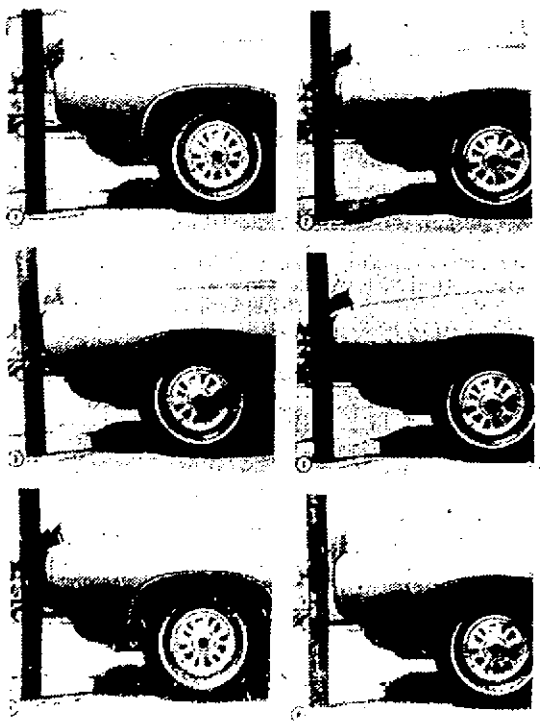

Another unique feature of the new bumper is that it is painted the same color as the exterior of the car, thus giving an extended and integrated appearance.

"THIS BUMPER allows a new and unique design approach that has unlimited possibilities for future styling," DeLorean pointed out.

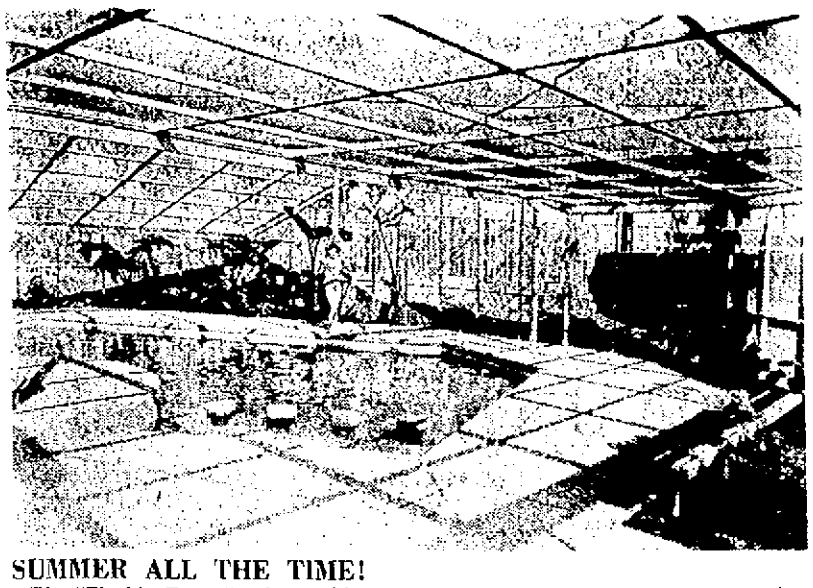

In addition to its functional superiority, the new bumper also marks a major breakthrough for front end styling concepts.

The bumper is cast by a molding process and therefore can be formed to any shape, lending unlimited possibilities for the stylists of the future.

Fansteel Will Headquarter in Del Amo Financial Center

New headquarters for the Advanced Structures Division of Fansteel Metallurgical Corp. will be located at Del Amo Financial Center, Torrance, it was announced by Warren B. Hayes, president. The division will occupy 8000 square feet on the ninth floor of the Union Bank Tower starting about Sept. 15.

The move is to consolidate the management and control of the division's west coast operations, Hayes said. The Advanced Structures Division, which was formed in 1964 with the acquisition of BMW Manufacturing Co., Torrance, now has 10 plants in Southern California.

Fansteel's Chemical and Nuclear Equipment Division moved to Torrance in 1965. That same year the company acquired Airtek Dynamics, Compton, fabricators of pressure vessels and airframe structures. In 1966, Fansteel's Powder Metals production and engineering groups were centralized in Harbor City. Advanced Casting Corp., Santa Monica, and its subsidiary, McClelland Enterprises, Inc., were acquired in May of this year. In June, Reflective Laminates, Inc., North Hollywood, became a unit of the Advanced Structures Division, which was followed in July by the acquisition of San Fernando Laboratories, Pacoima.

FANSTEEL, a 60-year-old producer and fabricator of special materials, had sales of $53,743,550 and net income of $2,481,815 in 1966. Hayes recently predicted that 1967 sales should exceed $75,000,000 with "significantly improved earnings." The company is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

The first phase of Del Amo Financial Center consists of the 13-story Union Bank Tower, a five-story "ring" building, four circular pavilion buildings, a three-level parking garage, landscaped areas and blue lagoons. Approximately one third of the center is being built at this time. When fully developed, the center will represent an investment of $30 million.

* * * *

ON JUNE 30, Western Federal Savings became the first tenant to open for business at the center. Union Bank, to occupy the first three floors of the tower, will open Aug. 21. Bateman Eichler-Hill Richards, Inc. and several other tenants will open in September. Grand opening of the financial center will be celebrated the latter part of September.

According to the developers, Great Lakes Properties, Inc. and Guilford Glazer & Associates, Del Amo Financial Center will have as additional first-phase tenants two more banks, another savings and loan firm, five or six stock brokerage houses, insurance companies, law and accounting firms, and will be the headquarters of several other major corporations.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Strength in some of the economic indicators, including the recent advance in machine tool orders, improvements in construction, carloadings and auto shipments, and some increase in steel output suggest an upswing in the economy, says Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The investment advisory firm said it believes this uptrend bolsters its view that "cautious optimism" is currently the wisest attitude for investors.

REYNOLDS & CO. finds "near term things are going a little too fast for comfort and suggests "it would be healthy if some of the newly converted bulls were forced to live through a good shakeout."

Although the industrial average is likely to test its all-time high this year, for the first time in the current cycle a word of warning seems necessary, the brokerage firm said.

SHEARSON HAMMILL & Co. finds "few signs that the institutional and public thirst for stocks has been quenched." S&H said there may be a temporary shift from glamor stocks to more conventional issues, but notes "the factor that stands out the most is the receptivity among all types of investors to stocks with real stories, whether they are blue chips, average quality stocks, or issues in the junk category."

BACHE AND CO. INC. says the cheering economic news of recent days tends to underscore the validity of earlier forecasts of a business recovery. Thus, the investment firm foresees a continuation of the summer rally with better quality issues assuming a more important part of market leadership.

THOMSON & McKinnon maintains the "most significant single characteristic" of the current market is its ability to shrug off adverse news. The firm says this tendency suggests that investors are looking forward rather than backward, and that the view ahead continues to improve.

GRAHAM LOVING & Co. says it sees no reason why a "traditional" late summer or early autumn decline shouldn't hit the market this year. With this in mind, the company suggests that investors accumulate reserves for better buying opportunities probably occurring sometime this month.

JANEWAY SERVICE says the immediate outcome of the summer's racial riots will be bearish for business. The investment service says "big cost tags" are in order to come to grips with the racial problem, thus it concludes that, for the longer term, the riots will have an "extremely beneficial effect" on the economy and market conditions.

BACHE & CO. INC. says it feels that a short pause in the market at this time would be constructive. Following such a breather, the company says, the market probably will move ahead again in a challenge of the supply that lies between the current level and the 950 area of the Dow Jones Industrial average.

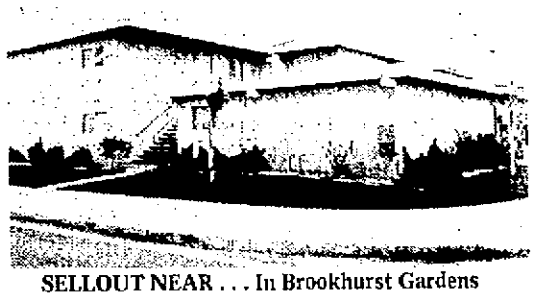

Brookhurst Gardens Sell Out Seen Soon

With 46 of an original 60 units sold in the past 12 weeks at Brookhurst Gardens, a community of four-unit income properties, Grodon Bragg, sales manager for Pageant Realty predicts that the project will be completely sold out within the next 30 days. Bragg also noted that many buyers are either presently owners of income property or have owned income property in the past and "recognize the many advantages inherent in purchasing at Brookhurst Gardens."

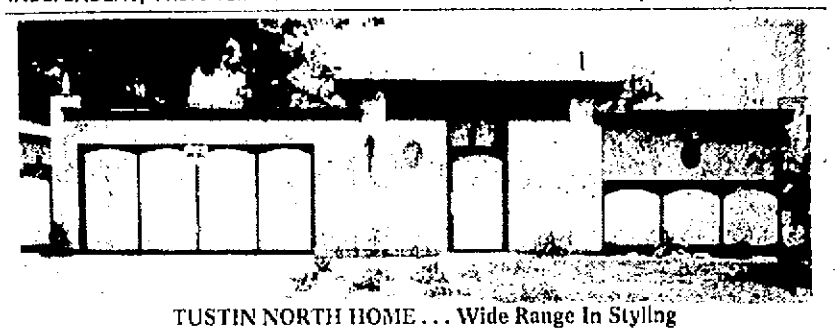

In further explaining what some of these advantages are he pointed out that a buyer may purchase a prime investment property with as little as $2,500 down and that as high as a 60 per cent return can be realized on the cash invested. "This high return," said Bragg, "is a result of a combination of net spendable income or partial paid rent on the owner's unit, tax savings and equity build-up through mortgage payoff from rentals."

THE COMMUNITY is presently over 99 per cent occupied, and the buildings remaining for sale are available in three plans with prices ranging from $57,950 to $60,950. Included in the sales prices are wall-to-wall carpeting.

To reach Brookhurst Gardens take the Santa Ana Freeway to the Brookhurst St. off ramp and go south one block or take Lincoln Avenue to Brookhurst St. and go north one-half block. The address of the project is 400 No. Brookhurst St. in Anaheim.

TUSTIN NORTH HOME . . . Wide Range In Styling

Tustin North Homes Provide Strikingly Different Style

Exterior stylings that are strikingly different in conception and architecture are one of the basic appeals of the Tustin North home community development just off 17th Street on Yorba Avenue in Tustin.

"Our elevations can even be termed 'wild,'" states Pat Madden, sales manager for the Trans-Robles Corp. "We have classic Grecian, Roman and French, Early American, Tahitian and many more, all entirely different from any other development. They give those people who are discriminating in character an opportunity to purchase a home that reflects their rugged individualism."

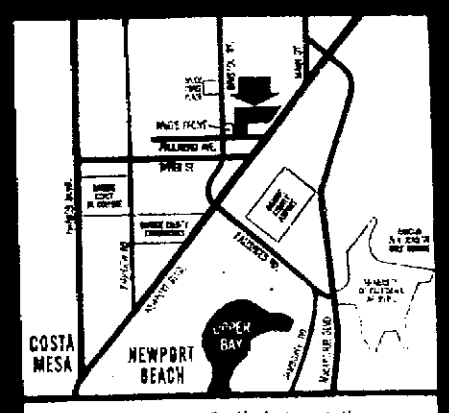

Tustin North's one and two-story, four and five-bedroom, four-bath homes are models of creative design. Some plans feature six lavatories; there are separate "his" and "hers" dressing rooms and baths in the master suite wing. Kitchens, with all built-ins, are spacious and designed to save the homemaker's energy. The wet bar can also double as a pantry, drink room or projection booth — any or all!

ALL THE HOMES have three car garages, covered lanai's, family rooms and formal dining rooms.

The location is ideal for schools, transportation and churches, with a new $1 million Jewish community center five minutes distant; the St. Cecilia Catholic Church and school 10 minutes away, and Protestant churches abound throughout the area.

Tustin North offers an excellent trade program on their imaginatively distinctive homes priced from $35,900 to $43,500.

From the Long Beach area: take the San Diego Freeway east to the Garden Grove Freeway; the Garden Grove Freeway east to the Newport Freeway; south on the Newport Freeway 1 mile to the 17th Street East exit; 2 blocks east on 17th to Yorba; left on Yorba to the model homes.

Big Addition for Buzza-Cardozo Gives 14 Acres Under Single Roof

James M. Day, president of Buzza-Cardozo, announced that ground will be broken in November this year and construction to start immediately thereafter on a 283,000-foot addition to the Anaheim plant. This will more than double the size of the present building, giving Buzza-Cardozo approximately 14 acres under one roof and allow full utilization of the 21 acre-site on Anaheim Boulevard.

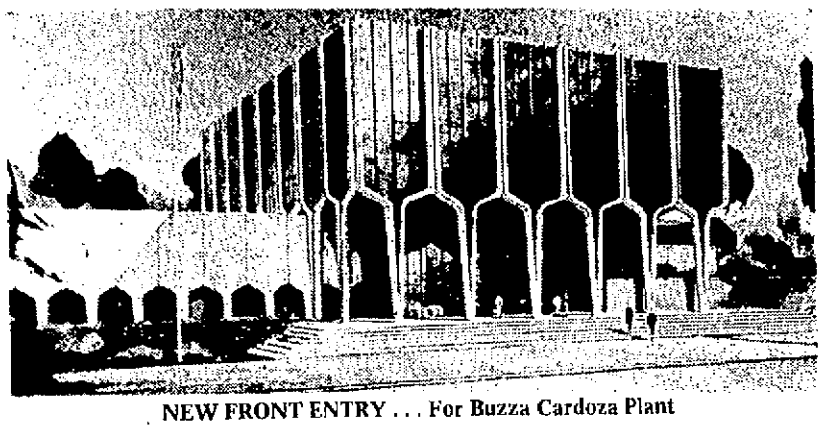

The new facility will include a four-story tower building, primarily for offices and creative design studios for the greeting card firm. The manufacturing area will have a 20-foot clear span ceiling providing needed space for this growing organization which processes greeting cards on a 16-hour day basis the year round. The new Gift Wrap and Party Goods Line will now be produced in the new Anaheim plant.

THREE DINING AREAS will be provided for employes; one of them a rooftop luncheon patio with garden planting. The company swimming pool on the premises is still a great attraction for the employes and families.

Rooftop parking will be provided for 800 cars and a railroad siding is being added for easier handling of heavy roll stock.

The addition is being designed by Architects Risley, Gould and Van Heyklyn, and the General Contractor is William Simpson & Sons, designers and builders of Buzza-Cardozo buildings for many years. The design and construction will be substantially the same as the present building except for the tower, of course.

Day observed that in approving this substantial industrial development, his Board of Directors demonstrated their confidence in the future of this area.

Special Transporter-Loader Built for Sprint Missiles

SUNNYVALE, Calif. — A 53-foot long tractor-trailer rig surmounted by a 25-foot tall tower has been designed to transport the Army's Sprint anti-missile missile from its assembly building to its launching cell and is currently undergoing tests at the Sunnyvale plant of the Westinghouse Electric Corp.

The tower will allow the 27-foot missile to be transported upright and lowered directly into its cell.

The Sprint is one of two interceptor missiles being developed for the Army's Nike-X Missile Defense System. The Nike-X project office at Redstone Arsenal, Ala., released details on the big missile mover.

* * * *

AMONG OTHER THINGS, it will be equipped with electronic gear which can take the Sprint's pulse once it is in the cell to determine if there are any troubles in its circuitry.

Three prototypes are being manufactured by the Westinghouse missile launching and handling department at Sunnyvale under contract to the Martin Marietta Corp. at Orlando, Fla., which is developing the Sprint.

The first model is scheduled to be delivered to Martin Marietta about the end of the year. Westinghouse received a $1,477,115 contract in April of 1966 for design, construction and testing of the vehicles which are based on a standard commercial tractor and a special trailer. However, the distance between the commercial tractor's wheels was widened to give the service vehicle a track width of 10 feet — and a straddle-legged appearance.

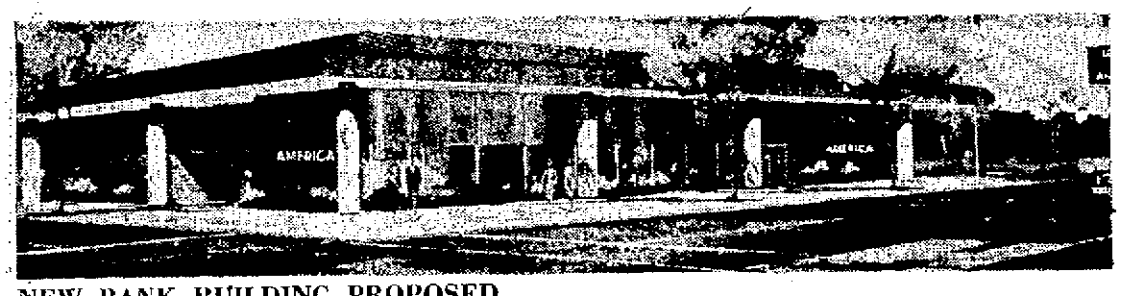

* * * *

THE WIDENING was done to allow the service vehicle to be driven over the Sprint lauching cells. Another unique feature of the service vehicle will be a nine-foot hole in the trailer bed. The Sprint will be hoisted into the trailer and lowered into the cell through this aperture.

Present plans call for the service vehicle crew to drive atop the Sprint assembly building, remove an access cover and hoist the fully assembled missile nose first up into the trailer. The inside of the trailer will be environmentally controlled and the environment will be maintained while in transit to the launching area.

Once at the cell area the service vehicle will be driven over the selected launching cell. A lifting device under the trailer will remove the cell's 1600 pound "fly-through" cover and the Sprint will be lowered into place.

A curtain mounted on the bottom of the service vehicle will maintain its air conditioned environment while the Sprint is being lowered from the trailer into the cell.

NEW BANK BUILDING PROPOSED

The preliminary sketch of Bank of America's Belmont Shore Branch was released by bank officials. In announcing the relocation of the branch, it was stated that a lease has been obtained for property at the northeast corner of Second Street and Granada Avenue, which adjoins the present location. Plans call for a much larger building with adjacent customer parking.

State Income Tax Changes Affect Nearly Every Person

Higher tax rates, narrower brackets, initiation of a system of tax credits instead of exemptions, and a requirement that large taxpayers file estimates and prepay a portion of their state income tax were the principal personal income tax changes enacted by the Legislature.

The state personal income tax rates were increased to a maximum of 10 per cent from a previous high of 7 per cent. After an initial bracket of $2,000 at the 1 per cent rate, the brackets were narrowed from $2,500 to $1,500 for each tax rate for single individuals and married individuals filing separate returns, and from $5,000 to $3,000 for taxpayers filing joint returns. The initial bracket for joint returns is $4,000. The new rates will be included in the instruction booklets mailed to taxpayers later this year, Martin Huff, Executive Officer, said.

The installment plan requires a taxpayer to make a prepayment on his 1967 tax of 50 per cent of his 1966 liability. This payment is due by Oct. 31, 1967. The prepayment requirement applies only to those taxpayers who paid more than $200 ($100 for married individuals filing separate returns) in state income taxes for 1966.

AN ALTERNATIVE computation and payment may be made by those who expect their income to decline for 1967 but, regardless of the revised computation, the estimate must be filed by Oct. 31, 1967, and the payment must also be made at that time if the ($200 or $100) test is met.

A penalty of 10 per cent will be assessed on that amount by which a payment falls short of the amount required to be paid as an estimate. In addition, interest of 6 per cent per year will be charged on all unpaid amounts.

Tax credits have been substituted for the personal and dependent exemptions previously used. Taxpayers subtract their itemized deductions from their gross income, figure their tax on the basis of the taxable income, and then deduct the appropriate tax credits. Credits included in the bill are $25 for single persons, $50 for married persons and heads of household, $8 each for dependents, and an additional $8 each for blind persons.

THE FRANCHISE Tax Board staff is working on the necessary forms and notices at the present time, Huff said.

It is the intent to notify those taxpayers who should file estimates and prepay a portion of their 1967 tax, Huff said, but the lack of such notices does not relieve the taxpayer of his responsibility to comply with the new law.

Proximity of Excellent Schools Important Factor in Orangewood

"One of the first questions a prospective home buyer asks us is, 'Where are the schools, and what kind of school system do they have here?' " says Don Wilson, president of Don Wilson Builders.

"And that's why the Orangewood homes attract so many families. We can just point down the block, tell them the schools are there, within easy walking distance for any age child, and that the system is an excellent one. That is one of the most important features of community planning in this development."

According to Wilson, some of the other community features that impress buyers in his East Long Beach area development are underground utilities, sidewalks and sewers already paid for and installed, front landscaping for each home, and Orangewood's own, completely equipped neighborhood park.

* * * *

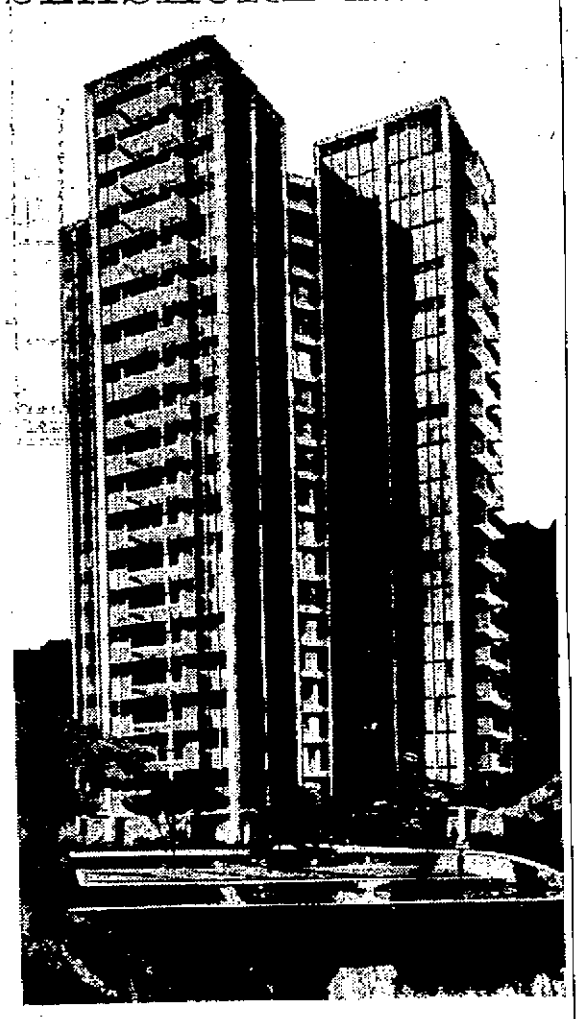

AN EQUALLY important attraction is the combination of features available to Orangewood buyers, allowing a great flexibility in the choice of plans and exteriors. There are tri-level and one-story models, with each home offering quality wall-to-wall carpeting, built-in O'Keefe and Merritt gas range and oven, three, four and 5 bedrooms, two custom designed baths, and separate entry halls.

Other features include custom fireplaces, a spacious step-down rumpus room, separate from the living room and ideal for games, parties, TV watching, etc., and a tasteful use of wood and wrought iron room dividers and stair railings throughout.

The variety of financial plans offer the flexibility necessary for many first-time home buyers. There is a wide range of prices, starting as low as $24,950, with as little as $995 down. Veterans may take advantage of financing with no down payment, and 6 per cent-30-year loans are also available.

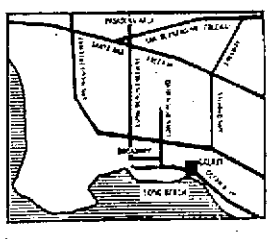

Models may be seen by taking any freeway to Knott Avenue, south of Katella, and then driving on Knott to Orangewood.

Gas Turbine Compressor Sets Ordered for Use on Oil Island

The Solar Division of International Harvester Co., San Diego, has received orders for two gas turbine compressor sets for use on a man-made island off Seal Beach.

Standard Oil Co. of California will use the two Solar sets for gas lift in conjunction with its drilling operations on Esther Island. The island lies about one mile off Seal Beach.

The sets are powered by Solar's Saturn 1100-horsepower industrial gas turbine. The units will be mounted with control panels face-to-face on the first level of a structured-steel cantilevered platform which will be built over existing buildings and equipment on the island. Scrubber and cooler facilities will be mounted on the second level of this platform. Engineering contractors are Guy T. Martin & Company, of Gardena.

* * * *

GAS LIFT is the process of lifting fluids from a well by the injection of relatively high pressure gas to supplement reservoir energy. This process is most normally applied when the well or field is producing an oil-and-gas mixture. After the produced fluid is separated, the crude oil can be transported to the refinery and the gas used for gas lift.

Space is at a premium on the 200-by-300-foot island. A major feature of the application is that the compact, lightweight, and virtually vibration-free turbine-driven packages can be safely mounted on the elevated, out-of-the-way platform. Other space and equipment savings are achieved through the lack of requirements for engine cooling water and starting air systems.

Economic Loss From Traffic Accidents Shows Sharp Gain

NEW YORK — The nation's economic loss from traffic accidents reached $1,098,935,000 in June, an increase of nearly $40 million over May and the second straight month in which losses have topped $1 billion, the Insurance Information Institute reported.

The June loss — the latest month for complete figures — reflects the normal seasonal upswing in traffic accidents. The number of accidents, as reported by a significant number of states with comprehensive record systems, increased by 7.3 per cent over the same month last year and by an estimated one-half million over May.

Traffic injuries in June, as reported by the same states, totaled 508,626, a 9.8 per cent increase above June of 1966.

Traffic deaths, as reported by the National Safety Council, totaled 4,360 in June. This was less than 1 per cent above June, 1966, and 3 per cent under May of 1967.

* * * *

THE JUNE LOSSES bring the total estimated economic loss from traffic accidents for the first six months of 1967 to $5,786,350,000, compared with $5,536,086,000 for the same six months of 1966 — a gain of more than $250 million. Traffic injuries are up from 1,364,505 to an estimated 1,579,649 for the six-month period.

The Institute said estimated economic loss figures include such factors as lost wages, medical expenses, property damage and the service costs of insurance. Although these losses are largely paid for through insurance companies, the ultimate cost of insurance claims falls upon those who buy insurance.

The I.I.I. said it projects its estimate of economic loss from a representative cross-section of official state traffic reports on accidents and resultant injuries. The National Safety Council also issues estimates of economic loss, which total less than the I.I.I.'s primarily because injuries are included only when the victim is disabled for a full day beyond the day of the accident. However the Institute does use National Safety Council fatality figures in its computation of economic loss

ARTIST AT WORK . . . Raymond Enkeboll, designer of custom Mediterranean furniture, muses over future creations while seated in his favorite, the monk's sling chair.
—Staff Photo by TOM SHAW

'If furniture were made of plastic and everyone wanted it, I'd have no reason for being. Since everyone doesn't desire plastic furniture, there is a need for what I create.'

L. A. designer may be future Chippendale of Space Age

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

A success story with an international twist is that of Raymond Enkeboll—a California product of Danish parentage who designs custom-made Mediterranean furniture.

The handsome, soft-spoken Enkeboll has a list of patrons which reads like a Who's Who register . . . ranging from the national chairman of the Democratic party to Governor Ronald Reagan.

Seated at a drawing board in his downtown Los Angeles warehouse, he said:

"Several weeks ago, I designed two 12-by-8 foot conference tables in a Spanish-Early American motif and shipped them to Sacramento. Was I surprised a few days later to open the paper and see a photo of the governor signing the state's $5-billion budget on MY table!

"How many cabinet-makers can make that statement?"

A graduate of Santa Monica High School, Enkeboll said he was intrigued with wood even as a small boy and developed skills in cabinetry. Less intrigued were his parents who showed little enthusiasm over the prospect of their son becoming a carpenter.

"As late as 1955, when I was discharged from the Army, I still was trying to decide upon a type of work that might offer satisfaction," he said ruefully.

THE 22-YEAR-OLD invested his life savings of $300 with a friend in a Venice, Calif., plant which manufactured Early American furniture.

"Before three weeks were up, my friend disappeared. I re-financed the business for $400, bought machinery and went to work.

"I started from the bottom, literally," Enkeboll laughed, recalling times he astonished hosts at dinner parties by crawling under a table to inspect its construction.

"Manufacturing Early American furniture left me cold," he said. "I began to experiment. I'm a stubborn Dane. I refused to give up. I didn't want to copy, I wanted to design what I felt."

IN 1960, HE completed a suite which bore a definite Spanish influence and entered it in a show sponsored by Pacific Furniture Guild at the Ambassador Hotel.

"It was disheartening to have spectators stop and ask: 'What's that stuff, relics from the Hearst Castle?'

"But there were enough people who liked it—don't forget, as recently as 1960, Mediterranean furniture was practically unheard of—that I received orders in the amount of $10,000 from the show. Today, we take about $100,000 in orders each month."

As a custom designer, Enkeboll doesn't make items for stock, but rather to specifications of the individual customer.

"If I'm asked to make a piece I know will look bad, I'll turn down the request if I can't persuade the customer to let me use my judgment.

IS DESIGN his chief interest?

"Perhaps 10 per cent of my time is spent at the drawing board," he answered. "The rest is taken up by sales, managerial duties, promotion-production and WORRY.

"I like to have fun and to excel in whatever I do, whether it's designing a chair or racing a car," said the Ferrari-driving Enkeboll.

"Take the monk's sling chair—it's a gas. After completing the strap leather lacing construction, I decided it looked like a chair a monk would sit in. That's how it got its name.

"There's a banquet table I named Great Hall. Its mass seemed to recall the romance, the gusto of a baronial family feasting and having a ball."

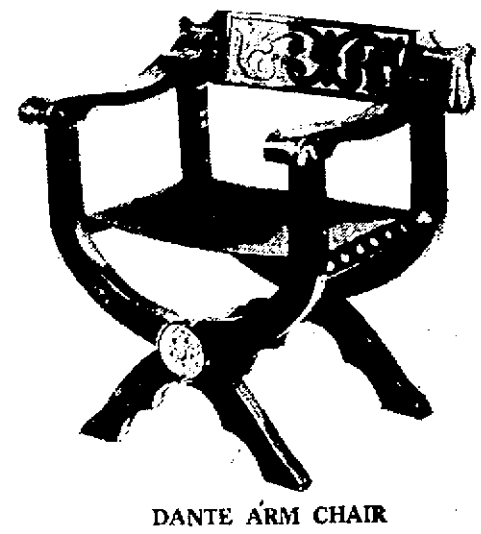

NAMES PLAY an important part in the Enkeboll line which boasts the Imperator cocktail table, Marchesa mirror, El Conde arm chair and La Condessa side chair, Pan wine rack, Camelot suite, the Campana swag lamp.

WHAT IS HIS definition of Mediterranean furniture?

"The Gothic effect is visible in Spanish and Italian work, but the Spanish is more Moorish in detailing. Basically, they're interchangable. You might say the difference is in the finish.

"I'm constantly fighting this categorization. I

ANGELS IN ANY COLOR

Public health nurses find new image sans uniforms

By RUTH McEVOY
Staff Writer

Sometimes she's welcomed; sometimes she might be resented. She may appear fragile, but she's trained to handle crises from safe-guarding lives of newborn infants to keeping the community free from epidemics.

Carrying her nursing skills into homes and schools, the public health nurse counsels, teaches, detects and investigates communicable diseases.

Typical of the 19 public health nurses in Long Beach division of Los Angeles County Health Department is attractive Sandra Larsen, of 255 Glendora. The Long Beach unit has 10 child health groups called Well-Baby Clinics. Other units include classes for tuberculors, venereal disease victims and alcoholics.

Sandra and other nurses find themselves working in numerous and varied situations with many duties. Typical is a case involving a small child who, during a visit to the Well Baby Clinic, was discovered to have tuberculosis.

An immediate search for the source was conducted by a public health nurse, who suspected a family member might have transmitted the disease. The child's grandfather, living in the same household, was found to have T.B., and the public health nurse helped in having him admitted to a sanitarium. Later she made visits to the family for discussions about the care of the child, nutrition, transmission of the disease and use of medication.

THERE IS no "typical" day for a public health nurse. Sandy says "Almost every day has to begin with the dreaded paper work. This is time consuming, but records must be kept."

"There might be a visit to a home to show a mother how to bathe her new baby, to advise her on formula and routine. Next, you might give nursing care to a bedridden grandmother who is alone all day. During a third call, you might help a mother begin exercises for a crippled child and take the opportunity to arrange immunizations for all the children."

Sandra's district includes the central area of Long Beach. Her work deals with approximately 120 families in this area.

An interesting fact Sandra reveals is that although public health nurses wear many caps, so to speak, they don't wear the traditional white nurses' uniform.

"Uniforms were discarded many years ago. We go about our work dressed much the same as any girl in a business office.

"They carry white aprons in their medical bags to don when necessary. Most of them make six or seven home visits each day.

FAMILY COUNSELING ABOUT DOCTOR'S ORDERS IS PART OF JOB
. . . Mrs. Lois Harper with Alan, 5 months, gets information from Sandra Larsen, R.N.
—Staff Photo by SKIP SHUMAN

PUBLIC HEALTH nurses must have special training and education. In addition to an RN license, a baccalaureate degree plus a public health nurse certificate are required.

The latter shows she has completed special training which qualifies her to exercise independent judgment in dealing with community problems.

Sandra received her education at the University of Washington's school of nursing in Seattle. She has been a public nurse since January. Before that, a hospital nurse. When she is not working she finds time to study piano lessons, snow ski and just "go places to find out more about the area where I live."

She worked with teen-age groups in the slum areas of Chicago and New York following graduation from college a few years ago. She came to live in California after spending a summer working with a junior high group at a ranch camp in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The public health nurses always work with doctors and often with a team which includes a MD, social worker and psychiatrist. This is especially needed in the child development clinics where they might find retardation or other symptons which need the care of more than one medical person.

OTHER CASES these nurse might be assigned: A request to call on a young drug user in a neat, upper middle class home. The problem: Serum hepatitis.

The nurse was not welcome and the patient was not cooperative. He had used many narcotics and had contracted serum hepatitis through the use of a make-shift syringe and needle.

It is not the nurse's job to make a moral evaluation or contact the police. She interpretes the doctor's order regarding proper diet, rest, and avoidance of further self-abuse. The patient refused to reveal information which could help track the source of infection.

In still another case, a public health nurse was able to help a mentally retarded child and his mother who was exhausted with his care. She arranged surgery to assist him in chewing food and talking. Then the public health nurse worked out methods to teach this child how to feed himself and become toilet trained. He progressed so well he soon will be enrolled in a special school for the mentally retarded.

The public health nurse is not so well known or understood as her counterpart in the hospital. In hospital wards, she learns to give patient-centered care based on nursing needs of the individual. In homes, she learns to care for patients in their own settings and to help members of the family understand how they can be assisted with his care and recovery.

She is not only concerned with the ill person, but each member of the household. Her care is directed towards helping individuals and families maintain health and prevent illness as well as toward treatment and cure.

JACOBY

Did south make best decision?

North's jump to four hearts was designed to show, just what he held. A minimum opening bid with very good hearts. South was interested in seven but was appy to settle for the small slam when his partner showed only one king.

When South saw the dummy he was rather unhappy about his contract. Not that it wasn't a good one but rather that he had the choice between several good lines of play.

He started by winning the spade lead in his own hand. Two rounds of trumps took care of that suit and he played his ace of diamonds. Then he entered dummy with the ace of spades and finessed a diamond. West was in with the queen.

If West had had a diamond to lead back South would have been set but West had to lead a club away from his king or a spade to give South a chance to ruff in dummy and discard his losing club.

North didn't like South's play. He suggested that it would have been better to play ace-king and another diamond in case the queen failed to drop on the second lead.

West felt that South should have left diamonds alone and played ace and another club.

All three lines of play are reasonable and all three would have worked the way the cards lie. At the risk of getting into a lot of trouble we will state that South did adopt the best line and leave you readers to study the problem if you wish.

She's 4,000 years old ---her beauty's ageless

The lady is 4,000 years old.

She is all charm and ageless.

She is a masterpiece of the earliest period of Greek sculpture.

The Los Angeles County Museum of Art has acquired her for its permanent collection.

Selected by the museum staff, the Cycladic female figure, (2200-2000 B.C.), is the gift of Anna Bing Arnold who provided funds for its purchase. The marble sculpture, 34½ inches high, is on view on the plaza level of the Ahmanson Gallery.

Very few Cycladic sculptures of this unusual size have survived. Characteristic of figures found in tombs near the sea in the Naxos area in the Cyclades Islands in the Aegean Sea, it is believed to have been executed in the period of the Keros-Syros culture. It is one of the finest examples in existence, according to professor Colin Renfrew in the department of ancient history at the University of Sheffield, England.

YOUTH ARTS SYMPOSIUM

48 stars to shine in Showcase

Climaxing six weeks of creative work in art, drama and music, 48 talented students from five Long Beach high schools will be spotlighted in the second annual Youth Arts Symposium and Showcase next Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. at Petroleum Club.

The summer program, sponsored by Dramtic Allied Arts Guild, began July 11 at Wilson High School Auditorium. Students have been meeting on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m.

Next Sunday, under direction of Mrs. Robert Westmyer, guild president, three awards in each of the arts will be presented to winners by Odie Wright, superintendent of Long Beach Unified School District; Robert Crow, vice mayor of Long Beach; and Jack O'Neil, assistant to City Manager John Mansell.

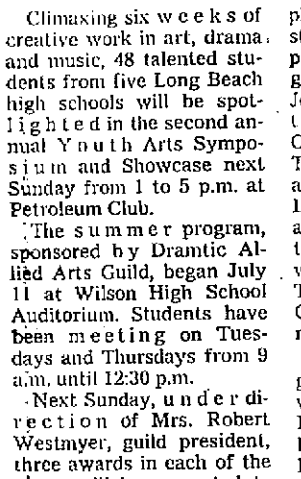

Art students, who have been working with Mrs. Grace Hurt and Mrs. J.B.A. Johnson, have designed invitations and programs for the Showcase in inter-class competition. They will exhibit their paintings and other art work next Sunday for judging by Virginia Laddey, I, P-T art reviewer; Wahneta Robinson, curator at Long Beach Museum of Art; and Sylvia Petrasek, artist and commercial display director.

MRS. WALTER CRAWFORD and Mrs. Leslie Murphy have supervised music students who will present a program of solos, vocal groups and combos. Mrs. John O. McDonald, consultant for California Arts Commission; Dr. Robert Tyndall, professor of music at California State College, Long Beach, composer and author; and Genevieve Alton, president of the Lakewood Branch of Music Teachers Association of California, will chose winners.

Members of the drama group, guided by Mrs. Orville Cole and Mrs. Russell Fisher, and directed by college student Bill Griffith, have prepared for production "Father's Been to Mars." They will perform today at 2 p.m. for the Armed Services YMCA and again Friday at 8 p.m. in Wilson Auditorium for judging. Admission is free. Judges will be Dr. John W. Wills, speech department, CSLB; Keith Houdyshell, actor and public relations director; and Kay Carroll, teacher of dance and drama at Peppermint Playhouse. Winners will be announced at the Showcase next Sunday.

DRAMATIC ALLIED Arts Guild members began the summer youth program last year. There are worthwhile and neceassary plans to provide opportunites for underprivileged children they believe, but often the more talented young persons are overlooked. The Youth Arts Symposium and Showcase was designed for them.

Chairman this year is Mrs. Elmer Capute. Also aiding in the program are Mrs. William Nott, Mrs. Miller Crane and assisting chairmen.

Artists take to the brushes

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Page Editor

August art exhibits in the Long Beach area are varied and original.

In Lakewood City Hall are winning paintings from Lakewood Artists Guild's Dutch Village Annual Open Art Show. Both professional and amateur artists competed in several categories.

First place winners were Evelyn Carpenter, traditional oil; Mary McDonald, abstract; Edith Redfield, watercolor; and Dr. Eugene Wallin, graphic and mixed media. The Dutch Village Merchats selected Carola Gough's traditional entry for its purchase award. The Theodore Ediss Founders' Award went to Ruth Eyrich and the Peter Steyl Memorial Award was won by Robert Marshall.

These, plus second and third place winners and honorable mentions will be on display through August.

PORTRAITS of American historical figures, completed over a period of five years, makes up the master's show by Robert Pryor. The 24 drawings and paintings may be seen through Friday in the Little Gallery at California State College, Long Beach.

"Pryor has synthesized a fresh image for each figure from a complex of impressions gathered from the popular graphic arts of their eras," said Richard S. Oden, CSLB assistant professor of art.

"A significant aspect of Pryor's work is the graphic skill with which he draws his forms. This persistent drawing commitment is perhaps most exciting in his work."

A portrait of John C. Fremont is composed of California symbols including a bear, poppy and quail. Jenny Lind is a life size painting based on a photograph with attention to qualities of light, color and scratches and damage to the original.

Other figures are P.T. Barnum, Laurel and Hardy, Betsy Ross, Robert E. Lee, Rutherford B. Hayes, Charles Chaplin, Susan B. Anthony, George and Martha Washington, Thomas Edison, Benjamin Franklin, John James Audubon, Theodore Roosevelt and the Stanley Brothers.

LEROY KNOUSE has a display of graphics at the Armed Services YMCA, 520 W. Seaside Blvd.

EMPHASIS IS on yourh at Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim. During the current run of "Take Her, She's Mine," through Sept. 9, Millikan High School students are showing their arts and crafts in the Studio Room of the playhouse. Among the many media are hooked rugs, framed yarn art, pottery, papier mache figures and flowers and abstracts of wire and wood.

DURING this month, paintings by members of Tanglewood Art Class are on exhibit at the City Hall, 5275 Ornage Ave., Cypress, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. The works are seascapes, florals and other realistic subjects.

Joan Binkoff's art has poetic dimension

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Joan Binkoff, printmaking instructor at Long Beach City College, is artist of the month at the Unitarian Church, 5450 Atherton St. Her 25 works which include serigraphs, etchings, woodcuts, intaglio, and one drawing, are displayed around the four interior walls of the church.

Perhaps it was the location, empty of all save one music student practicing for his graduation recital, that gave these works an extra poetic dimension. Much of the visual appeal comes from colors which are rich but short of surfeited. Subject matter—human beings, birds, nature, or abstraction—reflects an intense emotional involvement.

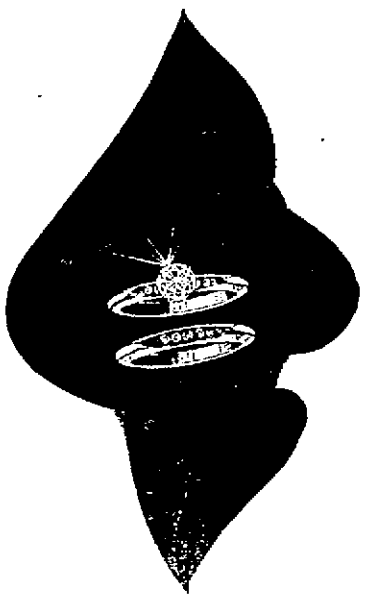

The works seem, at the same time, to sing the glories of things created, while pointing out their extreme vulnerability. They range from a beautifully-drawn cluster of nestlings to the non-objective, dynamic movements and textures of "Icarus Fell."

MRS. BINKOFF, who has studied in several schools in New York, received her B.A. at CSLB, and has worked as a commercial artist, seems to have no problems with these several graphic techniques.

This exhibit may be viewed, Mondays through Fridays, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. through Aug. 26.

DEAR ABBY

He's a bit old for this

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Recently a "thank you" letter came in the mail for my husband of 39 years. Perhaps I shouldn't have opened it, as it was addressed to him alone, but I'm supposed to opening all the mail that comes to the house, I never gave it a second thought.

It was from a high school girl graduate, thanking "Dear Snookie-Poo" for the portable TV set!

Now I would say that's a rather expensive gift for a high school girl to get from a man whose wife has never even heard of her, wouldn't you? It was signed with lots of love and a whole string of "X's." And then her name.

Should I ring up the girl's mother and ask her if she knows that her daughter has a 64-year-old admirer by the name of "Snookie-Poo?"

SNOOKIE-POO'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Don't ring up anybody. Confront "Snookie-Poo" with the evidence and ask him to explain his generosity and also his interest in a high school girl. If he doesn't make sense to you, look into the situation with a doctor on one side and a lawyer on the other. He may need the counsel of both.

Howards' treasures of the Orient 'give pleasure to persons interested'

By ELISE EMERY

"I saw things that amazed my eyes!"

So wrote a fourth-grade boy after his class visited Assistance League House, 394 Roswell Ave., to see and hear about the handsome Howard Oriental Collection.

His forthright written thank-you note to the league's Howard Collection Information Committee sums up the reaction of the many children and adults who have been shown the rich examples of Oriental furniture and art.

A recent class of fourth-graders chose to say thank-you in the traditional form of the Japanese Haiku, classic verse of 17 syllables, about something happening in the present and containing some reference to nature.

For example, one miss wrote:

Like a lovely bird spreading its wings to a long life swoops the graceful fan.

More fourth-graders' Haikus are picture captions.

SCHOLARS and collectors, too, have examined the treasures. One of the best known is Dr. Henry Trubner, former curator of Oriental art at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, now curator of the Far Eastern department, Royal Ontario Museum, University of Toronto. Most recent was Dr. Jon Carter Covell, author and professor of art history at California State College, Long Beach. Impressed, she brought her summer class in Oriental art history from Idyllwild Wednesday to view especially the ancient pottery and silks.

All of this would have delighted Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lincoln Howard.

It was in the late 1890s that Walter, a Rhode Island schoolteacher, went to Honolulu where he met and married Margaret Hare, an Oregon schoolteacher.

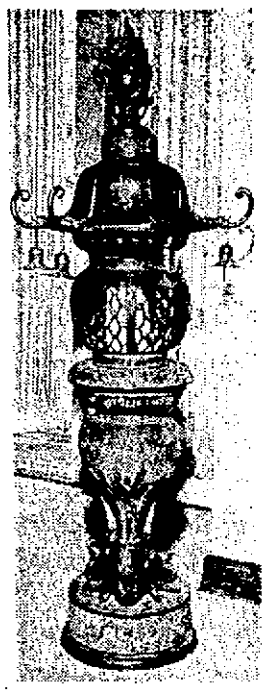

For their honeymoon, they circled the globe and fell captive to Oriental art. Back in Honolulu, they began their collection.

In 1912 they came to Long Beach. In the old Bixby home at the corner of Magnolia Avenue and Ocean Boulevard, they lived and maintained a store until 1930. They made eight trips to the Orient to add to their collection which included the massive, carved state dining room set made of blackwood from the German ambassador to the Kingdom of Hawaii.

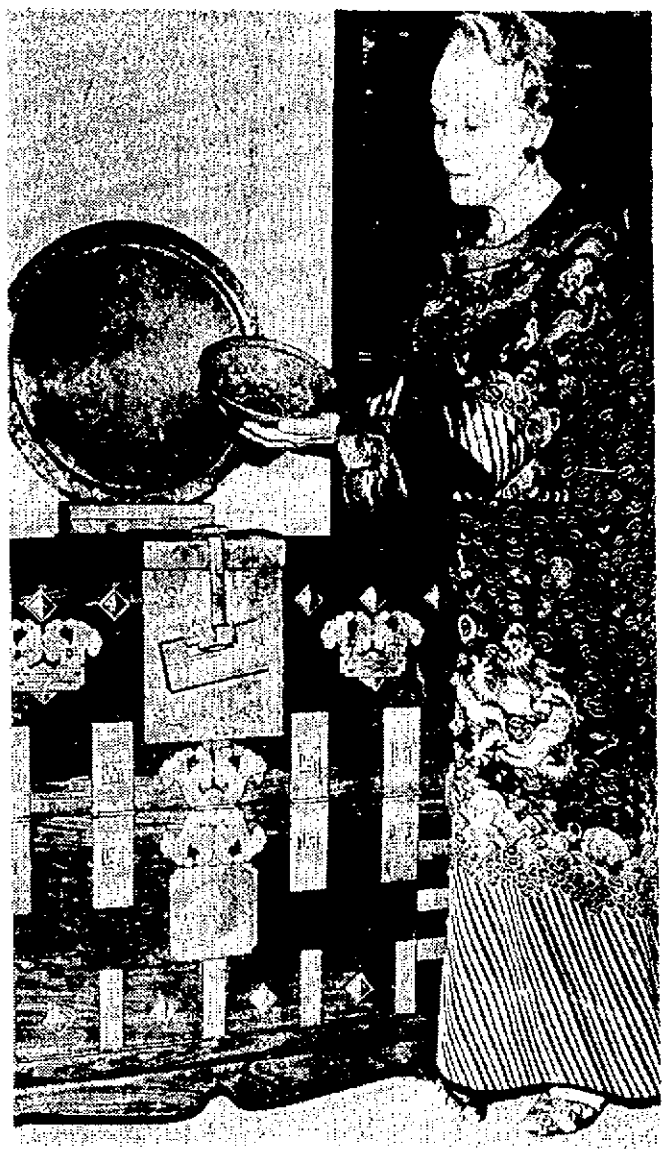

AFTER HOWARD'S death in 1940, Margaret, grief sticken, wrote in her will: "I direct that my tapestries, Oriental silks and costumes, works of art and curios, together with my Chinese furniture be by executors turned over to such institution as is able, willing and capable of properly preserving and caring for the same. — It is my desire that the works of art that I have been many years collecting be so placed that they will be educational and give pleasure to persons interested in such matters."

She died in 1946 at the age of 78. Two colleges sought the collection, but Assistance League was deemed best to meet the terms of the will. Members acquired the League House which was dedicated Sept. 24, 1949, to house the collection of 2,716 items.

That the league is fulfilling Margaret's wishes is shown in the notes—and Haikus—that come about the Eight Immortals, Phoenix birds, emperor's robes, royal dragons, ginger jars, lacquer, inlaid woods, incense burners—proof that the beauty, wisdom and mystery of the East is rich heritage for the West.

IN FRONT of inlaid screen are Mrs. Emmet Sullivan, expert on lacquer, and Mrs. Douglas Newcomb who prepares to strike temple gong whose ringing announces beginning of talk.

Their interest awakened by the eminent Chinese art authority, Dr. Yu Shan Han of UCLA who inventoried the collection, a few Assistance League members formed the Howard Collection Information Committee. They have studied and researched Oriental art and, when requested, give talks about the collection to organizations.

Committee members, under chairmanship of Mrs. Earl Burns Miller, are Mmes. Douglas Newcomb, co-chairman; Logan Goodknight, Lewis B. Kean, Eugene Kirkpatrick, C. Robert Langslet, Laurence E. Ruff, Emmet M. Sullivan, Richard A. Walker and Joseph P. Wilson.

Names spell romance in this dramatic furniture

EXPENSIVE MACHINERY CUTS COST FOR HAND-FINISHING PROCESS . . . Raymond Enkeboll (right) oversees carving on multiple spindle carver which performs work comparable to that of 200 men.

give a bedroom suite a light finish and a decorator calls it French, the same set could be done in darker tones and be called Italian.

"I smell, live with and taste wood," he said.

"I look at a slab of lumber, study the texture, survey it from all sides. The feel, formation and grain is what determines if it is to be a 42-inch console or an octagonal table."

A prime characteristic of the Enkeboll line is the painstaking treatment in the finishing processes.

Each felt-lined drawer in cabinets, tables or armoires is backed with aromatic cedar. Spring loaded teak side guides insure soundless, smooth running drawers. Pewter treatments enhance hardware.

While construction is much the same during the rough mill process, Enkeboll says the difference between mass produced and custom furniture is in the final fitting, assembly and finishing.

He has invested heavily in machinery for initial steps in order to perform additional treatments to the finishing process.

Another means of offsetting costs is by designing interchangable parts.

"I have 5,000 different combinations for cabinets alone," he explained, "which allows different lengths and widths to be run simultaneously on the assembly line.

IN LONG BEACH, the Enkeboll line is available at Lloyd's of Long Beach.

"I may never make a fortune, but I enjoy what I'm doing, he said.

"At times I've taken so much enjoyment in making an item, I've deceived myself by not considering the cost of labor and materials," he admitted.

"One of my follies was a smashing little library stool with spiral step-ladder. By the time it was finished, it cost $145 to manufacture and it was impossible to ask more than $150 for it.

"You might say the incentive to own my furniture is based on desire," said the stubborn Dane.

"People don't buy it because they need it, but because they want a chest or chair or table that has an ageless dignity and beauty."

Anderson-Prater

A home in Newport Beach awaits Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stephen Anderson (the former Jeane Marie Prater) who exchanged wedding vows Saturday in Lynwood Methodist Church.

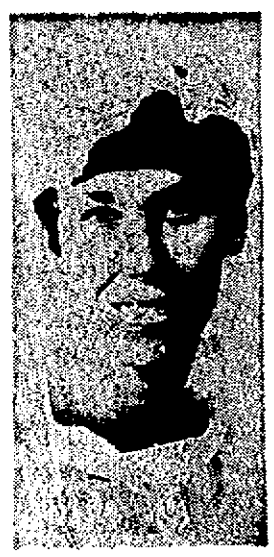

Among the 250 guests witnessing the 2 p.m. ceremony were parents of the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Max C. Anderson, 6280 Lewis Ave., and Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Prater, 3672 Lynwood Road, Lynwood.

A Chantilly lace cage en train over peau de soie was worn by the bride who was attended by Mrs. James Alabashi, matron of honor, Mrs. Michael Ford, Mrs. John Prater and Stacy Prater, bridesmaids. Kristin Sue Prater was flower girl.

Steven Anderson stood as best man for his brother. Ushers were Thomas Romeyn, John Prater and Warren Sayers. Mark Baxter Prater was ring bearer.

After a reception in Downey Woman's Clubhouse, the newlyweds departed on a trip to San Francisco.

Both are graduates of California State College, Long Beach, where she affiliated with Alpha Phi sorority and he was a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity. He also served with the Peace Corps in Africa. Both will teach in Newport Beach.

From Los Angeles to Yosemite Nat. Pk. on 1 tank of gas.

You can do it easily in a Renault 10. It averages an honest 35 m.p.g. (Multiply that by the 10 gallons its tank holds and you get 350 miles—more than enough for the trip.)

In fact, if you avoid a lot of stop and start maneuvers and stay away from the Renault's top speed of 84 m.p.h., you can even do better than 35 m.p.g.

Pago Pago a jewel in Pacific

EDITOR'S NOTE: This concludes a series of columns written by Travel Editor Fred Kraft while on a six-week cruise through the South Pacific aboard Matson's luxury liner, the SS Mariposa.)

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

Some visitors to sun-drenched but air-cooled Pago Pago, the queenly nirvana of American Samoa, may one day forget it was there that W. Somerset Maugham wrote "Miss Sadie Thompson" but they will always remember Pago Pago Harbor.

Our sea-going city, the SS Mariposa, edged through the pass into the narrow, goose-necked bay past Rainmaker Mountain in the first rays of a morning sun. On the right Mt. Alava drops steeply to water's edge, the distant illusion of gossamer on her almost perpendicular wall becoming a reality of lush greenery shot with patches of riotous tropical blossoms. Farther back, on the left, Mr. Matafao slopes more gently to village and dock. A seeming tint of violet added an out-of-this-world quality that occasionally enriches South Seas sunrises and sunsets.

The village spread out thinly — for it is little more than a village — from the turquoise bay, a potpourri of two-story colonial-style American government buildings, frame store structures and thatched, open-sided fales in which Samoans have lived at least since 400 A.D.

* * * *

DESPITE the hour, a sprinkling of natives and Americans were on hand. In Hawaii, it is "Aloha"; in Tahiti, "Iaorana," but here it comes out "Talofa" accompanied by broad smiles and jubilant waving.

It must have been the same when the first white man, Dutch Captain Roggenwein, set foot on the island in 1722, and when vessels of the United States Navy first visited there in 1839. Except for the government structures and clapboard stores which, not so strangely, appear out of place in this setting.

Tutuila (pronounced too-too-ee-la), the 52-square-mile island upon which Pago Pago (pang-o pang-o) sprouted, is the home of about 12,000 Samoans who have adapted themselves with grace and poise to new ways since the United States took them over in 1900 but who have, at the same time, retained to a large measure, the language and culture of their ancestors.

Literacy has improved vastly since the schools began a television system of teaching, inaugurated about five years ago by the dedicated H. Rex Lee who on Aug. 1 retired the governorship after an illustrious career.

* * * *

I ASKED Lee's successor, Owen S. Aspinall, for six years lieutenant governor, what he considered to be the most significant achievement by the United States in governing this territory.

"Education," he said without hesitation. As an example, he pointed to a recent civil service examination. Of the 139 who undertook the test, 19 of those passing were only high school graduates. Aspinall gives the credit to television teaching.

Fofo I. F. Sunia, director of tourism of the Government of American Samoa, whom I was later to learn was a high talking chief in Samoan tribunals, told me in his impeccable English that the children are taught the native tongue before starting to school and continue to speak it within the family circle through childhood even though English is taught in the classrooms.

Installing the video system posed an almost insurmountable problem of constructing a transmitter atop steep Mt. Alava (1,612 feet) overlooking the harbor and city. Finally an aerial tram was conceived and built high across the harbor to get the heavy equipment into place. The cost was $150,000 but it turned out to be a handsome investment in more ways than one. Today, tourists by the score take the two-mile-round-trip ride each week out over the harbor to a lookout for a magnificent view of village and port far below and a birds-eye view of the other side of the island. Even Western Samoa and the Manu'a Islands, 60 miles east and west, are clearly visible on a sunny day.

* * * *

SIGHTSEEING tours through the lush countryside, dotted with picturesque fales where many Samoans continue to live happily apart from civilization as they have for centuries, somehow gives the visitor a feeling of exhultation.

Pago Pago is now a free port and shopper's paradise. Best buy are objects carved from native woods, a craft at which the Samoans are particularly adept, and beads, dolls and jewelry and other items fashioned from coral and shells picked up in the nearby surf. And, except for the Virgin Islands and Guam, it is the only place in the world where a U.S. citizen may buy $200 worth of tax-free merchandise, including five fifths of liquor.

The influx of visitors is constantly rising, taxing the capacity of the beautiful thatched-roof Hotel Inter-Continental Pago Pago and cottages which, owned by 1,400 Samoans are modeled after the traditional fale. To meet the boom, 60 more units will be added during the coming year. It is the only luxury facility on the island.

* * * *

IN ADDITION to the Mariposa and her sister ship, the SS Monterey, which make alternate calls every three weeks, vessels of the P&O Lines have scheduled stops. A freighter calls every three weeks, concluding a voyage from Auckland, Suva, Tonga and Niue.

The big jets have been spinning into Tafuna Airport, at the outskirts of Pago Pago, since this ultramodern facility was completed in 1962. Pan Am has two weekly flights from Honolulu. (2,276 miles), one connecting the island with Sydney (2,100 miles), another with Tahiti (1,500 miles). Both Flights return to Honolulu via Pago Pago. Air New Zealand flies the Auckland-Nadi-Pago Pago route each Sunday morning, and Polynesian Airlines makes daily hops to Western Samoa.

American Samoans are preponderently devout Christians. Those who do not attend church are "looked down upon" by their neighbors. They are peaceful, happy, hospitable, and particularly proud that their islands are part of the United States.

After a too-short stay, the Mariposa slowly gathered steam and swung around for the ocean freeway to Honolulu and San Francisco. In the process, the yellow cab of the tramway appeared like a bird overhead and dumped bushels of fresh flowers over her decks, flowers that were to be watered by tears of those saddened to leave.

It was the Samoans' final "Talofa" to their newfound friends.

MATSON'S ELEGANT CRUISE SHIP, the SS Mariposa, enters Pago Pago Harbor. In foreground is the posh 100-room Hotel Inter-Continental Pago Pago; in background, the village and docks of this mid-South Pacific destination. (Pacific Area Travel Association photo)

Red China Diary

By ROBERT E. DALLOS
New York Times Service

The first American television crew to enter Communist China has emerged with 9,800 feet of sound color film. They had to use a ruse to get it.

The Columbia Broadcasting System Correspondent Morley Safer spent three weeks last month visiting Peking, Shanghai, Canton, Sian and Yenan. Safer, a Canadian citizen said he traveled on a tourist visa issued in Paris with John B. Peters, a British cameraman. Both posed as wealthy tourists interested in art and archaeology.

Safer said in an interview at the CBS Broadcast Center, New York, that he was convinced that the Communist Chinese were not aware that he was employed by CBS. He said he was not required to list his occupation when he filled out that application for a visa in May.

SAFER SAID that he had been refused a visa several times in the past, and that he was surprised that on this trip the Chinese did not discover his true mission.

He said, however, that he had several brushes with Chinese officials, including one in Shanghai when he was hauled before a "Revolutionary Court" on charges of "crimes against the people."

His film, which includes interviews with Red Guards at Peking University and visits to communes, hospitals and industrial exhibits, will be shown at 10 p.m. Tuesday, channel 2, as an hour-long documentary entitled "Morely Safer's Red China Diary."

SAFER, WHO HAS received a number of awards for his coverage of the war in Vietnam, traveled to Peking via Moscow on July 8. He returned to the West by way of Hong Kong 20 days later. While he was in Red China he was unable to communicate with CBS.

He said that he made his trip on a "package" tour, for which he paid the Monit Travel Agency of Paris $1,500 in advance. The fee included all of his hotel and traveling expenses and most of his meals.

Since the Chinese require that four

AGNES MOOREHEAD . . . "Disappear for us"

Pied Piper with an Emmy

By TERRY VERNON

What a difference an Emmy makes. Just ask Agnes Moorehead.

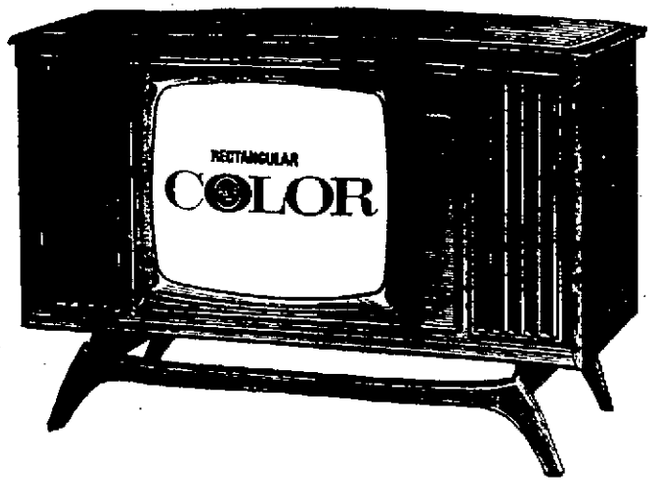

Miss Moorehead, "always a bridesmaid but never a bride" in the race for awards, walked away with her first Emmy at the last awards and has found a new role as a result—a Pied Piper.

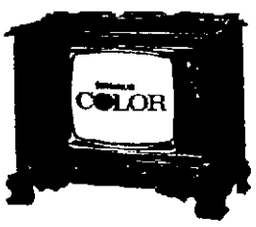

Miss Moorehead, Endora of ABC-TV's "Bewitched," had been nominated for five Academy Awards and two Emmys before her recent nominations in two Emmy categories, but never had she received one of the coveted statues.

Although she feels she won her Emmy in the wrong category, "I was the female star of the show ("Wild, Wild West") and received the Emmy for "Outstanding Performance by an actress in a Supporting Role in a Drama," she readily admits "it was a tremendous thrill winning, and I'm most grateful," she explained during a break

Jill Townsend

Types in 3 Languages

JILL TOWNSEND . . . Shorthand in Reserve

Jill Townsend, a thoroughly realistic young lady whose career grew wings from the very beginning, is featured in the 80-minute Western adventure series "Cimarron Strip," starring Stuart Whitman, which will be broadcast Thursday nights on the CBS Television Network starting Sept. 7.

Miss Townsend's mother was British movie and stage actress Joan Tours, her grandfather composer conductor Frank Tours of Hollywood musicals and Irving Berlin hits, and her grandmother dancer-actress Helen Clark, who appeared in George Gershwin's first Broadway show.

JUST THREE weeks after completing studies at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London, Miss Townsend was cast opposite Nicol Williamson in the British hit "Inadmissible Evidence," which played on Broadway for six months.

A fashion layout she did for publicity turned out so well that she soon found herself working all day as a high-fashion model for leading U.S. women's magazines while performing on Broadway at night.

In swift succession she co-starred with Sid Caesar in "The Spirit Is Willing," played a glittering London memorial show with the Laurence Olivier, Alec Guinness and Noel Coward, did a pair of U.S. television guest spots, and was cast in "Cimarron Strip."

BUT BEFORE her Cinderella-like emergence as a highly regarded actress, Miss Townsend took a long, hard look toward the future.

"I wanted very dearly to enter the theater, but I tried to be sensible and accept the fact that my family's making a go of it in show business didn't mean I would do as well," she explains in a crisp British accent. "I decided that I must protect myself in case I failed."

Miss Townsend decided that a most practical anchor to windward would be secretarial work, in which a competent girl can always find employment. She then took an intensive secretarial course in three languages — English, French and Spanish — before enrolling in the Royal Academy.

"Acting is marvelous, but it's good to know I can do something else if I must," she says.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

THE OTHER night we were looking through the Television Log for something late at night — and really found it.

It was a 1929 movie, "Condemned," with Ronald Coleman and Ann Harding. That's 28 years old!

We recall the first talkie was Al Jolson's "Jazz Singer" in 1927. But this summer with re-runs of re-runs and defunct shows — even that 49-year-old classic wouldn't be so bad.

They must have to keep those old films in the deep freeze to keep them from spoiling.

J. Paul Gleason
Long Beach

I WAS wondering if either of the movies, "The Moon-Spinners" or "The Fighting Prince of Donegal" will be shown on television. I have seen previews of these movies and have enjoyed them very much . . .

Geri Kelley
Bellflower

("Moon-Spinners" has been aired and will repeat as a three-parter, Aug. 20, 27, Sept. 3; "Fighting Prince," will air, also as three-parter, Oct. 1, 8, 15. Both will be on Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color on ch. 4).

TO ALL those lovely people who wrote those nice letters about "Star Trek," I can only say "amen, brothren."

However, I have some questions of my own. When will Leonard Nimoy's album, "Mr. Spock's Music from Outer Space" be released? Are any of the "Star Trek" people scheduled to be guests on any of the "talk" shows in the near future? I heard that the producer's plan to give Mr. Spock a girl friend (which he needs like an attack of the maudlins) had been scuttled; what's the scan on that? Lastly: are the powers that be planning to rerun the episode titled, "The City on the Edge of Forever?" That was definitely one of the best of the season; really worth waiting for.

Ray Ann Rhoads
Long Beach

(Nimoy's record is available on the Dot label; nothing in the way of guest appearances at present although probably in September when there's a break in filming; Mr. Spock is scheduled to visit the planet Vulcan where he was interested in a girl, but for just one episode next season—no regular girl friend for Mr. Spock; "City on the Edge of Forever" will repeat Aug. 31).

. . . WHILE "Star Trek" is a fine show, it is by no standard (Earth or otherwise) excellent. I object to a writer's statement that "Star Trek" is the ultimate . . . Ultimate means, "beyond which there is no progress." Surely some progress can be made with the comic book plots used in the show. I doubt if Mr. Spock would think it logical.

CRITICS' CORNER

Excerpted Reviews from Television Critics

PROGRAM: "No We Won't Go," aired Tuesday, KNXT (ch. 2).

If the intent here was an in depth study of the whys and wherefores of objectors to military service, it fell wide of the mark. Why the CBS western flagship chose to call it a special is one of the evils of the business. It was falsely labelled. What is so special about 25 minutes of old clips stitched together . . . to sell as something extraordinary to advertisers who buy minutes like there is no tomorrow?

Station also was deceitful in the title, omitting the front word "hell," but having it shouted and screamed more times than the expletive will be heard all next season on TV . . .

While one official blamed the press for not giving the draft inductees as much publicity as the dissenters, KNXT played along to prove the point. But calling this a special — hell no.

—Helm, Variety

PROGRAM: "The Exciting World of Sight and Sound," broadcast Tuesday, KCOP (ch. 13).

"After circus barker's buildup of the great import of what the program was to be about —"a journey to the center of your mind," no less — (Eugene) Blau proceeded to recount ancient fables and myths, not noticeably different than Bishop Fulton J. Sheen has done, in order to draw morals, formulate conclusions and make modern sense out of apparent chaos . . .

Attempting to use TV as an art instrument rather than just the eye through which other works of art can be seen provided an interesting and tantalizing demonstration of what modern electronic technology can do with color, shape and design . . .

Miss America's Temptations

Great Eating Cities Can Ruin Figure

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press International

The Miss America Pageant spends a year searching the nation for a talented girl with a beautiful figure and then what does it do? It sends her on a tour that includes the great eating cities and the poor girl is tempted to ruin the shape that won her the title in the first place.

In New York for an appearance on the NBC-TV "Today" show the reigning Miss America, Jane Anne Jayroe, 20, of Laverne, Okla., looked back over a year of countless official lunches and dinners and claimed she still was close to the 36-24-35 proportions admired by the judges at Atlantic City last year.

"BUT IT wasn't easy," she said, picking at her scrambled eggs at The Brasserie, N.Y. "You travel so fast and so far you don't get a chance to exercise. And you're always being offered delicious-looking food—like rice dishes in Barcelona or spaghetti in Rome or pastry in Paris not to mention all the places you visit in the United States and Canada."

"You also sit a lot," added her chaperone, Mrs. Irene Bryant of Overland Park, Kan., whose daughter, Debbie, was Miss America of 1966.

"Yes," sighed the brunette Miss Jayroe, "and you don't get much chance to exercise, either."

MODESTLY she said she would not be satisfied with herself until after she completes a forthcoming two-week tour entertainment tour of Vietnam with a troupe of beauties who have competed in the Miss America Pageant.

"The dancing I'll be doing and the climate in Vietnam plus the traveling ought to have me just right for the Miss America Pageant on Sept. 9 (NBC-TV) when I pass the crown to the new winner," she said.

What has been the effect of a year of celebrity on Miss Jayroe, a small-town girl who had never flown before the contest and has since covered more than 200,000 miles, met thousands of more or less important people—and earned some $75,000?

Although her home town (pop. 2,000) named its main street Jane Anne Jayroe Boulevard, her feet are firmly on the ground.

"YOU GET a scholarship among your prizes," she said, "and I'll be glad to get back to school—at least for a while. I want to get my degree as a teacher of music at college level."

She said she was not engaged and was less interested in romance at the moment than in a possible career as a pop singer. She sings everthing from folk to musical comedy and wouldn't mind being a recording star, if that should be in the cards.

"If that doesn't happen," she said, "I'd like to work as a conductor with large choral groups."

Miss Jayroe heard with surprise that Italian men often pinch attractive (and unattractive) girls. No one pinched her.

"But I got a lot of letters from Spanish men, she said. "I'm thinking of having them translated.

"Take my advice," said an experienced traveler, "have them translated by your chaperone."

Red China Diary

persons make up such a tour, the agency supplied two young Frenchmen to accompany Safer and the British cameraman.

They went through customs in Peking with 12 pieces of luggage, three cameras, a tape recorder ("it broke down on my first day") and 10,000 feet of sound and 10,000 feet of silent TV film. All the gear, he said, was carried in suitcases instead of camera cases "so as not to attract attention."

GRAMMAR SCHOOL children in Sian, Western China, greet "tourist" Morley Safer in this scene from "Morley Safer's Red China Diary," uncensored film to be aired Tuesday on channel 2.

THE GROUP WAS assigned a French-speaking Chinese guide, a Mr. Yung, who remained with them throughout the trip. At each city they were also accompanied by local tour guides.

Each morning before the group set out, they were required to read in unison for several minutes from the small Red Book, "The Quotations of Chairman Mao Tse-Tung." They also had to wear a small red lapel pin with a golden cameo of Mao on it.

Safer said he was told in each city that as a result of the cultural revolution, all of the museums were closed. Instead the sightseers were taken to factories, educational institutions and exhibits.

"What more could a newsman ask for," he said.

EVERYONE MUST read the thoughts of Chairman Mao twice a day—even tourists. Safer (dark shirt) joins his guides in Yemen for morning reading.

'Shooting' on the Streets

'N'.Y.P.D.' Uses City as Background

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press International

"Now wait a minute. I'm not a bum," said the bum. "I'm with the FBI. I happen to be in disguise. I'd like to be in this scene."

Well, that's one of the hazards of using New York City as background for a television series. You film in the streets and take your chances and every now and then you run into something like the dialogue above.

"I thought," said Jack Warden, star of the new "N.Y.P.D." series on ABC-TV "that he was going to use the old line: 'Give me a dollar sixty for a bottle of wine or I'll run you all in.' But he didn't really bother us and you've got to expect something like that on the Bowery."

"N. Y. P. D.," the initials for New York Police Department, is described as a police drama series and it not only has the cooperation of the cops but Mayor John Lindsay, himself, came down to the little studio in Greenwich Village—formerly the old Polish Dance Hall—to wish the venture well.

Lindsay has been campaigning for more film-making in the metropolis but at the moment N.Y.P.D. is his only capture which may explain why the local gendarmerie opened its files for the story lines to the producers, Talent Associates.

Warden, whose most recent starring series was "The Wackiest Ship in the Army," thinks the half-hour dramas are gutsier than most. He was filming one about the blackmailing of homosexuals. A prominent businessman, also known to be a homosexual, agreed to act as a decoy to nab the extortionists.

"I hope the series opens with that," said Warden whose own career, incidentally, would make good television viewing—professional boxer, dance hall bouncer, tugboat deckhand, lifeguard, Paratrooper and one of the best all-around actors in the business.

POWERFULLY built, as might be expected from that precis, Warden said he didn't mind filming with hundreds or even thousands of onlookers.

"Acting is concentration," he said. "People don't disturb you. Within the concentration you can even use them. The fact that we are working in the districts where the stories actually happened is helpful. We spent a whole day at the morgue—on the roof. We've been all over the place, The Bronx, Brooklyn Heights, Greenwich Village.

"We're using and actual police station, Charles Street, for the exterior of the precinct from which I work as a lieutenant in homocide with Frank Converse and Robert Hooks as my aides. We were shooting on the liner United States one day and complained about the noise of fire engines. What we didn't know was that there was a small fire on the other end of the ship. We've been in saloons, steak houses and hotels."

Warden said he thought "the big innovation" of the series was the use of the smaller 16 millimeter camera (instead of 35 millimeters).

"You can get tremendous actuality with it because of its small size," he said. "You can do running shots and walking shots with the camera moving along. You can practically get into keyholes with it."

between takes at Screen Gems.

"Even the nomination makes a difference in your life, let alone winning," she said.

Miss Moorehead, who spent time off from "Bewitched" touring the East Coast in her one woman show, "The Fabulous Redhead," ended her trip with a tour of Expo 67.

And while there she found herself to be a real Pied Piper.

"The entire time I was in Canada these young children seemed to be following me constantly.

AGNES MOOREHEAD

They kept asking me to disappear, 'Hello Endora, for us" all the time they yelled.

"At first it was amusing, then trying, but overall very rewarding. In fact, it was great! It was great because here were these young persons looking up to me, respecting me. Me, the older generation performer who doesn't wear clothes or rebel against the world.

"At a time when many of the younger people think us older folk to be 'square,' it was probably the most exciting point of my life to go somewhere and get that kind of response," she said.

Spy Cycle Dying

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

The James Bond spy cycle on television is all but dead in the coming season.

Virtually the only remaining all-out entry in this field is NBC-TV's "The Man From U.N.C.L.E." CBS TV's "Mission: Impossible" and another NBC-TV hour, "I Spy," come close. But the recent rash of other imitations has done a fast fade.

LOOKING at the new fall schedule, in fact, one is struck at how network television has come full circle in its series entertainment. For outside of the many old movies and the remaining situation comedies, the schedule is loaded heavily with westerns, police and detective series, and variety shows.

The Westerns are numerous. They include "Cowboy in Africa," "The Big Valley," "Gunsmoke," "Custer," "Dundee and the Culhane," "The Virginian," "Cimmaron Strip," "Daniel Boone," "Hondo," "The Guns of Will Sonnett," "The Wild, Wild West," "Iron Horse," "Bonanza" and "The High Chapparal."

The police and detective series, meanwhile, include "The Felony Squad," "N.Y.P.D." (New York Police Department), "Ironside," "Dragnet," "Mannix" and "The FBI."

AND AMONG the variety shows that used to be so popular, and are having a renewal of success, are the weekly hours of Carol Burnett, Red Skelton, Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, Lawrence Welk, Jackie Gleason, Ed Sullivan and The Smothers Brothers. There are, in addition, "The Hollywood Palace" and "The Kraft Music Hall."

Science fiction also shows up in prime time with some weekly regularity. In this category are "The Invaders," "Lost In Space," "Star Trek" and "Voyage To The Bottom Of The Sea."

The panel show—once represented by such entries as "Password," "To Tell The Truth," "I've Got A Secret", and "What's My Line?"—has all but disappeared from prime time.

SPECIAL

FOUR TOPS at the Grove — The popular singing group, just back from a tour of England arranged by Brian Epstein, made their debut at the Cocoanut Grove on Aug. 8. Army Archerd hosts a taped hour at 7:30 p.m., ch. 13, interviewing some of the opening-night celebrities attending their performance, and listening to some of their current hit songs.

'Space' Girl Translates for 'Seaview' Crew

Irwin Allen, producer of 20th Century-Fox Television's adventure series, "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea," making its fourth season debut Sept. 17 over Channel 7, recently received a request from a group of Norwegian seamen to visit the Seaview, the 600-foot-long atomic submarine-of-the-future.

When the Norwegian sailors arrived in the Los Angeles area, Allen introduced them to Richard Basehart and David Hedison who volunteered to conduct them on a tour through the Seaview.

Discovering that not one of the 30 seamen could speak more than a few simple words of English, Hedison enlisted the aid of Marta Kristen, Oslo-born star of Allen's "Lost in Space" series which was shooting on an adjoining stage.

With Marta serving as interpreter for the group, Basehart and Hedison began taking the visiting Scandinavians through the complex workings of the Seaview.

At each point along the route, Basehart would explain a highly technical aspect of the ship's working mechanism with Marta deftly translating.

As the tour neared completion, David turned to his Seaview sailing buddy.

"You know something, Richard," he said, "I have the feeling that the boys are more intrigued with the ship-shape dimensions of Marta than with those of the Seaview."

"You're right, David," affirmed Basehart. "No translation required there."

SPECIAL

STEVE ALLEN — John Byner, Lou Rawls, Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara, and a new singing group called the Love Generation join Steve in his final summer hour at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 2. Sketches deal with a convention of criminals, two Senators answering audience questions, a Jewish-Irish couple, and, as a farewell, Allen's humorous soliloquy of television, a la Hamlet. Hour next week goes to a special on the Middle East, followed by "The Model of the Year Pageant," and then by the fall premiere of "Dundee and the Culhane."

STAGESTRUCK Joi Lansing is directed by Max Baer on "The Beverly Hillbillies" repeat on ch. 2 at 8:30 p.m., Wednesday.

LUCY JARVIS, NBC producer of the "Khrushchev in Exile" show, shown holding some of her six Emmy awards won in 1965 for "The Louvre" tells of her plans for a production about the pursuit of youth and beauty in the U.S.

Cult of Youth

Compulsive Pursuit in U.S.

United Press International

Lucy Jarvis dropped in to chat to a barber friend and discovered he was now calling himself a hair stylist. In one of the booths that had replaced the familiar reclining chairs was a well-known executive in the midst of a three-hour treatment intended to make him look like a young, vigorous sun-tanned swinger.

Mrs. Jarvis was curious — curiosity is a valuable trait in television producers. Why should a distinguished and attractive man in his late 50s have to submit to hair styling, hair dyeing and facial makeup to create an illusion of youth when he already had such obvious assets as maturity and experience?

She learned the executive was about to try to sell a business deal and such is the obsession of our times with youth that the fact the proposition was being explained by a gray-haired man might have killed it. And thereby hangs a television special which is even now germinating under the bouffant brunette hair-do of one of NBC's most dynamic producers.

It's theme will be "The Compulsive Pursuit of Youth and Beauty in the United States."

The new program on the cult of youth will go deeper than simply reporting the "slightly ridiculous" effort of 50-year-old women to be with it in miniskirts or men buying chestwigs to simulate virility or the whole $4 billion a year men's cosmetics industry.

"The younger generation has forced the worship of youth on us," she said, speaking as a mother as well as a producer. "It is the product of permissiveness and in our overemphasis on trying to understand our children we have ended up being intimidated by them."

She has the unfashionable idea that there is no substitute for experience, that creative life does not end at 24, that the middle generation (to which she belongs) is talented, literated and still has a lot to contribute.

Jamboree

James Stewart is narrator as ABC-TV "specials" the World Boy Scout Jamboree at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, at 8 p.m. Friday, ch. 7.

The program follows delegates to the jamboree from the time they leave their native countries through their stay in the United States.

SPECIAL

BOY SCOUT Jamboree— James Stewart, a member of the L.A. area council executive board of the Boy Scouts, narrates a visit to Idaho's Farragut State Park earlier this month where 13,000 Scouts from nearly 100 nations and territories observed their 12th international jamboree marking the 60th anniversary of world scouting. At 9 p.m., ch. 7, in color, we see delegates in their native lands, jamboree demonstrations, the giant barbecue and such visitors as Lady Baden-Powell and Scott Carpenter.

HOME of Modern Miracles — KNBC cameras explore the ultra-modern facilities of L. A.'s new Children's Hospital during a color hour at 10 p.m., ch. 4. Mrs. Pat Thomas, president of the Mary Duque Guild, is guide as we visit with nurses, patients and the chief surgeon, and note the modern laundry, an electron microscope, an electronic conveyor system and a TV X-ray machine with instant replay.

TV NOTEBOOK

"History of Art," the first commercial television Junior College credit course in the Southern California area, will be introduced to viewers in a special advance preview program in color at 4 p.m. today (Sunday over KABC-TV, Channel 7.

The regular color programs on "History of Art" will be seen Saturdays, 7:30-8:30 a.m., beginning Sept. 16, and will continue through Saturday, Jan. 20, 1968.

The first semester course is designed to meet the academic requirements of a three semester unit undergraduate credit course and will be conducted by Professor Lennox Tierney, art historian, lecturer, photographer, author and world-traveller. He is presently Chairman of the Art Department of Pasadena City College, Director of the Japan-American Society in Los Angeles, and Director of the Oriental Museum division of the Pacificulture Foundation.

Registration forms for those interested in Junior College course credit should write to Dr. Joseph Michaels, TV Program Coordinator, Pasadena City College, 1570 East Colorado Blvd., Pasadena, Calif. 91106. The last day for registration is Monday, Sept. 25.

CBS DECIDED to film interviews with five great trial lawyers for Harry Reasoner's new documentary series, "Who, What, When, Where, Why" and found themselves with an embarrassment of riches.

"We've got F. Lee Bailey, Melvin Belli, Percy Foreman, Edward Bennett Williams and Louis Nizer on hours of tape and film," Reasoner said in his office the other day. "It's all so good the question is how to get it down to an hour: What do we cut?"

Reasoner is commentator on the series which has the laudable intention of trying to stay within reach of hard news. The premiere program, "The Hippie Temptation" on Aug. 22 includes a scene far removed from the love and flowers preached by LSD propagandists — an 18-year-old girl shrieking and fighting in the grasp of hospital orderlies.

"We're not merely exploring the world of the hippies," Reasoner said. "We're also examining the price they have to pay."

THE FACT that she'll be appearing opposite her husband, Richard Benjamin, on the new comedy series "He & She," starting 9:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 6 on the CBS Television Network, reminded Paula Prentiss of a story concerning another acting couple, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

They were appearing together in a play, Miss Prentiss says, and there was a long pause in the dialogue. In their dressing room at the end of the act Lunt gently asked,

"What happened, dear? Did you forget the line?"

"No, dear, I didn't forget the line," Miss Fontanne replied sweetly. "I just couldn't remember which one of us was supposed to say it."

SOME OF THE big names in show business will be "on" when "The Hollywood Palace" returns on a new day-and-time, 10 p.m., Sept. 5, ch. 7. Guest-host Bing Crosby will welcome Jimmy Durante and Milton Berle, Singer Diahann Carroll and dancer Joey Heatherton.

Evil Triumphant

Jonathan Harris: Deliciously Wicked

"Evil has emerged triumphant," says Jonathan Harris, "Being a snivelling rat-fink blackguard has made me a star."

Harris, who plays Dr. Zachary Smith on "Lost In Space," 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays in color on CBS revels in his role in the series.

"I am deliciously wicked," he says with smug satisfaction. "As Dr. Smith I am selfish, pompous, pretentious, unscrupulous, cruel, cowardly, self-pitying, greedy, conniving, unctuous, egotistical and absolutely delightful."

ONE DAY while having lunch at a Hollywood restaurant he saw some youngsters at a nearby table sneering and hissing at him. Other actors might have been offended, but Harris recognized it for the compliment it was. Rising majestically to his full height, he sneered right back at them.

"They were delighted," he says. "They crowded around asking for my autograph."

Two television columnists viewed one of his performances from opposite poles on the same day. One called it "the worst single performance of the year" and the other said "he is the best tongue-in-cheek actor in television."

"I play this role with my tongue so far in my cheek it hurts," says Harris. "How could anyone take it seriously?"

Radio Notes

THE FEDERAL Communications Commission has ordered radio station WXXL in Harriman, Tenn., to cease operations Tuesday, charging the station owner was buying and selling broadcast properties for profit rather than serving the public interest.

NBC has reported highest record sales in radio for the first half of a year since 1958. It expects a 7 per cent increase for the year.

REDUCES 72 POUNDS, 6 DRESS SIZES

as told by
Mrs. Helen Roberts
Long Beach

I have been obese all my life. My heart's desire always was to be slender. I had tried crash diets, and took off a few pounds, but always put the weight back on, plus a few pounds. I found it hard to stick to a diet. I work at Scandia Restaurant, Sunset Blvd., as a pastry cook and I was constantly nibbling on food.

When I got up to 205 pounds, I decided to really do something about it, as I was very dissatisfied and unhappy with myself. I had no pep or energy. I even hated to shop for a new dress; I was so ashamed of my size 20½. I had gotten to the point where I felt nothing would work. I had never been exposed to a workable program before I discovered Pat Walker's.

With the Pat Walker program I have reduced to 123 pounds and a size 10 dress, and am still losing inches. The treatments are terrific for firming the tissue while taking off inches, plus pounds. They are also so relaxing, I look forward to each treatment with enthusiasm.

I can't praise Pat Walker enough, as I give her credit for my slender figure and I have a whole new outlook on life. When I was obese, men wouldn't look at me. Now I have no problems. I have never felt better and now enjoy a good social life.

—Mrs. Helen Roberts

Here you see a snapshot of Mrs. Helen Roberts when she was a 205-lb. size 20½. Mrs. Roberts was unhappy with herself and ashamed of her size 20½ figure. She had tried many ways to reduce and had almost given up until she tried Pat Walker's. In the next photo, you'll see her as a slender size 10 after reducing with the Pat Walker program.

Here you see a photo of Mrs. Helen Roberts with the Reducing Authority International, Pat Walker. Mrs. Roberts reduced 3 inches from her bust, 6 inches from her waist, 7 inches from her abdomen, 6 inches from her hips, 4 inches from each thigh and 2½ inches from each upper arm. She reduced from 205-pound size 20½ to a slender size 10.

Australian TV Personality Reduces and Keeps Her Figure Trim With New Computerized Program

Here you see Pat Walker, the Reducing Authority International, with Del Cartwright, Sydney's TV Personality, Journalist and Lecturer, in Pat Walker's luxurious salon in Sydney, Australia.

As Reprinted From the Sydney Morning Herald,
Sydney, Australia

I opened the mail a couple of days ago and it was an invitation to meet Pat Walker. She is a dynamic American who has a reducing salon in Sydney. You know, I immediately thought the same as you that this is just another of these places which tell you (what you already know) that you must lose fat from here, and from there—and in the same breath present a contract which involves more money than you care to tell your husband about.

Well, anyway, any woman who has been described by the American Press as having a 22-inch waistline and with a personality and flair for wearing clothes, as well as being an International success in business, must have something.

She has brought to her new and elegant salon in Sydney equipment that took 14 years to develop and half a million dollars to perfect.

I hated the thought of exercise, all those belts and machinery; and all the other studios I have ever been in certainly map out a program, but I just don't have the perseverance to go through with it. I saw women in the Pat Walker studio just lying down and relaxing while having their treatment. They were having bulges taken off just where they needed and firming down to the bone structure; all that flabbiness being scientifically removed and the skin being firmed. This is done without guesswork, and with this world patented equipment, you can be lazy, pampered and reduce — IN PRIVACY (thank goodness it's not a gym or club) - - and SEE immediate results.

I started to become conscious of my hips. Just a couple of inches off them and also from the top of my legs. Everything I eat seems to go to the same place which is — well you know — and I have made up my mind to go regularly to the Pat Walker Salon and let them take the excess off.

—Del Cartwright

You'll Reduce in all the Places You Should

by Miss Pat Walker
the Reducing Authority
International

All too often, a woman will tell us how her Summer and Vacation was ruined because she tried on her previous year's clothes and found the added inches and weight made it impossible for her to wear them. And after shopping for new clothes, she became demoralized and disheartened because nothing looked the way it should.

It is a shame that all too many women experience this because in truth it need not happen. Today, it is better to invest money in a new figure than try to buy clothes to disguise it.

We want you to know that we make reducing most pleasant and therefore a woman enjoys the time spent with us.

After a figure analysis, she realizes her figure problem is really not so different and that thousands of others have experienced the same problem that she has and suddenly she regains hope and faith that something can be done for her and her own figure problems. When she has had her figure analysis, she knows where she needs to lose, what it will cost her, and how long it will take.

It is a very proud, secure happy woman who receive compliments and attention of those closest to her because she becomes a new person both in appearance and personality.

—Miss Pat Walker

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: What is the origin of HANNA?—J.P.A., Lakewood; P.R., Long Beach; A.F.R., Long Beach.

HANNA, many centuries ago was the Gaelic Irish clan-name O'Hannaidh. This archaic name translates as "Sons of the Delayer," pertaining to a chieftain who employed "delaying" tactics in battling enemies. O'Hannaidh was modernized as Hanna in the 16th century. This clan was recorded in Limerick, Antrim and north County Down in Ireland. John Hanna of Ireland settled in the Ligonier Valley, Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania about 1770. His descendants migrated to Ohio. The Hanna shield is silver, emblazoned with three blue sheep heads having red collars. The Hanna motto "Adralta virtute" means "Virtue leads to heights."

MISS RULE: May we have the source of SLAUGHTER?—R.S., Long Beach.

SLAUGHTER was adopted by the ancestor from his native village by that name in Gloucestershire, England. The original town-name "Slo-Tre" meant "sloe-tree," memorializing a variety of plum called a "sloe." Some Slaughter lineages may be descended from a 13th century English butcher termed a "slaughtere." Among remote ancestors was Ballivus de Sloghtre of Gloucester in 1273. The Slaughter armonial shield was honored with a blue St. Andrews cross on a silver backing.

MISS RULE: Please inform us on LUEDTKE. —R.L., Long Beach.

LUEDTKE originated as the German surname Ludke having the umlaut accent (two dots) over the letter "U." Formation of this name was achieved by shortening Ludwig, the German form of Louis, meaning "famous warrior." To the resultant "Lud" was added the suffix "-ke" a name-ending meaning "young."

MISS RULE: Would like data on MEDINA. — R.M., Lakewood.

MEDINA is a Spanish surname. This ancient Spanish-Arabic cognomen means simply, "from a home on the marketplace." Another remote medieval Spanish source meant "measurer or surveyor of land." The armorial shield granted the Medina family of Valencia, Spain, is gold, centered with a red rampant lion.

MISS RULE: Have you the background on ENNES? —R.N., Long Beach.

ENNES, an Irish family, are descendants of the Gaelic clan O'Haonguls. The clan founder was Aonghuis, whose name described "Man of unique strength" or "One-choice." This lineage originated in Offaly, about 80 miles from the Irish town of Ennis or Ennes in County Clare. Their shield is silver, emblazoned with a blue chevron set between three blue thistles.

MISS RULE: Kindly explain ELSAESSER. — S.E., Seal Beach.

ELSAESSER, an ancient German surname, indicates that the founder of this lineage was a native of Alsace, a medieval duchy on the border between Germany and France. The German word for Alsace is Elsass, meaning "place of those who settled on the other bank of the river." The Elsaesser shield, granted in 1591, is in four parts. Two sections are gold, centered with a man in black clothing; the other two are black, crossed by a diagonal gold stripe.

It was a laugh-a-minute for five 15-year-old girls from the Long Beach-Garden Grove area when they got to make a special tour of the Universal City Studios and have their pictures taken, a la movie stars, for Southland Magazine. But even their efforts at tickling would not make Buckingham Palace guard Paul Ricks, 19, of Los Angeles, change his expression. True to tradition, he stands motionless and speechless during his 30-minute stints in the public entertainment section. Shown with him are, from left, JoJo Knudson, Kathy Wood and Karen Kremenak. Campfires Are for Dreaming

By Martha Johnson

SUMMERTIME is camping time. And what's a camp without a campfire? And what's a campfire?...

Campfires come in many sizes, shapes and substances. Sometimes they are inside circles of rocks playing an endless game of leapfrog. Sometimes they are large and flat-tabled, with tin periscopes jetting smoke into the air. Sometimes they are iron crossword squares squatted on the ground, supporting various cookery. And sometimes they are just finger-dug holes in the ground, with no visible barrier to hold or hide the flames.

However it may be packaged, an active campfire makes short shadows taller, and thin shadows softer, painting faces with the warm glow of sharing.

A campfire is schizophrenic by nature. At its peak the noise and bluster of its red-orange energy will make you alert and uneasy. But wait past the rant and the roar, past the leaping heat that toasts always the wrong parts of the body, and the campfire will slump like a tired day's sun, settling into ashes that are gloomy and quiet-breathing; just made for musing.

Campfires at work support various snouted and spouted containers housing sauces, steaks and stews. These items may be angular, square, round or oval, and usually show little streams of black trickling sap-like down their sides, beneath handles that dangle, jut or curve, but are guaranteed to burn unwary fingers.

A campfire is created for the telling of tales. Around its exaggerated light the funniest tale becomes side-splitting, the tallest tale takes on the pink and blue clearness of truth, and the scariest becomes the tingly, terrorizing delight that the young devour, gleefully welcoming the nightmares to follow.

Campfires are for sitting near, warming up on, singing around, dreaming, the counting of and wishing upon of stars, and the roasting and toasting of frankfurters or marshmallows. Nothing has a rarer talent for cooling anger, curing insomnia and inspiring romance.

A campfire should be accompanied whenever possible by bullfrogs and night-song crickets. No summer should ever, ever be stored for winter without one.

Breakfast in the Park

By Bonnie Speer

BREAKFAST in the park, anyone? Not only is it fun and different, but it offers other advantages over regular picnics as well: choice of sites, woodland quiet, appetite appeal.

My introduction to picnic breakfasts came a number of years ago while visiting relatives in Southern California. I thought my sister-in-law was kidding when she suggested it. Breakfast in the park? At sunrise? But no.

"We go quite often," she said. "We like to picnic, but by noon the parks are so crowded it takes a lot of the fun out of it. So we hit upon breakfast in the park. We found we could have our outing, and be home before the big crowds hit."

Sounded good, but I still wasn't sure of the feasibility of her plan. It seemed like a lot of trouble to go to for breakfast as she scurried around the night before packing coffee pot, skillet, bacon and eggs into a picnic hamper.

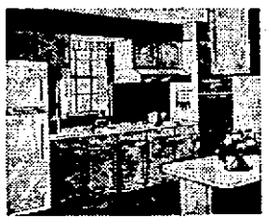

And the following morning, before dawn even, when I was told, "No, not even a cup of coffee until we get to the park!" I was positive it wasn't a good idea!

I GRUMBLED all the way to the park. The sun was just coming up when we reached it. Its rays spread a benevolent rosy glow upon the trees, flowers and the Sunday late-sleeping city beyond. Silver dewdrops sparkled in the grass. Clear blue skies cupped the horizons, and the air was so fresh one just couldn't breathe deeply enough.

And it was quiet. So

'Well, We Got Here'

(Or: Everyone Visits You in Southern California)

By Mary Davis

SOONER OR LATER everyone visits Southern California. This should be no surprise to those of us who qualify as natives with a residency of more than two or three years. After all, when we set forth on our bold migration, friends and relatives waved us off, saying, "Always wanted to go to California. See you out there some day." If the move had been to Casper, Wyo., maybe, or Trenton, Neb., the promise might have been so much talk. But Southern California. They meant it.

Everyone wants to come. In 1966, more than seven million people visited Southern California, a believable figure if you dwell in this golden land. Perhaps you're not besieged with visitors at the moment, but your turn could be next. So prepare yourself.

First you should become acquainted with the "California Quiz," a simple game, usually played between husband and wife, consisting of a single question, "Guess who's coming to California NOW?" In our house, the answer is never anyone we might suspect but frequently the last person we can imagine and, sometimes, one we can't even remember. If tourist traffic has been particularly heavy, my husband will ignore the sporting challenge and reply with a vehement "Oh God!" This isn't blasphemy; it's prayer.

WE NEVER KNOW when the postman will bring a note from home-towners, announcing their exact arrival weeks in the future and their intention to stop by if we have no plans. Or any ring of the phone can herald a voice from the past saying, "I'm at the airport. Just dropped into L.A. and thought I'd come out for coffee on my way to see Disneyland." They drive up to our door, buried in luggage or trailing a tent behind them, and, at our weak invitation, will take over the hide-a-bed or camp in the driveway for the next three months.

Fortunately, the situation is not as dire as it might appear. We have learned from countless blunders that you can handle the tourist boom by remembering 10 easy don'ts.

1. Don't expect fine weather. Before your visitors come, oleanders may have withered in the sun and Honolulu may have been sighted from Mt. Wilson, but when your guests arrive, so will fog, smog or, worse yet — rain, Southern California style.

2. Don't clean up the house and yard any old time. You'll only redo the work as soon as out-of-staters are on the horizon. When people are coming whom you haven't seen in five years, and may never see again, you'll want

Teen-age Girls Visit a Movie Studio

TAKE FIVE 15-year-old girls from the Long Beach-Garden Grove area, turn them loose at a major movie-TV studio with a photographer to take their pictures, and what do you have? Why, instant actresses, of course.

The girls — JoJo Knudson, Kathy Wood, Becky Buchanan, Denise Ray and Karen Kremenak—had no trouble at all in pretending to be movie stars. The Universal City Studios lot is open daily to the public, but not everyone gets in free, or is escorted by a Universal contract actress (Sherry Bouchet), or gets to pose for pictures in Southland Magazine — or gets to eat in the commissary with real actors.

Gee, this showbiz life sure beats school!

Bud Westmore, in makeup department, shows JoJo and Kathy that his job is not 100% glamorous.

In Lana Turner's "dressing room," a small house, teen-agers, Sherry see reflections in mirror.

JoJo and Sherry ham it up in "prop" department as Kathy and Becky come to rescue Jo from bear.

A Sunrise Picnic

Lunch in commissary: JoJo, Kathy, Becky are joined by star Clu Gulager.

Dave Hartman with Karen, Denise. He's in "Ballad of Josie" with Doris Day.

A perfect movie ending: Kathy and Becky give Gulager a big kiss.

quiet-I could hear the melodious bursts of a meadowlark's song, the soft coo of a dove, the sassy chatter of a fat squirrel. It brought back memories of my childhood days on an Oklahoma farm and my early morning chores of walking after the cows.

We had our pick of picnic facilities. Only two other families were spotted across the vast green acres of Griffith Park. We chose a quiet place in the warming sun, with a big spreading elm overhead to provide later shade.

Soon, woodsmoke curled lazily into the tangy air. Bacon sputtered in the pan. Coffee perked. The table was spread with a red checkered cloth and laid with breakfast goodies.

WE ATE OUR feast with the sharp-honed appetites fresh air always produces. Afterwards, we enjoyed a leisurely coffee hour.

Then we walked with the children through the nearby zoo and received a bonus treat. It was mealtime at the zoo, too. We watched lions and bears and monkeys and birds all eating breakfast.

We packed up our food basket and left the park about 10 o'clock, just as the temperature was getting warmish. And we couldn't help feeling a bit smug as we passed the crowd hurrying in to get places. We felt as though we'd pulled a good prank on them.

We've had many such family breakfasts since. Each one is just as refreshing as the first. And you can do it, too. There are many fine picnic facilities in the Southland.

So, why not beat the heat, beat the traffic and beat the crowds? Sometime soon enjoy a sunrise picnic.

Leisure World's MJB Is Heard Around the World

By Dorothy Louise White

—KRIPS Photos

THERE'S A MAN in Laguna Hills who's heard on the air somewhere in the world every minute of the day's 24 hours.

In one day, he received fan mail from Reykjavik, Iceland; Madrid, Spain; Pusan, Korea, and Athens, Greece.

When listeners hear him read a heart-warming poem, they ask for copies . . . sometimes as many as 2,500 in one week.

When they find consolation in his homespun philosophy, they write thank-you notes to him.

When he talks nostalgically about the penny candy he used to buy . . . or jaw breakers, wee wax bottles of Olympian nectar, coconut American flags . . . his listeners mellow with memories. When he talks about nature's art in Southern California, they decide to move to the Southland. And when they hear him reminisce vividly about the lunch bucket days, they go to the kitchen to look for a slice of the juicy Bermuda onion or a piece of the green apple pie he describes.

Programs taped by Myron J. Bennett at the Rossmoor Leisure World adult community are heard around the world on Armed Forces Radio and on commercial stations throughout the United States.

Ever since he was a boy on a farm in Lake County in Illinois, where he tinkered with his mother's gasoline washing machine, and built his own radio before he was 13, MJB — as he has become known — has been busy. . . "Every year I get busier," he says.

Being curious about many things has made it possible for him to play many roles in his life . . . justice of peace, teacher, soldier, newspaper columnist, radio and TV commentator, member of a city council, superintendent of public safety, and commissioner of police, fire, health and building.

Even his major occupation for more than 25 years — radio broadcasting — began as a hobby.

Myron's "good right hand," as he calls his wife, Marge (who was one of more than 5,000 who wrote fan letters to him one week in 1952), supports and demonstrates the effectiveness of his philosophy about being interested in many things. Her letter that day was so well written and filled with enthusiasm that in his reply he asked if she had ever done any professional writing, and if she would be interested in a job as his writer and research assistant. The answer to his first question was no, but he hired her. A few years later, Marguerite, whom he calls "Ladybug," married her boss.

Dale Carnegie would approve of Myron's method of making friends: his voice projects warmth, sincerity, sympathy and conviction. One lawyer called it an "affidavit voice." Listeners hear in his words a desire to see virtue while understanding shortcomings. One Iowa fan called him a quartet . . . warmth, humor, knowledge, variety.

Whether he's talking about an old-fashioned basket social in Wisconsin where he moved as a boy, or a hayride in Iowa, there's dignity, maturity and sophistication, with paradoxical boyish grins in his voice. He can stir up response . . . thousands of letters at the "drop" of a poem.

In his syndicated radio talks he discusses people and places, poetry and potpourri. He can describe a new freeway without letting you forget the thrill of a bobsled ride in Minnesota.

Since moving to Rossmoor in Laguna Hills, Myron frequently runs into new residents from many parts of the globe who feel they have known him for years. When he walks into a Kiwanis gathering, or when he and "Ladybug" attend a Lawrence Welk party at one of the clubhouses, introductions bring such comments as "Oh, I didn't know I'd ever meet THE Myron Bennetts after hearing their radio programs so many years."

He's a firm believer in the theory that many of our disappointments and unavoidable changes in our plans have a way of piloting us into new experiences. He says there are miracles all around us constantly, and watching for them is a good way to make time fly. When first experimenting with electricity as a boy, he was "shocked to the toenails . . . the thrill of hearing music from the air was one I'll never forget. It was a miracle to me. All my nickels and dimes went into radio equipment." He built crystal sets and later more complex instruments.

Myron Bennett feels an Old Testament verse, taped to his kitchen cabinet for years, may have contributed to his system of getting the most out of life: "This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it." Myron maintains that people who are always interested in many things around them just can't keep from being busy and avoiding loneliness.

During his sophomore year as a journalism student at the University of Wisconsin, he applied for a summer job with the Milwaukee Journal. The paper had no openings, but there was a spot for an announcer with the Journal-owned radio station, WTMJ. He was auditioned and hired. He became familiar with all phases of radio — from managerial to microphone.

Prior to World War II his daily program in St. Louis was the top-rated show there. And he was writing a daily column for the St. Louis Globe- Democrat. After 44 months with the U.S. Air Force as a public relations officer, he resumed his radio career, this time in Des Moines, Iowa. His popularity there led to his being elected to the City Council; later he became superintendent of public safety and commissioner of police, fire, health and building. He even came close to winning the governorship.

One of Bennett's most interesting projects has been

Take a Deck of Cards . . .

By Alan W. Farrant

GIFTS THAT are unusual and fun to make can be assembled easily in a short time. With a deck of playing cards, some canceled postage stamps, glue and a pair of scissors you can make gifts for year-around use.

Paste half of a face card neatly onto the front of a matchbook. By cutting it slightly inside the black line around the card, then cutting it exactly in half, it will fit nicely. A box of these matchbooks makes an unusual prize for a game.

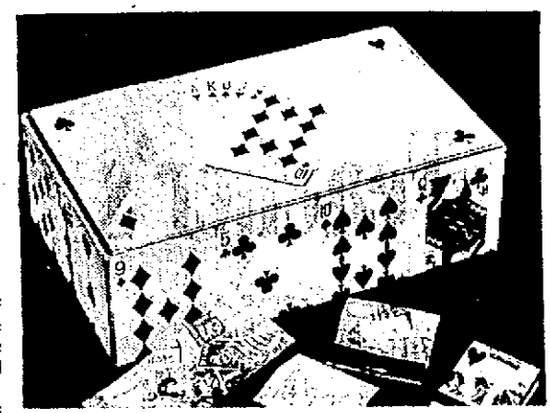

Plain matchbooks can be given initials, by cutting and gluing pipe cleaners.

Decorate matchbooks with stamps, and give to a friend with a stamp collecting hobby. Open the cover out flat and paste on the canceled postage stamps. Large lots of colorful stamps can be purchased at stamp stores. Start pasting at the center and overlap, letting the stamps face in all directions. Then trim the edges.

Unusual containers for a variety of articles can be made with cigar boxes. To cover such a box with stamps, follow the procedure used for making the matchbooks.

The same type of boxes can be covered with playing cards. First cover the lid with pastel-colored paper. Cut out the four suit marks and glue them to the four corners of the lid. Then assemble any card game hand you wish, fastening the cards one on top of the other in a fan shape as they would be held in a player's hand. When the glue is dry, fasten the "hand" to the top of the box. Cut cards to size and glue them to the sides.

As you work with this project, other ideas will come to you. Don't be afraid to try them.

Gifts you can make with cigar box, playing cards, matchbooks, stamps and pipe cleaners.

Teacher's Gone to Sea

Plotting a course out of classroom and around world are John Wyness, Dick Burns, Chuck Harris.

By Charles Lansdown

DICK Burns, 32-year-old history teacher at La Mirada High School, let the door of the now empty classroom thump to a close behind him. His summer school teaching was ended and he would not be teaching again for a long time.

Instead, he would start out on the kind of adventure that many men dream of but few attempt — a come-what-may voyage around the world in a 30-foot sailboat. (He is scheduled to leave this afternoon with two friends.)

Along with owner Charles (Chuck) Harris, 34, until last June a teacher at Corona Del Mar High School, and John Wyness, 34, a Norwalk High School teacher, he will leave the world of blackboards and bell schedules for that of wind, waves and ports of call.

Surprising?

"The image of the school teacher as dull is false," commented Burns to a companion as he strode across the sun-bright campus toward his old VW microbus, veteran transportation for many skiing and camping expeditions. "I've never met more interesting individuals than you can find among California teachers.

"I'LL PROBABLY miss the students," he mused then, "and I enjoy teaching. The trip should improve my future teaching of geography and other social science subjects, though."

But around the world in a boat only about 15 feet longer than the average automobile?

Across 4,000 miles of Pacific Ocean in a sailboat with a cabin shorter than most kitchens and so narrow that two people can scarcely squeeze past each other?

And how about this, Teacher, from the U.S. Hydrographic Office's "Sailing Directions for the Pacific Islands":

"Tropical storms arise frequently and a careful check of weather conditions must be kept. Storms of hurricane force may be encountered at any time, regardless of the referred to 'seasons.'"

Isn't this trip going to be a bit uncomfortable, a little dangerous?

At Long Beach Marina Chuck Harris, Industrial Arts teacher, holder of a private pilot's license, classical guitarist and owner of the California 30 sloop Nexus, crouched in shorts and sandals under the open hatch. He was surrounded by parts of the 12-horsepower Onan auxiliary engine which he was checking in detail.

"I think we'll have the fastest, most comfortable sailing boat cruising in the world," he declared, prejudiced, perhaps, by the fact that he had assembled the boat himself.

He began with the molded fiberglas hull and deck which he bought on the last day of school in 1961. Then he put most of his summers and other spare time into finishing the boat, generally using standard Cal 30 parts.

"The first consideration in choosing a boat is that it sail well," he went on. "This boat can sail faster and beat into the wind better than the heavier small boats of the past. Cal boats have won the TransPac race to Hawaii in corrected times, you know."

Looking at the Nexus might give even a landlubber some confidence. Fiberglas is tough and relatively seamless, quite unlike the calked wood construction of the boats sailed by those small-boat skippers who pitted their guts and skill against the sea in maritime history.

And the modern design presents a sleek, streamlined deck surface to waves breaking over it, so that they aren't likely to do more than splash into the small, self-bailing cockpit. With 2,600 pounds of lead in the keel, a reasonably experienced sailor ought to be able to keep her right side up, even in the roughest weather.

On the other hand, those reefs and rocky shores in the South Seas can tear the bottom out of any boat if given the opportunity. Will they get the chance? Can a teacher be a sailor, too?

THE ANSWER will depend on Captain Harris primarily, since he is the most experienced sailor of the three. Interested in sailing for the past 15 years, he sailed in 1959 to Panama as a crew member of the 72-foot yawl Escapade. In Panama he boarded a French freighter-passenger ship for Tahiti where he signed on as crew of a 30-foot ketch belonging to a couple named Taylor out of Seattle. With the Taylors he cruised among the Society Islands for three months.

Harris also has picked up sailing experience as a crew member in local ocean races, as have Burns and Wyness.

But why leave all this comfort and security, these well-begun careers, the mini-skirted attractions of Southern California?

Living at Surfside, an ocean-front community ideal for bachelors who can share expenses and who enjoy the beach, Burns and Wyness would seem to have "had it made." But both are native Californians — Burns graduated with Bellflower High School's first graduating class — and neither had traveled much, in spite of a four-year hitch in the Navy for Wyness, during which he served as an air crewman on a P2V patrol bomber, and a hitch in the Marines for Burns.

"I'd been thinking for the past couple of years about taking some kind of trip to see the world and learn the ways of other people," stated Wyness, his thoughtful manner in contrast with a muscular swimmer's build. (He coached a Norwalk High School swimming team to the state championship of the Cee division last year.)

"But I had a financial problem. Then Chuck came along with the boat — this way it should cost only about one third as much as other ways of seeing the world."

Burns, too, had been aiming for travel "some day" and found Harris and the Nexus too good an opportunity to pass up.

And Captain Harris?

"I'm not trying to prove anything," he declared. I've just always wanted to make a cruise like this in my own boat."

ABOUT 27 DAYS out of Long Beach Navigator Wyness and the Nexus will be looking for her first landfall, Nuko Hiva in the Marquesas. After that will come other ports of the South Seas: Tahiti, the Cook Islands, Samoa, New Zealand and Australia. Then the Nexus will go on to Africa and Europe. The adventure should take about two years.

And then?

They'll probably go back to teaching, enriched by their experiences. Or they might not.

"It's open-ended," smiled Burns.

For Lulu of Luau, Let Guests Cook

By Mildred K. Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

If you want to have one lulu of a luau a festive table of refreshments might read like this—on a hibachi—Pineapple Alii, a hot hors d'oeuvre guests can prepare themselves. (Do-it-yourself food preparation is a feature at luau.) On pineapple besides Pineapple Alii, are Outrigger Balls. Waikiki Shrimp Dip is in monkey pod bowl and cool glasses are filled with Heavenly Flower.

Then — greet your guests with a kiss, a warm "Aloha" and a lei, the experts advise, because that's the way they do it in Hawaii. Suggest your guests come dressed for the occasion.

Serve from low tables, seating your guests on pillows or mats. If no low tables are available, serve from an unopened aluminum folding table propped up at the ends. Set off your serving table with a covering of burlap, bamboo shade, gaily colored fabric or fresh broad leaves of any kind. Hawaiian ti and croton leaves are available by mail.

Don't forget a gay floral centerpiece. Hawaiian-designed paper plates, cups, place mats, napkins and place cards are available, but try serving from coconut shells, large clam shells or wooden bowls instead. Silverware? Chopsticks, of course.

The open flame of a hibachi stove will give your luau a warm, friendly glow. Guests traditionally prepare their own appetizers by barbecuing them over an open flame and yours will love the idea. Here are some recipes for your luau.

Pineapple Alii (a-lee-ee, Royalty)

Wrap canned pineapple chunks with bacon; fasten with wooden picks and broil. Serve crisp and hot!

Outrigger Balls

Shape softened cream cheese into balls and roll in freshly grated coconut. Serve on wooden picks.

Waikiki Shrimp Dip

For dip, blend 1 cup chili sauce, 1 teaspoon ginger and ½ teaspoon lemon juice. Boil shrimp and clean. Spike on wooden picks and serve with dip.

Rumaki

Cut 6 chicken livers into 3 pieces each. Wrap a strip of bacon around one piece of chicken liver, one waterchestnut, a piece of scallion (about one inch) — and fasten with pick. Marinate for one hour in: ½ cup soy sauce, ¼ teaspoon ginger, ¼ teaspoon curry powder. Broil, turning frequently.

Leilani Ham

Twenty minutes before half or whole ham is finished baking, decorate as follows: Score fat with diagonal grooves ½ inch deep, 1 inch apart. Fill grooves with crushed pineapple and whole cloves. Heat for 20 minutes, until crushed pineapple is golden brown.

Pele's Delight

Pele is a Hawaiian fire goddess and this is a flaming dessert your guests will love. Cut bananas in half lengthwise and dip in flour. Saute in butter until lightly brown. Drain on unglazed paper. Arrange in dish and sprinkle with sugar and 1 oz. rum. Flame rum as you serve.

Heavenly Flower, A Heavenly Drink

- 1 6-oz. can frozen orange juice concentrate
- 3 cups pineapple juice
- 2 cups water
- 1-3 cup granulated sugar
- 1-3 cup lemon juice
- 1½ cups ginger ale

Combine all ingredients except ginger ale; stir to dissolve sugar. Add ginger ale. Pour into 8 tall ice-filled glasses. Garnish with an orchid and pineapple spear.

It's a Hawaiian tradition, incidentally, for guests to bring a favorite dish to the luau. Ask yours to do so.

Hula dancing and singing contests are also a feature at every luau. Offer a prize for the best hula dancers—man and woman.

Still another tradition: a souvenir of the luau for every guest. Be sure you set aside appropriate favors.

When bidding your guests goodbye, wish them "Aloha," a word that means hello, farewell, love and affection.

COIN ROUNDUP

Private Mint Big Business

By Maurice M. Gould

THE FAMOUS Philadelphia Mint produces millions upon millions of our coins each year, but another mint in a Philadelphia suburb has become an extremely busy establishment. It is the Franklin Mint, America's only publicly owned private mint. By "publicly owned," I mean that stockholders are the owners. This mint is located in Yeadon, Pa.

Joseph M. Segal is the young president and founder of General Numismatics Corp., the mint's parent company. One of Franklin's most important assets is board chairman Gilroy Roberts, the internationally known coin designer and former chief engraver of the U.S. Mint. He brings to the firm the brilliant ideas in engravings so necessary in this special work. He is best known for his work on the likeness of the late President Kennedy on the U.S. half-dollar.

This mint can now turn out 100,000 pieces a day, and eventually the figure will go much higher.

Some of their biggest customers are the gambling casinos of Nevada, for whom gambling tokens are produced. These chips became a necessity when silver dollars were no longer available to the casinos, and other gambling resorts in South America and the West Indies have also made use of the mint's facilities.

Medal of the Franklin Mint

Many medals of all types have been struck, and members of their National Commemorative Society choose the subject matter by ballots. Their quality and proof items have become world famous, and no doubt many of the finest pieces of medallic art will come from their presses.

Because of the shortage of world mints, there eventually will evolve a demand for such facilities with an opportunity for this company to produce coins for other nations.

Recently the stock of this company was listed on the National Stock Exchange of New York under the GNC symbol. Approximately 240,000 shares of common stock are in the hands of 2,000 shareholders, many of whom are coin collectors.

The Franklin Mint is proud that it has one of the largest and most diversified coinage die engraving departments in the world, and its proof-coining facilities are unique in that sophisticated techniques like ultrasonics are used to micro-clean the blanks. The proof coining is done in a space-age "clean room."

We will hear a great deal more in the future about this unusual and fast-growing organization.

Q. FROM THE MAILBAG: Did you ever hear of a two-legged Buffalo nickel? I have a three-legged one.

A. A 1935 two-legged Buffalo nickel was discovered in New Brunswick, N.J., and authenticated. One authenticator termed it "two and a half-legged," and as far as is known this piece is unique.

Q. I cannot find the initials of Felix Schlag, the designer of the Jefferson nickel, on the coin.

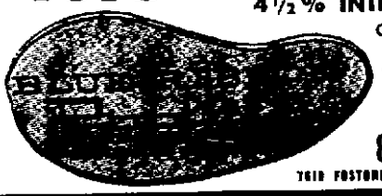

A. Since the first Jefferson nickel was minted in 1938 until 1966, the initials were not placed on any of the coins, but in 1966 the coins first appeared with the initials "FS." This was 28 years after Schlag's original design was adopted and used.

Another 'Finest Hour'

A PRE-CHURCHILLIAN "finest hour" is the chief character in Trafalgar: An Eyewitness Account of a Great Battle, compiled and edited by Stewart Legg. John Day, $4.50.

With the gallons of blood that commingled with the waters of the Atlantic on that terrible Monday in October, 1805, England wrote her 110-year long mastery of the oceans. The accounts compiled by Stewart Legg in "Trafalgar" are those of the great battle's hero, Admiral Horatio Nelson, the men who fought fiercely for him off the cape at the entrance of the Strait of Gibraltar and the Frenchmen and Spaniards who fought as ferociously against Nelson.

On the eve of the battle that saved Britain from Napoleonic invasion, Nelson writes his mistress, Lady Emma Hamilton: "Dear friend of my bosom . . . may the God of battles crown my endeavors with success . . . as my last writing before the battle will be to you, so I hope in God that I shall live to finish my letter after the Battle." To their daughter Horatio, he writes: "The Combined Fleets of the enemy are now reported to be coming out of Cadiz, and therefnre I answer your letter, dearest Horatio, to mark to you that you are ever uppermost in my thoughts . . . Be a good girl, mind what Miss Connor says to you . . ."

Commodore Don Cosme de Churruca of the Spanish ship Dan Juan Nepomuceno, in a speech to the ship's company:

"My sons, in the name of the God of Battles I promise eternal happiness to all those who today fall doing their duty. On the other hand, if I see any man shirking, I will have him shot on the spot . . ."

Able Seaman John Brown of Nelson's flagship, the Victory:

"We cleared away our guns, whilst Lord Nelson went round the decks and said: 'My noble lads, this will be a glorious day for England, whoever lives to see it. I shan't be satisfied with twelve ships this day, as I took at the Nile.' So we piped to dinner and ate a bit of salt pork and half a pint of wine."

Lord Nelson and death are a hair's breadth apart through most of the battle. Captain Blackwood relates how "a shot struck the fore-brace-bits on the quarter-deck, and passed between Lord Nelson and Captain Hardy; a splinter from the bits bruising Captain Hardy's foot and tearing the buckle from his shoe . . . His Lordship than smiled, and said: 'This is too warm work, Hardy, to last long.' "

Nelson was struck by a ball and fatally wounded in the battle; among the most poignant are the accounts of his dying moments aboard the Victory. William Beatty, surgeon of the Victory, records how Nelson told him: "Ah, Mr. Beatty, you can do nothing for me. I have but a short time to live; my back is shot through."

Filipino Rebel Tells Story of Struggle

HE WHO RIDES THE TIGER. The Story of an Asian Guerrilla Leader. By Luis Taruc. Praeger, $4.95.

It seems only yesterday when Luis Taruc, commanding the Hukbalahaps, the Communist guerrillas in the Philippines, was threatening the very existence of the young republic, granted, in 1946, the independence, on schedule, which the United States had promised it years before. A peasant of Catholic family, Taruc as a youth cast his lot with the peasant revolutionary movement; his qualities of leadership made him general secretary of the Socialist Party, which in 1938 merged and was swallowed up into the Communist Party.

During the Japanese occupation he was a thorn in the side of the invaders; as guerrilla chief he and his army evolved many of the tactics now become classic in East Asia. When the Japanese left the islands Taruc's Huks went right on fighting, this time against the Philippines Republic. They made the 1950s a decade of hell for the islands.

Taruc, as is true of many a revolutionist who does the dirty work of the real fighting, could never be pinned to the Marxist party line in a hard and fast manner, and when the Filipino revolutionary movement began to be rent by disputes as to how many Marxist angels could be put on the head of a pin, the power struggles brought more and more disillusionment to Taruc and many a Huk followers. In 1954, he, top banana of the guerrillas, emerged from the hills and surrendered. He reverted to his childhood Catholicism.

Taruc is serving a life sentence; he says that this is a violation of the terms under which he surrendered. Nonetheless he remains staunchly anti-Communist. Remnants of the Huks linger on, but they are ineffectual where once, under Taruc, they gripped the Philippines in civil war.

On Good and Evil

Len Deighton, who wrote "The Ipcress File" and "Funeral in Berlin," has a new cold war chiller, in which good and evil are confronted. In "An Expensive Place to Die" (Putnam, $4.95) the intrigue, espionage and blackmail center on Monsieur Datt's clinic on the Avenue Foch in Paris.

Deighton's operator, "The Englishman," is helped by Maria Chauvet, assistant to the psychedelic psychiatrist Datt.

RALPH EARL, RECORDER FOR AN ERA, by Laurence B. Goodrich. The State University of New York; distributed by Antioch Press, $7.50.

Laurence Goodrich's slim volume includes a well-documented sketch of Ralph Earl, an important colonial painter about whom relatively little is known. Although his father was a captain in the American Army and his brother served as a Minute Man, Ralph Earl was a Tory, thoroughly loyal to George III. Rather than accept a commission in his father's regiment, he escaped to England disguised as a servant of one Captain I. Money, quartermaster general to Burgoyne's army.

While in England, Earl married his second wife without apparently really knowing what had happened to his first wife. The marriage was, as a result of this, declared bigamous and he was accused, although it could not possibly have been true at this time, of deserting her and his two children.

Added to whatever else may have been attributed to him for his failure to choose the side of the victorious rebel colonists, he was a "spendthrift" and an alcoholic who spent time incarcerated in New York's city prison for debt.

But in spite of all this, he had an impressive list of clients, including Baron von Steuben, who freely and without pay volunteered his service to the rebel cause; Mrs. Alexander Hamilton; Matthew Clarkson, New York social and political leader, and Mrs. Tallmadge, daughter of William Floyd, whose signature appears on the Declaration of Independence.

In addition to painting in New York City, Earl took to the countryside where he painted other of young America's leading citizens and their families. Until his decline which began to be evident in the last five years of the century and of his life, Earl's portraits are some of the surest and most revealing of the colonial peiod.

No itinerant primitive limner, Earl was a skillful and penetrating image maker whose portraits of the American gentry rank with the best painting of the period.

The Story of Italian Porcelain

ITALIAN PORCELAIN, By Francesco Stazzi. Putnam, $4.95.

To say of a certain Venetian porcelain that it is strictly from Hunger is no disparagement, for one would be speaking of the work of Christoph Conrad Hunger, who, from 1720 to 1724, worked in the factory of Francesco Vezzi, which, in its short life, challenged, esthetically, the great porcelain of Meissen and Vienna. Hunger, in fact, revealed the secret of Meissen to Vezzi.

The author of "Italian Porcelain" covers all the major factories of Italy beginning with Medici, and including the Florentine, the Venetian, the Piedmontese, the Neapolitan and the Roman. The illustrations are gorgeous, especially those in color, and the anecdotes of the factories, their founders, artists and craftsmen vastly entertaining. King Ferdinand IV's Neapolitan factory was one which turned out the most de luxe of porcelains; Nelson was one of its clients. This factory's products ranged from service sets for the royal families of Europe and holy water stoups, to inkpots, spittoons and chamber pots.

BOOKS IN BRIEF

SELECTED POEMS OF JAIME TORRES BODET. A bilingual edition with translations by Sonja Karsen. Indiana University Press, $5.75.

Who else but a university press does the great service of introducing American readers to the poetry of one of Latin America's finest writers—Jaime Torres Bodet? And who else but Indiana University Press, which has already published the poetry, in translation, of Mexico's Octavio Paz, and Chile's poetess Gabriela Mistral, both giants? Torres Bodet's poems, 44 of which are found in this bilingual edition, are resplendent in their faith in man and his nature:

Never will I tire of being a man because of all made by man the only heritage worthy of man is the right to invent his life.

Plain Exterior Hides Richly Imaginative Home

By Ellen Krec

Former patio is now dining area of Oriental design. Black lacquer table with inlaid brass characters was made from barbor dunnage. Picture below shows plain exterior of a highly individualistic home.

WHEN the Gerald V. Martins began to remodel their home on the west side of Long Beach, they left the exterior intact, decided to cover a patio in the rear but then incorporated an outbuilding and finally connected all of the enclosed building in the center with a new family room.

Working from the outside in gave the Martins an opportunity to develop a different decorating scheme and to allow for their much-entertaining way of life.

The Martins' California bungalow hides a combined provincial, Oriental and South Seas atmosphere.

Retaining the original living room permitted Mrs. Martin to utilize the maple Early American furnishings. In typical Cape Cod fashion the cozy living room combines print-covered swivel rockers, a cocoa-tweed love seat all backed by pecan paneling and soft green plaster walls. Fibreglas draperies and carpeting all match in beige in the provincial rooms.

A combed wood arch was added when the stucco doorway was removed dividing the dining room number one and the living room. A pass-through section has a maple drop-leaf table at one wall with matching captain's chairs upholstered in reverse polka dot cushions. The home originally ended at the wainscoted dining area.

A plate-filled hutch stands at the kitchen entrance. The irregularly shaped kitchen angles to allow space for dining room number two with a circular table and vinyl-covered chairs. A wide-V tile serving area holds the cornered sink. The same cream tile covers some of the wall surrounding maple-finish cabinets. Bright orange draperies on the dinette window match short curtains in the kitchen.

A serve-through to the utility room makes the kitchen complex appear larger.

A creamy beige tile bath was added to the section for convenience.

Nineteen-year-old Timothy hasn't outgrown his room although it is well decorated with his toys of the past. A spool bed, desk and chest in maple add the necessary furniture to a room that once held everything from snakes to hamsters. Mrs. Martin said: "I left the gate open one day and the last of the pets left home . . . a turtle!"

Used bricks form the steps to the family room. The room is divided at the top by a black wrought-iron railing. The base was the original patio but the last room to be enclosed! A stained glass door provided one exit to the side of the house. The roof becomes an A-frame in the center with a hip in the front and a butterfly roof in the rear.

A room-length soffit was added above the built-in wall storage to give the room a cozy feel. Mrs. Martin says it looked like "a gymnasium without it!"

High windows border the space between the cabinets and the soffit. The opposite side of the room is large enough for the curved sofa, a brown upholstered chair and circular coffee table as well as dining alcove number three! Tim's drawing board faces the black-lacquered television and the black-framed, black-matted painting of graceful white-tutued ballerinas.

Two wagon wheel chandeliers hang from the open-beam ceiling.

The next reverse addition was the rumpus room or the "I don't know" room. This, too, was part of the previous patio and here the roof takes wing in the butterfly shape.

Dining room number four boasts an oval black-lacquered table made by Martin from a hatch cover. It weighs more than 300 pounds! Martin added inlaid brass characters to the top and brass fittings on the side. The legs are the same dimensions as the top. The rattan chairs surrounding the table were antiqued bronze.

The balance of the furniture is rattan upholstered — some green and some red — in the same print.

The former windows in the rumpus room were enclosed. All the walls were cinderblock painted white and redwood paneling.

The walls are covered with mementoes of years in the Orient and include a raw silk scenic scarf, a group of metal flowers and horse scrolls all matted on straw.

The Martins are a cooperative family; he makes the ceramic containers and she fills them with flowers!

The Martins admit budget played a great part in the remodeling and redecorating and so they "made do, fixed up, and watched sales!"

The floors in both rooms are grass matted with a Palos Verdes stone fireplace cornered to prevent a too-square appearance.

The driftwood centerpiece in the large dining table was the gift of a ship's captain and Martin likes it because it looks like "Cecil, the seasick sea serpent!" Completing the table arrangement is a pair of heavy brass candlesticks with jet candles.

The windows are screened with matting framed top and bottom with heavy bamboo rods.

For cooking outside but decorating inside, the Martins mounted an orange ceramic Kamado on wheels and placed it under the serve-through to the "next addition" or the "first addition!"

The wet bar is an island with redwood facade inlaid with brass Oriental coins. The top is red-bordered formica and the window in the rear is framed with large sections of bamboo cut out in the shape of cocktail glasses then illuminated with colored lights. The bar will seat eight persons but cannot be considered another dining area. The Martins planned the house to allow for entertaining and have given comfortable sit-down dinners for 82 persons!

The grass matting in this room has a tufted area rug in orange and gold. A raffia base contains a four-foot statue of Kwan Yin when she moves inside for the winter.

The background in this room is the same and another hatch cover formed the coffee table.

Interesting touch was the subduing of the ceiling lights by the addition of circular, flat baskets.

The bronze-gold silk sofa was one of "Martin's follies" — it was purchased instead of a new carl

Lamp tables are painted red and green rattan with the bulbs covered by floral paper shades.

After all the patios were enclosed, a new patio was built! This is secluded on the side of the home, closed by a heavy gate made from joined sections of an old sliding door. Walnut outlines the black and red block divided by a brass strip.

A refreshment center has a red pagoda top and a curved bar made from dunnage wood. Interesting knots were used to give a bas relief appearance to the wood.

A centered evergreen ash shelters the complete patio and a small tropical garden leaves a niche for Kwan Yin in the summer. Martin says "Kwan Yin's dissapproving appearance has a tendency to slow our guests down!"

A cut-in-half barrel on legs makes a year-round fire pit.

Another no-disguise hatch cover was brass bound for an additional table.

Pine and juniper fill the raised planter under the windows while the narrow walk leading to the front is outlined with lantana, jade plant and bottle brush.

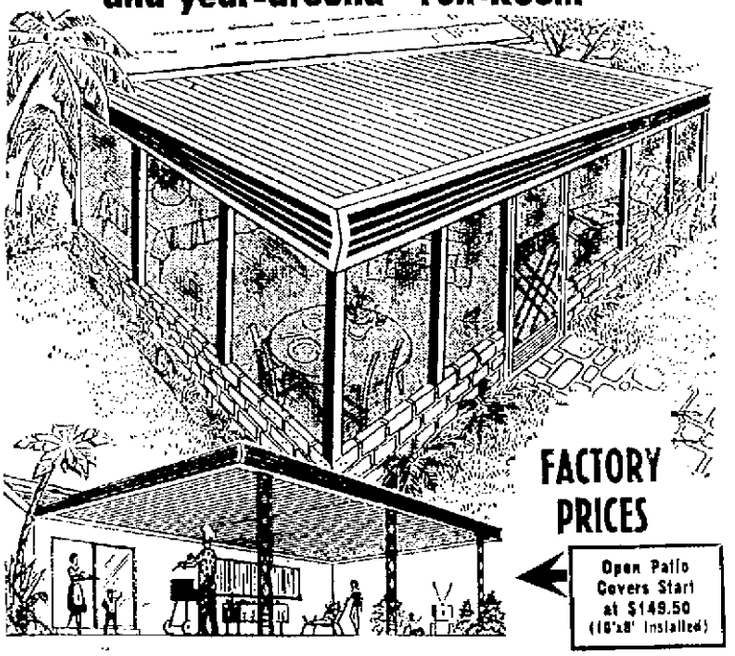

The master bedroom and bath sacrificed part of its room to built-in storage. Off-white walls and draperies and gold quilted bedspread topping the brass headboard give the room a softly monochromatic effect.

Four bathrooms dot the house but only two bedrooms proved necessary in the telescopic home!

'Disbud' Camellias for Better Blooms

By Joe Littlefield

YOU'LL HELP those dependable blooming camellias produce larger, showier flowers if you "disbud," snap off all but two remaining bloom buds, where there were more growing together in clusters. Camellia hobbyists actually snap off all the buds but one. Gardeners like more blossoms hence prefer to leave two buds.

Continue periodic shower bathing the plants and the surrounding area around them, during the evening or early morning. Shower bathing furnishes a humid condition which helps camellias withstand the hot weather much better.

Fertilize them with an acid plant food. Deep water regularly to help them avoid possible flower bud drop later, of which erratic watering may be one of the bud drop causes.

Just because camellias are not blooming yet, doesn't mean you have to wait till they are flowering during the fall or winter season in order to select the varieties of plants you'd like. The nurserymen have colorful charts of the camellia blossoms which aids you in selecting the varieties you seek. Plant them out now in the ground or in the containers, and the plant roots will become well established before the winter season starts when the plants, roots then will be at their lowest ebb of active growth.

GARDENING is a year round hobby in Southern California. While we're anticipating future lovely flowers from our camellias, many gardeners right now happily are harvesting showy dahlia blossoms from their plants. If you failed to plant some dahlias this year, wisest thing you can do now is to watch your local newspaper for dahlia flower show announcements. Visit the dahlia show. Select the "loveliest" varieties you like. Ask one of the dahlia show officials for some culture care information about them, also where you can purchase exactly the varieties you seek. Sometimes the garden shop may not have the variety or several varieties you want, whereas the dahlia hobbyists know where you can purchase them early next spring.

Mrs. Rector will talk on pollination, seed planting and how to grow new species.

Mrs. Mildred Gilker will speak on "miniature violets."

Garden Tips

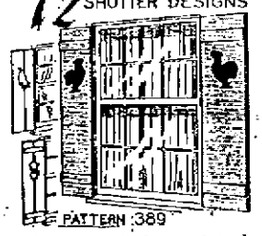

MANY plants grow actively during the summer season. It is a good time to set out shrubs, perennials, trees and ground covers so they'll become established before cold weather sets in.

SUMMER blooming annuals that grow the fastest for quickest blooming are zinnias, petunias, marigolds, and asters. Be sure the holes for the plants have been filled twice with water and drained in before setting out the plants. The deeper moisture invites the young plant roots to grow down deeper, and stimulates quicker growth.

ROSES respond to early morning shower baths as though a spring shower has just passed over them, conditioning the foliage to better withstand the hot day.

Photos and Shadows

WE ALL LOOK forward to summer's sunshine, but when it comes to making pictures, particularly close-ups, it is sometimes a mixed blessing.

In the bright summer sun, colors are brighter, the grass is greener, the red rose rosier, the water bluer ... but the shadows, too, are blacker.

The pretty girl with the wide beach hat will come out as though she were wearing a highwayman's mask, and no juggling of exposure will bring out the white-winged sailboats, the blue of the sea and of her eyes in the same picture.

The reason is simple. No color film yet made has sufficient latitude to cover an extreme wide range of light such as this.

What to do?

Fill-in flash was used for this close-up. Without it, shadows from the hat brim would have darkened the subject's face unrecognizably.

THERE ARE three things you can do: (1) You can ask her to take her hat off and catch her, if you are fast enough on the shutter, before the sun causes her to squint. (2) You can use a sheet of paper or aluminum foil from your picnic lunch to reflect more light into the shadows that mask her face. (3) Simplest of all, you can use flash and let this capsule of light eliminate the shadows.

The third way may be the simplest but unfortunately it won't work with some simple flash cameras. In these cameras the shutter is automatically slowed when a flashbulb is inserted. This would result in your picture being overexposed by about two steps. If your subject was under an umbrella or in the shade of a beach cabana, the flash would probably work well for you, but failing that you will have to resort to one of the first two methods suggested.

The instruction booklet which accompanies your camera will tell you whether the shutter of your particular camera is one of those which is slowed when you use flash.

AS A MATTER of fact, when making pictures on the beach, you can often achieve the lighting effect you want and achieve those transparent shadows by the way you pose your model.

If she is on a white beach towel, you can arrange her so that the light reflected from the towel will accomplish your purpose. The white sails of a boat, or a light colored beach umbrella, even a newspaper held in the hand will do the same. Ask your subject to shift position until you can see that the shadows are less intense.

Beach scenes are mentioned because they are so typical of the summer and because they usually impose the greatest problems. However, shadows can be intense on any clear summer day, anywhere.

For instance, when taking pictures in the shade, and the day is clear, the blue of the skylight in open shade is quite apt to dominate your picture. In this case, the answer is definitely flash, although light reflected from the white side of a house, if you turn your model so that he or she faces it, may be enough. In the shade you will also want to watch out for colored light reflections, green from shrubbery, red from a brick wall, etc. The answer to these problems is usually to change the position of your subject.

The final answer, as it is in nearly every case, is: When in doubt, make more than one exposure.

Getting a Dog Ready for Show

By Eleanor Avery Price

FIRST impressions are important when a dog is presented at a show. Many novice exhibitors stumble tensely and incompetently in such a fashion that their dogs don't get a chance to prove how good they really are. Some dogs would do better if turned into the ring on their own.

If you are going to enter your dog in one of the fall shows, start now to accustom him to a show lead. Pick a quiet restricted spot where his attention won't be easily distracted and where, if he leaps around or sags completely, your neighbors won't think you're mistreating him.

Teach the dog to walk around and around in a close circle as well as up and down a straight line, to finish in a poised, standing position. (Sitting position in obedience only.)

When you halt, the dog should be concentrating on you, not on the cat sitting on the wall observing the procedure. If his position is bad, much can be done by slight movements of the lead or your feet. A little feint to his right may bring his left fore up into position.

You won't get perfection at first. And limit the lessons to just a few minutes at first. You want the dog to look eager and happy. This means no nagging, shouting, or punishing.

WHEN YOU have gained your dog's confidence and attention, let someone watch you and your dog. Gradually add more distractions.

Since a dog normally does not walk in convoy with other dogs and their handlers, he must be taught to do so. If necessary to keep his attention on you, carry a tidbit in your hand (never in obedience). Don't let him know when a prize may come his way, for you want him constantly alert.

Now let someone else walk your dog. Watch to see if the pet strides out briskly, moves collectedly, or whatever, keeping in mind that some show rings are small and crowded, others quite large.

PRACTICE feeling and examining your dog. Do this just before feeding so such business as having his teeth examined, his legs put into place, and other attentions will be associated with the joy of eating which follows. Later, ask your family and friends to go over the dog. Remember, the judge doesn't want to be bitten and he will be a stranger. Always fortify the pet with food after the lesson when he's in training if he does not approve of such maneuvers.

Sporting dogs should pose as they would in the field. Tip of tail may be held, and the head may be lifted a trifle. Collies and Shetland Sheepdogs look down their noses so ears fall forward in approved style, but they must still appear alert. Some dogs' ears can be improved if you toss a tidbit in your hands. Streamlined breeds look better if forelegs are placed at top of any slight incline in the ring. Toy dogs must be accustomed to being examined on a table.

Today, cat show, Bldgs. 1 & 2, Brookside Park. Entries should be in at once for Southeast Obedience Club licensed trial Sept. 3 at Lynwood Park. Valley Hills Obedience Club licensed evening trial is set for Aug. 19 at Sepulveda Sports Center, Encino.

Even vigorous dogs, like boxers, can be trained to be steady and poised for competition in dog shows.

Science for You

By BOB BROWN

PROBLEM: Why Is It Easier To Ride A Bicycle On Pavement Than In Sand?

NEEDED: A towel, a smooth round jar, and a table top.

DO THIS: Roll the glass jar across a table top and notice that there is little friction or resistance to motion. Place the towel on the table top and roll the jar across the towel. Notice that there is much friction and the jar stops very quickly. This is similar to riding a bike on hard pavement and in sand.

HERE'S WHY: In rolling friction, the object being rolled has to continuously climb up as it goes along, because of the surface deformation (both surfaces to some extent). The lower drawing will show this more clearly. If the surface is very hard, less climbing up is necessary and so there is less friction.

SIPPI. By John Oliver Killens. Trident, $5.95.

John Oliver Killens, one of the most talented of today's Negro writers, focuses his new novel on the deep changes that have taken place in Negro attitudes toward whites and white attitudes toward Negroes since the historic school integration ruling of 1954 by the Supreme Court. Killens does so through the lives of ordinary people. A Negro youth has grown up on a Southern plantation and is sent to college by a white man; he must choose between a career in the North and the struggle at home. A Southern white girl shares a room with a Negro in a northern college and learns what political commitment means. The story sweeps panoramically from Mississippi to New York and to the South again.

THE STORY OF VENUS AND TANNHAUSER, by Aubrey Beardsley. Award Books, 95 cents.

Aubrey Beardsley, whose sensuous art is just now in the midst of a well-deserved resurgence, was an erotic novelist of considerable talent. In "The Story of Venus and Tannhauser" (a portion of which has hitherto been printed as "Under the Hill") Beardsley recounts the amorous meeting between the goddess of love and the legendary knight Tannhauser; his is a marvelously elegant and licentious court, where pleasure reigns supreme and which Beardsley pictured with the same lushness he used in his art, of which a generous helping is given in this book.

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF SURFING. By Peter L. Dixon. Coward-McCann, $5.50.

Body surfing, surf mats, bellyboards, dories and skim surfing, all are thoroughly covered by Peter L. Dixon, Malibu resident whose articles on surfing have appeared in Skin Diver, Recreation and Peterson's Surfing Magazine. Gaining control and style in all kinds of surf, hot-dogging techniques, the caprices of the wind and the waves, recognition of dangerous conditions, all are discussed.

Rock . . . Don't Flip!

By Steve Ellingson

Don't flip your rocker! With a pattern to guide you, make this chair, relax and rock your tensions away.

THE GOOD life may well hinge on a rocking chair; alternative, a psychiatrist's couch. Today the rocking chair has assumed a new role. It's a working chair. It has moved into the business office, as well as the living room, the family room and the kitchen. And now, it's being used outdoors on porches and patios all over the country.

There must be something to this rocking. Babies quiet down when rocked. Mark Twain thought up stories in a porch rocker, and Lincoln was enjoying the comfort of an upholstered model when he was shot. President Kennedy used one for his back.

What makes a rocker so therapeutic? It is a scientific fact that the shifting of weight in the action of rocking provides gentle exercise, assists circulation and reduces fatigue. Rocking provides about half the exercise of walking or cycling, and less than a third of horseback riding. Yet because of the duration, the total muscular exercise can be greater. It was a rocking chair that helped keep grandma young.

SINCE THERE is so much comfort and relaxation in rocking chairs, we believe that many people will want to build one. The chair pictured here with NBC's actress Cathi Ball was designed for both indoor and outdoor use. It provides the same health giving motion, physical rest and mental stimulation as did the chair grandma used.

The chair is easy to build. Each side is cut from a solid piece of plywood, thus eliminating any joints and giving it great strength. The pattern for building this chair is full sized, you need only trace the pattern on plywood, saw out the parts and then assemble them. You may use it with, or without, the standard pad shown in the picture.

To obtain the full size outdoor rocker pattern No. 350, send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

Azalea, Dichondra Tips

The manager of one of the largest wholesale azalea growers recommends azaleas should be fertilized lightly each month of the year for best plant growth and flowering results.

UNWELCOME bermuda grass in dichondra lawns is much more easily controlled during the hot weather season because the bermuda grows most actively then. The most effective way to get maximum grass weed herbicide control is to skip mowing the dichondra lawn in order to get more bermuda weed leaf growth, therefore, more foliage area to absorb the herbicide to do the utmost control job.

them to think you live in cleanliness that approaches sterilization. This is the time to scrub the linen closet, toss the junk up on the garage crossbeams and weed behind the trash cans.

3. Don't turn in trading stamps until the home folks' arrival is dangling overhead. Invariably cash will be short and if new bedding is a must, not to mention a rotisserie or flaming tiki torches, a pile of stamps could mean salvation.

4. Don't serve foods they can eat at home. They have barely gotten away from all that and will be expecting local specialties like ripe olives, abalone and tamale pie. Regardless of weather, serve all meals on the patio and barbecue everything.

5. Don't expect affairs of the neighborhood to run smoothly. Just when you've convinced the guests that you live in a Utopian area, full of sweetness and peace, a neighbor will scream dark curses at his wife or the police'll wail by your door on the way to break up a rumble down the street.

6. Don't expect your children to remember their children. Be satisfied if, midway through the visit, you overhear recognition hit your child when he says, "Hey, you're the kid from nursery school who knocked my tooth out."

7. Don't ruin their image of California life. Wear bright, casual clothes or, better still, wet bathing suits. Go barefoot, never take off your sun glasses and, if you don't have one, borrow a swimming pool.

8. Don't expect to compete with famous attractions like the Music Center or Marineland. Instead of relaxing at home with you, if given a choice they'll go to the La Brea Tar Pits every time.

9. Don't go sight-seeing with them. Tourists never tire. Oblivious of the mileage between two points, they think nothing of a day in Disneyland, with a stop at Hollywood and Vine, dinner in Malibu, and a tour of The Strip. Then early the next morning, they'll head for Tijuana and the Santa Barbara Mission, risking a watery demise along the way by surfing in the Pacific. Admire their stamina, but rent them a car if they have left theirs behind, and let them do it themselves.

10. Don't ever forget that the day will come when you, too, may travel. In the meantime, you'll discover the greatest feature of Southern California living is an unexpected one. It's not climate, nor proximity of mountains and desert and sea, nor easy living. It's old friendships that never die. They don't even fade away, because sooner or later everyone visits Southern California.

Leisure World's MJB Is Heard Around the World

recording the New Testament, an experience that, he says, made him realize for the first time that the word of God was meant, not only to be read, but spoken. . . . "reverently, thoughtfully, with mind, soul and heart wide open to God's word." He read it aloud, a few chapters at a time, and frequently his wife would say, "I've read that myself many a time and never actually understood that passage until this very moment."

In his "spare time" Myron manages to schedule a bit of golfing, bowling and fishing (he's a good shot, too, but won't hunt because animals can't shoot back). And he has a hobby . . . electronics.

The Bennetts' cat, Tiger, holds a choice spot in their affections, and rates time in their busy schedule (Tiger gets fan mail, too!). Listeners wrote in with much concern over how Tiger would adjust when he moved to his new home in Laguna Hills. The Bennetts have been living there about a year.

The question, "When will you retire?" brings only a grin to MJB's face, and a one-word reply: "Never!"

It's fun calling up the world from Laguna.

Wife shares MJB's philosophy, works as aide.

Factors in Remodeling

By John K. Mayberry

WITH approximately 75 per cent of America's families living in homes built prior to 1945, the significance of home modernization becomes increasingly important each day.

Virtually all residential properties more than three years old automatically become a subject for improvement. This ranges from the smallest paint or trim job to major reconditioning.

In seeking a formula for successful remodeling, always bear in mind that improving "Livability" of a home is more important than a mere change of appearance.

With that purpose as a major consideration it is good practice to weigh the following factors in arriving at a decision to remodel or repair your property.

1. Will the change-over provide more, and better living space?

2. Will it give more light area, and working space?

3. Will it provide more outdoor living facilities?

4. Will it enhance the overall appearance of the property, and its valuation?

In a nationwide survey by Operation Home Improvement, America's home owners indicated they will spend $12 billion in 1967 for repairs and remodeling work in the following categories:

EXTRA ROOM — 24.2 per cent of all home owners planning to make improvements seek an extra bedroom by converting an attic or basement or by an addition.

FAMILY ROOM — 13 per cent indicated they would spend their money for adding that increasingly popular family room for recreation, TV, hi-fi, library or hobby areas.

KITCHEN — 20.5 per cent prefer to center their modernization projects around the kitchen.

BATHROOM — 11 per cent of the home owners plan to add bathrooms, powder room, stall showers and to streamline outmoded fixtures.

Bad Time for Lawns

THE MONTH of August is a trying period for lawns. In addition to most grasses fighting for survival we face our biggest weed problem. These lawn-spoilers seem to revel in the heat.

One of the easiest ways to control broadleaf weeds is to spray the lawn with a 2, 4-D, 2, 4, 5-T Weed Killer, a selective product that will kill only the broadleaf weeds which ruin most lawns.

Always remember in using any kind of weedkiller or any other chemical, follow the instructions regarding application exactly as printed on the label.

It is also a good idea to spray while the weather is warm and the weeds growing vigorously. The spray is absorbed by the plant and completely kills it.

HAL SOLOMON
Exotic Chicken
Caricature by Pete Willette

GATHER round, gourmets, while I tell you about a wonderful delicacy that's back on the menu at Hoefly's, 4911 E. Second St., Belmont Shore.

It's flaming chicken, a beautiful affair prepared on a cart at the guests' table by host Hal Solomon. It's so impressive and delectable that many patrons tell their friends about it. As a result, it's quickly becoming one of Hoefly's most popular treats for wedding anniversary or birthday celebrations.

If you wish to enjoy it, you should phone the restaurant and make a reservation at least an hour before you plan to arrive. This will enable Hoefly's chefs to begin their elaborate preparations. The restaurant—for nearly four decades one of Southern California's most distinguished dining houses—begins by roasting a fresh chicken. The birds are tender, 2½-pound beauties obtained from a ranch in Lancaster.

Harold begins his performance at the table by putting an epicurean orange sauce in a flaming chafing dish. He adds such liqueurs as Gran Marnier, Cointreau brandy and dry sherry. Then he carves the chicken and places the pieces in the sauce, sauteeing them. Suddenly he touches flame to the creation. It flares spectacularly for a few moments before he transfers the pieces to the plates, where they are garnished with orange halves. As he puts the plates on the table, Hal flames them again, briefly.

The chicken ($7.75 for two persons) is served with relishes, soup du jour or tossed salad, potato and beverage. The restaurant also offers champagne dinners for two, crown rack of lamb, choice sea foods and steaks with Bearnaise or Bordelaise sauce.

SUNDAY TREATS — No wonder that hot sourdough bread tastes so good in the Parisian Room at Long Beach's Edgewater Inn, 6400 E. Pacific Coast Hwy. It's baked in San Francisco, long recognized as one of the world's great bread centers. Arriving by plane—to insure its freshness—the bread is included with the superlative continental American dinners in the inn's smart, blue and yellow main dining room. Among the entrees, priced from $3.60 to $5.35, are whole Cornish game hen, choice steaks, pearl scallops, beef Stroganoff, lobster and prime rib, served on elaborate dinners.

HAYLEY MILLS WITH SUITOR ROY BOULTING

Q. Is Hayley Mills living with a 60-year-old British director? What's the story?—E. T. T., Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Hayley Mills, 21, fell in love with director-producer Roy Boulting, 54, while they were filming The Family Way, in which she plays a newlywed who tries desperately to have her impotent husband consummate their marriage. One of Hayley's costars in the film is her father, actor John Mills. During the course of the production it was obvious to John Mills that his daughter was falling in love with the director, who not only is old enough to be her father, but who has children Hayley's age. Boulting plans to marry Hayley Mills as soon as he can obtain a divorce from his third wife. As an actress under contract to the late Walt Disney for five films, Hayley Mills found these films gushy and restricting, resented Disney's ruling that she could not be seen drinking or smoking in public lest she spoil the image of her Disney had established. Had the true, sophisticated, Hayley Mills been exposed to the public, her romance with Boulting might not come now as such a surprise.

Q. I am very much puzzled about the statistics given out by the U.S. in the Vietnam war. We say that the South Vietnamese have 600,000 troops. We have about 500,000 troops. Thus on our side we have a total of 1,100,000 troops. We say that the enemy, the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese, has a total of 295,000 troops opposing us in Vietnam. We also say that in the last seven years we have killed 200,000 of the enemy, wounded or caused to defect another 200,000. Is any of this true? If so, how come 1,100,000 of our troops can't defeat 295,000 of their troops? — E. L. White, Detroit, Mich.

A. The 600,000 A.R.V.N. (Army of the Republic of Vietnam) troops are virtually worthless as combat or pacification troops. We pay their salaries, but they have no esprit de corps, in many cases no will to fight. The approximately 500,000 U.S. troops are spread thin on foreign terrain, are fighting against guerrillas who are supplied with the best intelligence by friendly natives and the most sophisticated weaponry by Soviet Russia. U.S. figures as to the number of enemy killed, wounded, or deserted are highly inaccurate.

Q. When Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip visited Ottawa to celebrate Canada's centenary this summer, Philip got in a fight because someone spoke to his wife. Is it true that no one is allowed to speak to the queen unless she speaks first? What happened up there?—Louise Cheshire, Conway, N.H.

A. A press photographer wanted to photograph the queen from a favorable angle. He asked an official to convey the message to the queen. When the official did, Philip angrily ordered him to stop, pointed to the photographers, and said, "Peel off and get those bloody people away." The queen thereupon ordered him not to lose his cool. Generally the queen must not be spoken to unless she speaks first. This, of course, does not apply in cases of fire or other emergencies.

Q. What is the truth about Marlon Brando? Is he married to Tarita, that girl in Tahiti who is the mother of his son, or is he married to Movita, the Mexican actress?—V. T., San Diego, Calif.

A. Brando and Movita were married on June 4, 1960, in Xochimilco, Mexico. They have two children, Segio Brando, 6, and Rebecca Brando, 10 months. Movita is seeking a separate maintenance agreement from Brando, asking $8000 a month for support of herself and her children. Brando's son, Simon, by Tarita, is the result of an extra-marital affair. He has another son by his first wife, an Irish girl who took an Indian name, Anna Kashfi.

Q. Is Chuck Connors really getting $25,000 a week to appear on his new series, Cowboy in Africa? — Bee Lowry, Denver, Colo.

A. Connors will receive $20,000 a week, his production company an additional $5000.

Q. Can you tell me on what grounds Vanessa Redgrave obtained a divorce from her husband, Tony Richardson, and who got custody of the children?—Willa Thomas, Atlanta, Ga.

A. Actress Vanessa Redgrave charged that her husband committed adultery with actress Jeanne Moreau in 1965 when they were working in Ethiopia on a film, The Sailor from Gibraltar. Miss Redgrave asked the court's discretion over her own later adultery. She was granted custody of her two daughters, a 2-year-old and a 3-year-old, with reasonable visitation rights for the father.

Q. Chubby Checker, Harry Belafonte, Sammy Davis —why do these Negro entertainers marry white girls? Why do they not marry within their own race? — P. T., Philadelphia, Pa.

A. A matter of individual preference.

Q. Who was the youngest First Lady in U.S. history? —Roberta Neufelt, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Frances Folsom, 22, ward of President Grover Cleveland, who married him in the White House in 1886.

Q. Who said the following: "Whenever I hear anyone arguing for slavery, I feel a strong impulse to see it tried on him personally."?—Frances Miller, Montgomery, Ala.

A. Abraham Lincoln.

Q. There is an anecdote about the late Marilyn Monroe and the spelling of Mississippi that was told to me on a recent trip to Hollywood. I have forgotten it. Can you give it? — Mrs. H. T. Keller, Baltimore, Md.

A. Applying for a job, Marilyn was asked by an interviewer to spell Mississippi. "Do you want the river or the state?" she reportedly asked.

LADY BIRD AND MAMIE

Q. I've read that Mamie Eisenhower and Lady Bird Johnson are deathly afraid of airplanes. Is that true? Is it also true that on commercial airlines Lady Bird will never travel first class?—Eleanor Patterson, San Antonio, Tex.

A. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Eisenhower are not enthusiastic airline passengers. Mrs. Johnson considers first-class airline passage an extravagance, generally travels coach when she is not flying with her husband on the presidential jet.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

FEMALE LONGEVITY. Women live longer than men in all Western nations, but in the underdeveloped countries of the world they have shorter lives than men. In Vietnam, Ceylon, Cambodia, and India, where social change has not improved the woman's lot, she dies at an early age of childbirth, disease, and overwork.

In Japan where modernization has affected females culturally, today's female infant has a life expectancy of 73. In 1946 a Japanese female infant had a life expectancy of only 51.

DEFECTORS. The entire Benedictine Monastery in Cuernavaca, Mexico, headed by its prior, has forsaken Catholicism. About 60 monks in all, constituting possibly the largest defection since the reformation, have renounced their vows to create a new community in which the precepts of both St. Benedictine and Sigmund Freud will be practiced.

Several years ago, when the Cuernavaca monastery sent representatives to Rome to explain the monks' belief in the curative properties of psychoanalysis, the Curia thought they were, to say the least, weird. Now that the monks have defected, the Curia is sure of it.

NO HATE. Romania and Hungary are two Communist countries which refuse to go along with the Soviet Union. Russia — supporting the Arabs and fanning hatred against the Jews — is finding no support for her anti-Israeli policy in either Bucharest or Budapest. Janos Kadar, Hungarian party leader, addressing a Congress of the League of Communist Youth in Budapest, announced that his country was in sympathy with the Jewish people of Israel, no matter what the Soviet propaganda

ROLLS AND RUSSIA. Soviet Russia recently purchased two of the latest Rolls-Royce models, $25,000 each, for study by her design and production engineers. The Soviet Union is an old Rolls-Royce customer, Lenin having bought one in the 1920's. Lenin's Rolls is still preserved in a Soviet museum.

The Russians are determined to provide their people with 600,000 cars a year come 1971, but thus far the $800-million car factory Fiat is supposed to organize for the Soviets in Volgograd has not yet gotten underway.

HELP THE YOUNG. A youth advice center for troubled youngsters, staffed by trained psychiatrists, has been established in the north London borough of Brent. Youths between 16 and 23, unable to get help or advice at home, simply walk into the consultation center on Monday evenings, discuss their troubles and problems with understanding physicians. The center is believed to be the first of its kind in Great Britain.

FRENCH HOTELS. France, which under De Gaulle, has done everything possible to despoil American foreign policy, ruin NATO, and hinder U.S. business, reluctantly admits that French hotel rooms are now the most expensive in Europe.

The admission is contained in a report recently released by the Federal Economic Council, pointing out that a deluxe suite in a Paris hotel (without taxes) rents for $40 a day. Comparable prices are $36 in Brussels, $31 in Geneva, $28 in Rome, $28 in Frankfurt, $27 in London, $25 in Athens, $23 in Amsterdam, $17 in Madrid.

The French Tourist Board has recently approved a 10% price raise for rooms in all Paris hotels built before 1948, which includes 95% of all the hotels in Paris. The one break given the tourist paying $10

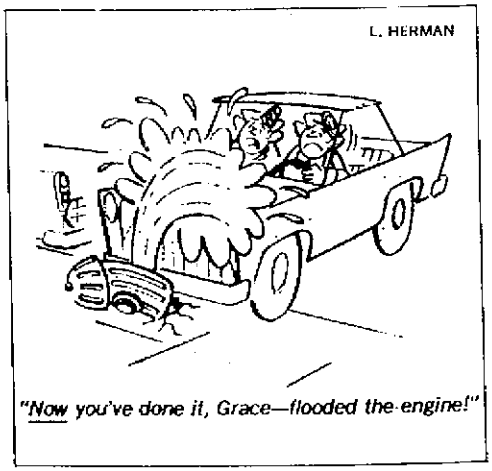

LOWER RATES FOR WOMEN. Jokes about women drivers are legion. Supposedly the fair sex is unmechanical, uncoordinated, its members unable to drive an automobile as well as a male.

Not so, says a group of shrewd, knowledgeable Zurich insurance-company executives.

Women drivers, they assert, are more patient, less aggressive, less careless, less dangerous than men. And to back their contention they are offering a 20% discount on cars driven only by women.

A 10% discount is given in this country to women 30 to 64 who are the only drivers in the family.

So next time a man says anything derogatory about the woman driver, ask him what hisinsurance premium is compared to hers.

"Now you've done it, Grace—flooded the engine!"

WOMEN ARE THE BUTT OF GAGS ABOUT THEIR POOR DRIVING. BUT IS IT SO?

a day or more for his hotel room, is that French hotels must now provide him with at least one free bar of soap per week.

Many U.S. tourists, aware of De Gaulle's anti-U.S. attitude, his support of the Arab and Soviet war policies, are staying away from France this summer, a boycott which in part may help bring down astronomical French prices.

KOSYGIN AND BREZHNEV

INSIDE RUSSIA. Soviet Russia is currently managed by a coalition. The number-one man is Leonid Brezhnev, first secretary of the Communist Party since 1964. The number-two man is Aleksei Kosygin, who this past June met with President Johnson in Glassboro, N.J. The two major factions in the Soviet coalition consist of the party leaders dominated by Brezhnev and the technicians and managerial wing led by Kosygin.

Whichever faction eventually takes over — the odds favor Brezhnev, because he controls the army and the secret police — it is probable that there will be no detente, no friction decrease this year in Soviet-American relationships.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, a most unlikely time for Moscow to abrogate its founding principle of world revolution. More likely: an increase in sophisticated Russian armaments to North Vietnam, Soviet incitement of Arabs against the Israelis, increased forays by North Koreans into South Korea, more Soviet pressure on West Berlin.

LOBBYING. The American Medical Association, which spent $1,155,933 in 1965 in its failing effort to prevent the passage of Medicare, is no longer the number-one lobbying outfit in Washington.

That dubious honor goes to the United Federation of Postal Clerks-AFL-CIO, which in 1966 spent $286,971 to sponsor pay raises.

They were followed by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, trying to prevent the railroads from eliminating firemen, and the AFL-CIO National Headquarters, interested in pro-labor legislation.

Other top-spending lobby groups in 1966 were the United States Savings and Loan League, the American Legion, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Automobile Dealers Association, and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

OIL SOURCES. Japan now imports more than 90% of her oil from Middle East nations. The recent Israeli-Arab war has convinced her this is a dangerous policy. Result: Japan plans to develop oilfields in Malaya, Canada, Indonesia, New Guinea, and Alaska during the next 20 years, hopes by 1987 to import less than 50% of her oil from Arab nations.

VIETNAM REPORT. Teachers take great pride in successful pupils. Those pupils who fail, however, are a sorry cause for disappointment and resentment. Imagine how the Russians feel. For years they sent their best military instructors to the Middle East to teach the Egyptians and the Syrians how to fight with Soviet equipment. It took the Israelis all of five days to rout the Arabs. The Soviets were humiliated. No one likes to back a loser.

In Vietnam the U.S. is doing exactly that as regards the South Vietnamese army, known officially as the Army of the Republic of Vietnam (A.R.V.N.).

On Oct. 23, 1954, President Eisenhower, in reply to a request for aid from Premier Ngo Dinh Diem of Vietnam, wrote: "I am accordingly instructing the American ambassador ...to examine with you in your capacity as chief of government, how an intelligent program of American aid given directly to your government can serve to assist Vietnam in its present hour of trial, provided that your government is prepared to give assurance as to the standards of performance it would be able to maintain in the event such aid is supplied."

Eisenhower made certain that a primary condition was attached to the offer of economic and military aid: The Vietnamese had to make an all-out effort to survive as a "strong" and "independent" and "viable" government.

He would send U.S. military instructors to train the Vietnamese army so that it could assure a climate of security for the new government, but Ike was dead set against an American army fighting a land war in Asia.

President Kennedy reversed that policy in favor of military intervention. Eisenhower's "600 military advisers" soon became 4000, then 15,000, then 17,000, all part of the U.S. military advisory mission, charged with training and helping the South Vietnamese army of 525,000 men.

The truth is that since 1961 the American military has been unable to train the South Vietnamese army into carrying its fair share of the battle load. American troops are now doing most of the fighting, and at this writing, most of the dying, while about 50% of the South Vietnamese army deserts each year.

The A.R.V.N. boasts a few crack battalions of paratroopers, rangers, and marines, brave, well-trained, dedicated men, but for the most part the South Vietnamese army of 300,000 regulars, 300,000 militia men, and 100,000 support forces is led by incompetent officers. Many of them are more interested in politics than fighting, in looting peasant villages than in going out on patrol, especially at night. The average South Vietnamese draftee has a morale quotient of zero.

The Vietnamese peasants do not support the Vietnamese army, which is one reason why the pacification program to date has moved so slowly.

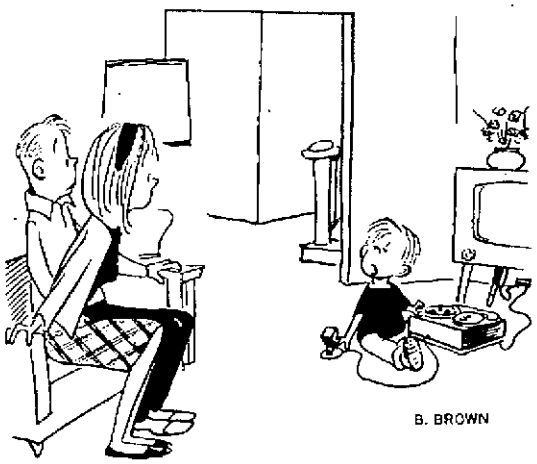

Gen. William Westmoreland needs more American troops because the South Vietnamese army is of little help to him. Its senior tactical commanders are chosen on the basis of politics not merit. Too many are unreliable political hacks, not field officers.

Can anything be done about the mess except to send more and more American troops to do the fighting? One suggestion is to integrate Vietnamese troops with American units. Another is to give knowledgeable American officers some voice in the selection of Vietnamese officers. A third is to retrain the South Vietnamese army in the art and tactics of guerrilla warfare.

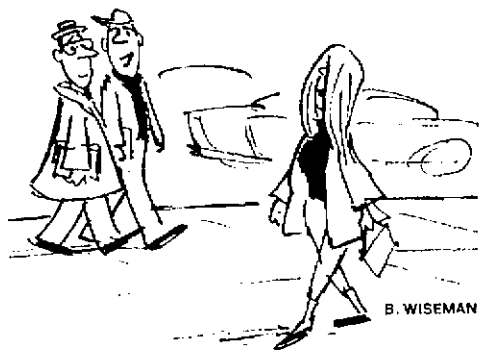

In the Middle East war by backing the Arabs, the Soviet Union lost money and munitions, but no men. In Vietnam by backing the South Vietnamese, we are not only spending billions in money and munitions, but much more valuable, we are spilling American blood.

We did this for France in two wars, and the result is that today De Gaulle is almost pathologically anti-U.S. Let us hope that after we save South Vietnam for the South Vietnamese, and that is our stated purpose in fighting this war — to afford them the right of self-determination — these people will talk to us. Right now they are incapable of saving themselves. Worse yet, so many of them give the impression that they don't really care.

My Favorite Jokes

by Red Skelton

EDITOR'S NOTE: Red Skelton is possibly the best, most versatile comedian in the world today. Surely, he is considered as such by many critics. Skelton is not only a standup comic, but also a serious, sensitive actor and a mime without peer. He was born in Vincennes, Ind., 56 years ago into shocking poverty, was forced to earn his own living at age 7. After years of struggle as a carnival pitchman, marathon dancer, and vaudevillian, he reached Hollywood in 1939 where he made an immediate success. He has occupied the top rungs of the show-business ladder ever since. His private life defies description, but as an entertainer, he has no equal. Herewith some of the jokes he told recently at the Sands in Las Vegas:

A poor officeworker had saved for years to take a vacation trip to Italy with his wife. Finally the day arrived when his big dream was about to come true.

"Are you going to visit Mt. Vesuvius?" a coworker asked.

"Vesuvius?" he repeated. "What's that?"

"Oh, that's a big volcano that belches smoke and spits fire."

"I know all about it," he said forlornly, "I'm taking her with me."

It's easy to get lost on the desert up by Las Vegas. In fact I saw an Israeli tank in the parking lot of one of the hotels.

It gets very cold on the desert at night. Once it got so cold one twin bed crawled into the other to get warm.

In fact sometimes it's so cold the showgirls have to put on their long beads.

A minister was traveling for the first time on a jet flight to Chicago. He seemed a little nervous, and the stewardess asked him if he would care for a drink.

"No, thanks," he said. "It's too close to the main office."

We were driving through Texas once, and there was absolutely nothing around for miles. Finally we saw one, small, rundown gas station. We pulled in and saw a sign that read: "Don't ask for information, if we knew anything we wouldn't be here."

One day a meek, little man said to his wife, "Listen, dear, let's go on a vacation."

"When I married you," she replied, "you were my last resort."

I once went to dinner at a friend's house who lives and works in Las Vegas. He's the type that can never relax and forget the job. When I asked him to pass the bread—he dealt it.

When the Murdock "family" gets its picture taken, it's a big event. Here they line up in front of one of the farm buildings.

The unusual Murdocks:

46 CHILDREN— AT THE LAST COUNT

by Arthur Whitman

TRI-CITY, KY.

Weekday afternoons at 3:30, 60-year-old L. W. "Les" Murdock likes to stand by the road that runs past his farm near here, in western Kentucky's Graves County. Soon joy explodes around him. A yellow schoolbus pulls up and out tumble 18 boys of every age from 6 to 15. Some gallop down the sloping lawn to the country house where they live. Others pause to tug at Murdock's jacket or give him a friendly sock on the leg. A couple trade experiences for one of Les' deadpan quips.

"Ah passed 'rithmetic, Mistuh Murdock. Done got a C!"

"That's a handy mark—considering you don't know the alphabet much past that."

The boys have hardly dispersed before another bus pulls up, and 20 girls get off to add to the pandemonium.

All the kids, plus a few infants and toddlers, are orphans or have parents who have drifted off and left them. Les and his wife, Thelma, give them a home. Over the past 30 years, the Murdocks have provided for 300 children. Some stayed a few months, others grew up with them. At any given time in the last dozen years or so, the census has ranged from 40 to 60. Today it's 46—what Les happily calls "a pretty rough total."

The children come mainly from Kentucky or the nearby states. Few of their stories are pretty. One family of five bright-eyed towheads are the children of a moonshiner who got drunk one day, grabbed a shotgun, and started blasting. The kids hid, their mother didn't. Their father killed her and himself.

Six other brothers and sisters came when their parents died in an auto accident. But the parents of one family now with Les and Thelma are still much alive. Their alcoholic father deserted their mother some years ago, and she turned their children over to the Murdocks.

Why do Les and Thelma take all these children in?

"Why not?" asks Les. "You can't turn kids away to end up in reform schools or the penitentiary."

When Les says "kids," he means all kids. He seems to have no boiling point, except with the bigoted and the sanctimonious. "I understand you have only children from Christian homes?" a woman recently asked him. The statement was largely true, not because the Murdocks care about a child's background, but because the population in their area is mostly Christian.

The woman was a potential benefactor, and Les could easily have told her what she wanted to hear. He answered instead, "No, Ma'm. I think we've but few from Christian homes. No Christian would do to a child what's been done to most of ours."

Filling the void left by so many missing parents may be impossible, but the Murdocks try. There's food, a homey atmosphere, the obvious joy Les and Thelma take in having the kids around, and their calm imperturbability that provides a stable reference point for so many whim-blown childhoods.

Les had his hands full providing some large-scale stability last spring. Rains flooded the boys' house, and he had to hustle up tents for temporary shelter. At first the kids griped about sleeping out, but by the time the house was cleaned up, they'd decided they were Daniel Boone and didn't want to move indoors.

While Les handles the boys, Thelma copes with the emotional problems of 20 girls. "I'm always counseling two or three who are madly in love for the first time and waiting to be asked to that dance," she laughs. "I wish everybody could be made happy just by being noticed by a young gangling boy."

The Murdocks began caring for waifs back in 1936. "A widower named Moffitt and his boy, Willie, scratched out a living on a farm across the road," says Thelma. "Moffitt died and Willie, who was 12, told us, 'I got no place to go. If you give me a place, I'll work for it.' "

Les and Thelma, whose own first child, Ben, was an infant then, took Willie in, but insisted he go to school as well as "work for his place." Willie stayed two years. Today he's a successful trucking contractor.

"Willie kind of started a habit," says Murdock. For about 15 years after his arrival, there was always at least one homeless child living as part of the family. Usually, there were half a dozen or more. All came to the Murdocks on their own. They heard about the farm and just drifted down Graves County way.

The Murdock population began exploding in 1954, simultaneously with their one-family housing boom. With six extra teenagers on the premises at the time, and the probability that more would drift in, it was clear to Les and Thelma that no amount of doubling up in their modest framehouse could solve their space problem. A new building was needed, but how could they afford it?

Until then, the Murdocks had never received any financial help. They'd managed on the income from the 300-acre farm, complemented by Thelma's salary as a teacher at nearby Sedalia Consolidated School. Somehow they'd always paid their bills, but there was no money to spare for new housing, and so Les decided to do things in slow stages, building the house as time and money allowed.

He and his son, Ben, then 18, cut down some trees for a starter and hauled them to a sawmill. There, they got their first of many surprises—no charge for the milling. When word got around about their project, carpenters, plumbers, roofers, electricians—all began coming around to do a little work. Before the year was out, a fine building big enough for 20 kids stood on the Murdock lawn.

In addition, there was a $35,000 cash contribution for a second house from the Bell City Church of Christ, to which the Murdocks belong.

When the contributions of labor and supplies began flooding in for the houses, Les took the advice of a lawyer and incorporated his sprawling group under the title Paradise Friendly Home. That way people could take their contributions off their income tax. And since the inception of the organization, help has come from many sources — church groups, individuals—to cover the $60 a month it costs the Murdocks to provide for each child. There's also some social security money for the orphans, and the state provides for court wards.

So far, the Murdocks have been remarkably lucky in finding the helpers they need. Their cook is a widow named Mrs. Elizabeth Wiggs, whose picture belongs on a "Mom's Home Cooking" label. She came to them when the first house was built, worked a few years, then left when her daughter entered college.

"When she graduated three years ago, I came back to say hello—and that was the end," she says. "A boy who'd been in diapers when I left hugged me and said, 'Hi, Mommy,' and here I am."

Dennis and Margaret Crutchfield, a young couple who live on the place with their year-old son, Timmy, are just as devoted. Dennis is an ordained minister studying for an advanced degree at nearby Murray University. Margaret is a nurse. "We pay them $300 a month and keep. It's about a tenth what they're worth," says Thelma.

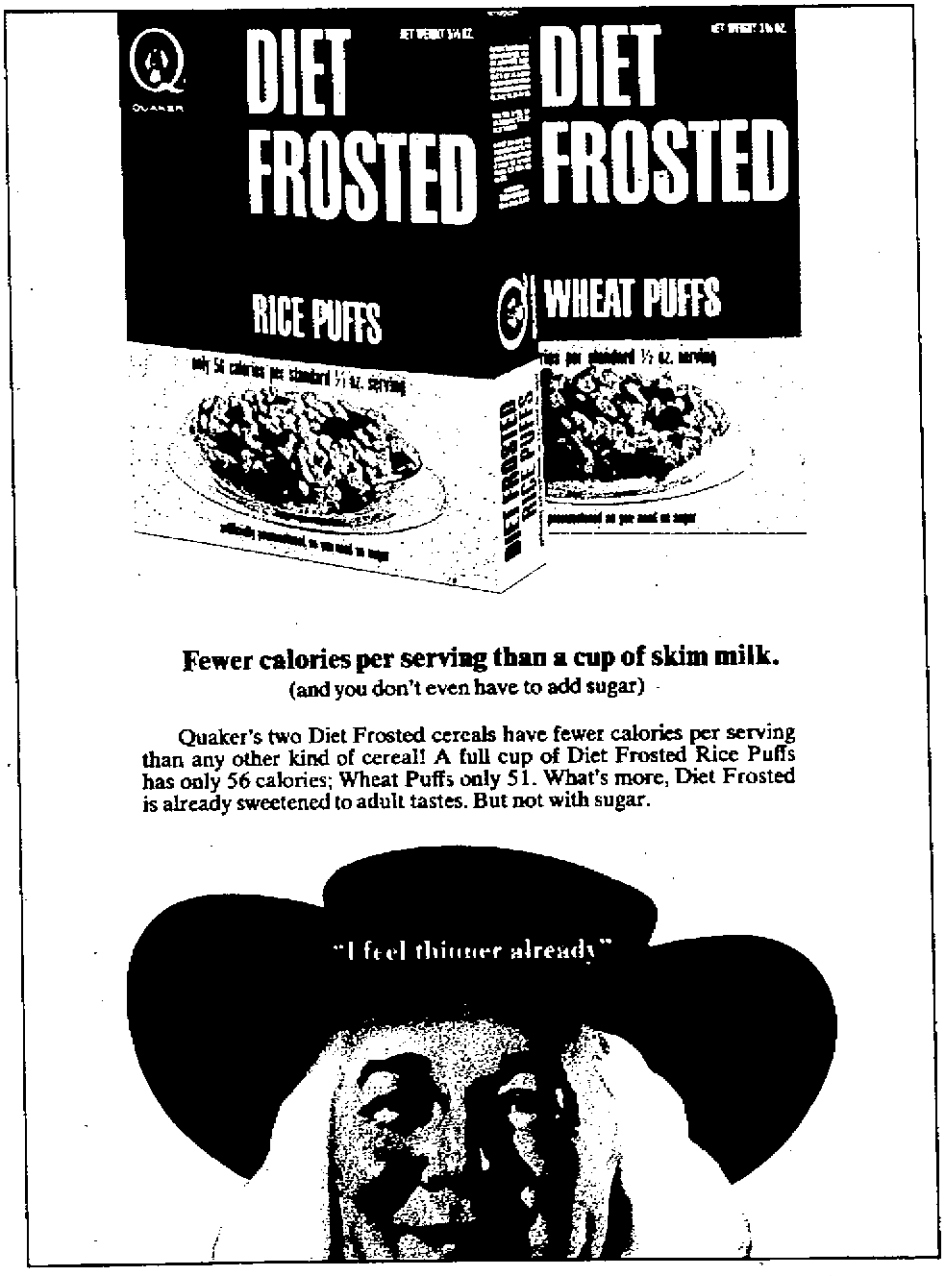

Keeping 46 youngsters occupied constructively would tax the ingenuity of Merlin the Magician, but somehow it's never bothered the Murdocks. The kids are organized into groups to help in the kitchen, laundry, and on the farm, and are paid $3 a week. This provides pocket money and soaks up spare time—after school, homework, television, and games are over.

Through it all, the Murdocks have managed not to neglect their own three children, all now adults, and may even have someone to keep their brood in the family after they pass. Their middle daughter, Mrs. Martha Pritchard, lives nearby and shows all such symptoms. Though she has four children of her own, she adopted a fifth some years ago, a foundling sent to her parents. She drops by for a visit a few times a week, seldom without a sack of bubble gum or a few "extra" footballs.

"It's kind of contagious," she says when asked if she'd take over Paradise Friendly.

"I sure hope it's contagious," says Les. "If she catches it, she'll never grow old."

Has he? He just shrugs, and heads for the road to wait for his pretty rough total to arrive home from school.

Cooking out? Make it chicken!

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Chicken is always a good choice for a cookout because its preparation is so simple and its flavor so rewarding, especially when the basting is done with this Herb Barbecue Sauce. Zucchini Creole and Poppyseed Loaf round out the menu to perfection, with rosy slices of chilled watermelon for dessert.

Barbecued Chicken

Place broiler-fryer halves or quarters, skin side up, on a grate set at least four inches above hot coals. Cook, turning occasionally and basting frequently with Herb Barbecue Sauce. Allow 45 minutes to an hour and a quarter total cooking time, depending on weight of chicken and distance from heat. To test for doneness, leg should twist easily out of thigh joint and pieces should be fork tender.

Herb Barbecue Sauce

⅔ cup vegetable oil
⅔ cup lemon juice or vinegar
¼ cup water
1 tablespoon sugar
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon Ac'cent
1 teaspoon paprika
1½ teaspoons dried, leaf tarragon
½ teaspoon dried, leaf rosemary
¼ teaspoon liquid hot pepper sauce
1 tablespoon minced onion

Combine all ingredients. Mix well. If desired, let stand at least an hour for flavors to blend. Makes 1⅔ cups, enough for four broiler-fryer chickens.

Zucchini Creole

6 small zucchini
3 medium tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon coarse black pepper
½ teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Slice zucchini crosswise in ¼-inch slices. Cube tomatoes and add to zucchini with salt, pepper, and sugar. Mix well. Divide into four portions on four large squares of doubled heavy-duty aluminum foil. Place ½ tablespoon butter on each portion. Wrap foil securely around food. Grill over hot coals 20 to 25 minutes, turning once.

Poppyseed Loaf

Cut a small loaf of unsliced white bread in half lengthwise, almost through to bottom, then crosswise in eighths. Place on a double thickness of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Brush all cut surfaces and the outside of the loaf with melted butter. Sprinkle with poppyseeds. Wrap securely in foil, and place on grill for ten to 12 minutes.

If you bought ten $25 U.S. Savings Bonds, you'd pay $187.50 . . . and get back $250 at maturity.

Whether you buy just one Bond—or a Bond every month on the Payroll Savings Plan—that $4 for $3 return is guaranteed by the U.S. Government.

And now, with the new 4.15% interest rate, E Bonds mature faster—in just 7 years! Your old Bonds will earn more, too. And they'll continue to grow for you, at the new interest rate, as long as you hold them. So now Savings Bonds are better to buy, and hold, than ever.

And buying Savings Bonds helps build your security another way, too—by helping build your country's security. Knowing you're doing your part to support our men in Vietnam is a star-spangled good feeling you can't measure with numbers.

Discover that feeling for yourself, today . . . while starting a solid financial foundation for your future. Ask about the convenient Payroll Savings Plan where you work—or buy Bonds regularly at your bank.

JULIE AND TRICIA NIXON:

When father is a politician

by VERA GLASER

NEW YORK.

To most young girls, privacy and independence are of the utmost importance. They want to choose their own clothes, have their own dates, make their own decisions without the rest of the world watching them.

When a family enters public life, however, all this goes out the window. A girl's every opinion is trumpeted around the world, the length of her hemline becomes a matter of public decision, her dates are chronicled in newspapers and on television, and each casual acquaintance is blown up into a lasting romance. The classic case is that of Luci Johnson Nugent, whose first child was born recently to the accompaniment of headlines around the globe.

Two young girls about to face this kind of problem are Patricia (nicknamed "Tricia") and Julie Nixon, daughters of former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, who are appearing on the political scene once more as their father debates making another bid for the White House in 1968. Julie Nixon, 19, already has had a recent taste of the problems of notoriety. Last winter she went out on several dates with David Eisenhower, grandson of the President under whom her father served. The young couple was widely photographed, and endless speculative stories were written about their "romance" and a "new Eisenhower-Nixon pairing." It annoyed Julie, who considers her relationship with David a "lighthearted friendship."

Perhaps more than anyone else in public life, Richard Nixon has been a stormy figure. He has been vilified and excoriated - and some opponents would say he's given as good as he's gotten. Some of this has inevitably spilled over onto his family.

The girls have been wounded by cruel or thoughtless remarks as far back as they can remember. Julie recalls, as a tyke of 4, hearing a woman on the beach hissing how much she despised that "unprintable" Nixon. And the jeers of schoolmates still ring in their ears.

But since Nixon's eyelash defeat for the presidency in 1960, and his loss of the 1962 gubernatorial race in California—a bitter contest—things have been somewhat more subdued. The Nixons have moved to New York, where the former Vice President is practicing law with a Wall Street firm. They live in a luxurious Fifth Avenue cooperative apartment, filled with reminders of the Eisenhower-Nixon administration and memories of world travels. New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, another potential but undeclared GOP nominee, maintains a home in the same building.

Mrs. Nixon and the girls have enjoyed New York—touring museums, riding the subways, going to the theater—and being out of the public eye. Mrs. Nixon, in particular, has made no secret of the fact that she likes it that way.

Would they give this up for another

When at home, the former Vice President often serenades his family on the spinet.

interlude in the goldfish bowl?

PARADE had a long visit with the Nixon family—and an interview with the girls. And it quickly became apparent that this was a question both had wrestled with long and hard—and that their final decision will be based on what their father wants.

"For a long time," said Julie, "I thought Daddy would be happier out of it all. Now I can see that he wouldn't. This is Daddy's whole life."

When the former Vice President makes up his mind whether or not to run —which is likely to be around the end of the year—the girls will do all they can to help, their own misgivings notwithstanding. Nixon plans to tour college campuses this fall, and it's conceivable they'll go with him, if their class schedules permit.

They have little eagerness to set themselves up as models for the nation's youth. "I don't envy the Johnson girls," Tricia said. But in the campaign the dash, personality, and humor of Tricia and Julie are certain to prove political assets.

At 21, Tricia, the elder, a senior at New York's Finch College, is a fragile beauty (5 feet 3, 95 pounds) with deep blue eyes and flowerlike skin. She wears her honey-colored hair in a sleek, long bob, uses only a trace of eye and lip makeup.

Like her mother, she is fashion conscious, likes elegant clothes, but sometimes runs up a shift on the family sewing machine. Wearing her favorite pink formal, Tricia was once described as "a girl who has fun and proves you can make it without looking like a hobgoblin from Creepsville."

Tricia was so enthralled with New York that she chose to go to college here, only 16 blocks from their apartment. Her popularity at Finch led to her election as president of the junior class last year. This summer she is working at school writing a freshman manual for the fall semester.

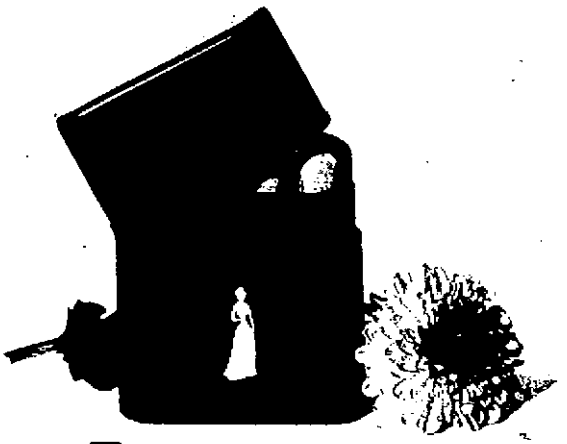

In addition to her studies, Tricia has a flock of male admirers competing for her attentions, but she refuses to give any of them top billing.

"There's no one I would call special," she said. Does that mean she has never fallen in love? "Well, I wouldn't say that!" she giggled. "I think I'm a little bit in love with everyone—I mean, there's something lovable about everyone."

Her prowess on a recent law exam has the family wondering if Tricia has inherited Nixon's legal ability, and Mrs. Nixon has suggested that Tricia consider law school. But for Tricia, diplomacy has more appeal, although she worries that she may be "too outspoken" for it. Her plan at the moment is to seek a year's work in a congressional office in Washington after graduation next June.

To her amusement, younger sister

Julie (5 feet 5½, 113 pounds) has overshot her in height. At 19, Julie retains a trace of the little girl in her round face, casual hairdo, and bouncy ways. She is a sophomore at Smith College in Northampton, Mass.

Seven miles from Smith is Amherst College, where David Eisenhower, 19, is a student. It was this proximity that led to what Julie calls their "friendship."

David is working this summer at Sears, Roebuck and Company, in Chicago. He writes to Julie, usually to pass along humorous tidbits from his experiences—in the complaint department.

How do Julie's elders view the new Eisenhower-Nixon axis? "Well, you know how kids are," Nixon chuckled noncommittally, no doubt interested in protecting his constituency within the family.

Privately Tricia, Julie, and David address each other by initials lifted from what they regard as their hilarious press billings. Tricia has been christened "F.P." (fairy princess), Julie is "N.C.P.D." (for no cream puff deb), and David is "T.C.C." (for teen carbon copy, a published reference to his famous grandfather). Mentioning the initials sends the girls into gales of laughter.

For Julie, going off to college was a wrench. She missed Tricia and her parents, but beat homesickness by plunging into activities. She, too, was popular enough to win election—to the Gold Key Club, an elite student group chosen to show visitors around the Smith campus.

Pat Nixon sees a familiar political flair in Julie. "She thinks and acts like Dick—quick as a flash. Tricia is more reserved. She'll pause and think before giving an opinion," Mrs. Nixon said.

Graduation and a career are a long way off, but Julie hopes eventually to produce television documentaries. Meanwhile, because her mother wants her to learn the rigors of a 9-to-5 routine, she is helping out in the Nixon law office.

The freedom Tricia and Julie enjoy now—with dates, clothes, friends, and curfew — provides quite a contrast to their sheltered childhood, when even the identity of the Secret Service was kept from them.

"Mother pretended they were family friends, and we called them by their first names," Julie revealed.

The Nixon girls make one thing immediately clear: Whatever the world may think about their father, to Tricia and Julie he is just about perfect.

The feeling is 100 percent mutual. "I doubt if he has ever said a cross word to them," said Nixon's longtime aide Rosemary Woods.

When Nixon is home, he serenades his family on the spinet in his handsome study (he plays piano by ear) or keeps the stereo going with their favorite tunes. He compliments the girls on new dresses and loves to shepherd them to ball games. On Sunday afternoons, they sometimes curl up in the den to watch television. On a chest nearby is a poem, penned on white lined paper by Julie when she was 13, which her father has framed. Complete with misspelling, it reads:

"Handsome and kind,
Always on time,
Loving and good,
Does things he should.
Humerous, funny,
Makes the day seem sunny.
Helping others to live,
Willing to give, his life,
For his beloved country . . .
That's my DAD!
Love, Julie."

Despite Nixon's busy career, his daughters always get plenty of his attention—and praise. When Tricia won her class election last year, a hand-delivered note arrived from the Nixon law office:

"Dear Tricia, I want to be among the first to congratulate you. Having won quite a few elections and lost two in my lifetime, I know how much more fun it is to win than to lose. Love, Daddy."

Just friends: Julie is escorted to 1966 International Debutante Ball by David Eisenhower, grandson of former President.

Both parents have made a determined attempt to bring the girls up away from the glare of publicity. "One thing is sure, they're not spoiled brats," an intimate confided. "The Nixons have worked at that." But the burden of disciplinarian seems to fall naturally on Pat. A recent anecdote illustrates this:

The late Checkers, the black cocker spaniel who figured prominently in the 1952 telecast in which candidate Nixon explained his personal finances, had been succeeded in the Nixon household by Vicky, a 4-year-old gray poodle. Then Tricia went out and bought another pup, a Yorkshire terrier, on an impulse. She later called home to ask her mother if she could keep another dog. "I don't think we should have two in the apartment," was the reply.

"Oh Pat, let her have it," Nixon urged.

Returning to the phone, Mrs. Nixon reported, "Dad said yes, providing you take care of the walking and feeding."

When Tricia and Julie disagree, as they do on politics (both are Republican, but Julie is the less conservative), the storms blow over quickly. They seem to harbor none of the hostility toward their parents or each other that marks many young people. More often than not, Tricia and Julie boost one another and consider themselves "best friends."

A family joke has sprung up around Tricia's "conservatism," which once caused her father, who joins their spirited debates, to give her a tiny loving cup engraved, "World's Greatest Republican."

At the height of the 1964 civil-rights crisis in Atlanta, when Lester Maddox, now governor of Georgia, was barring Negroes from his restaurant with ax handles, Tricia wrote him suggesting he change his restaurant to a private club. "I'm not a segregationist, but private property is private property, and you should be able to do with it as you please. I don't believe as Lester Maddox does, but our views happened to coincide for different reasons," she asserted.

Julie also takes an active interest in politics. She has always been a big fan of Sen. George Murphy, Republican from California. After he appeared on television in 1965, she penned him this note:

"My mother and I saw you on Issues and Answers and we want to say that you were great! We're glad to know the Republicans will try to defeat the repeal of 14B of the Taft-Hartley Act."

When they try to sort out their ideas on what politics has done to them, their feelings are mixed. Tricia believes it has made them more sensitive, but both recognize it has been an asset, too. It has widened their horizons, given them an interest in others, and taught them the wisdom of boning up on facts before sailing into arguments.

Their biggest thrill came at the 1960 Chicago convention, when their father was nominated for the presidency and "we were finally old enough to appreciate it." But equally vivid in their minds is the terror of their parents' brush with death in Caracas, Venezuela, in 1958. Julie recalls:

"Trish and I came home from school and were having lunch with the TV on. A bulletin came across that they were being stoned and spat on, and they didn't know if they were killed. It was awful! Trish ran down screaming and called the office."

In view of dangers of the past and the criticism heaped on their father, why are the girls willing to face it all again? There was a long pause before Tricia answered.

"We've had family discussions about it, and we've just decided that whatever he wants to do, we're going to support him. When someone has such firm convictions that he can do something big and so outside of himself, it's a rare thing. You have to have faith in it."

WELL... HOW 'BOUT THAT?

REMEMBER ED SMITH? HE'S VICE PRESIDENT OF SMITH, INC., NOW!

YOUR SCHOOL CHUMS SEEM TO BE DOING ALL RIGHT! FIRST, JONES A V.P., NOW SMITH!

WOW!

I WISH DADDY WAS A VICE PRESIDENT OF SOMETHING..

ME, TOO!

ME, TOO!

DADDY COULD HAVE STARTED AT THE BOTTOM WITH ED SMITH AND WORKED HIS WAY UP, TOO, BUT HE TOOK ANOTHER JOB!

WHY?

MAYBE DAD COULD HAVE BEAT MR. SMITH UP THE LADDER AND BE VICE PRESIDENT INSTEAD OF HIM!

I'M AFRAID IT WOULDN'T HAVE WORKED THAT WAY, JACKIE...

EVEN ASSUMING I'M SMARTER THAN ED SMITH...HE HAD ONE THING GOING FOR HIM THAT I DIDN'T! ED SMITH SENIOR OWNED THE LADDER!

I'M GOING OUT TO EAT AT THE DINER! I THOUGHT BETTY INVITED YOU TO DINNER!

POP, WILL YOU STOP BY AND TELL HER I.... CAN'T MAKE IT?

BEEP BEEP!

OH! I THOUGHT IT WAS ARCHIE!

ARCHIE ...WAS... CALLED AWAY!

AND I COOKED ALL DAY! ...JUST FOR HIM!

WHAT IS THAT DELICIOUS SMELL?

MMMMMM! SWEET SOUR PORK WITH PINEAPPLE! MY FAVORITE!

IT'S A SHAME TO HAVE IT GO TO WASTE!

I DON'T KNOW WHEN I'VE ENJOYED SUCH FOOD!

THIS IS MY SPECIAL CHEESE CAKE!

BETTY, YOU ARE A VERY CHARMING HOSTESS!

AND ARCHIE IS AN IDIOT!

THANK YOU, MR. ANDREWS!

PRISCILLA'S POP

by Al Vermeer

THE STORY OF WATER CAN BE TOLD IN THIS SINGLE DROP!

Little does he realize the perils ahead...

For from this creek he'll be swept to a stream...from stream to mighty river...

He'll be flung over roaring falls, pounded by boulders...

...and finally hurled into the dark, merciless ocean!

BUT, WAIT! THAT'S NOT THE END OF THE STORY...

For one day the sun's heat will pluck him from the sea, turn him into a raindrop...

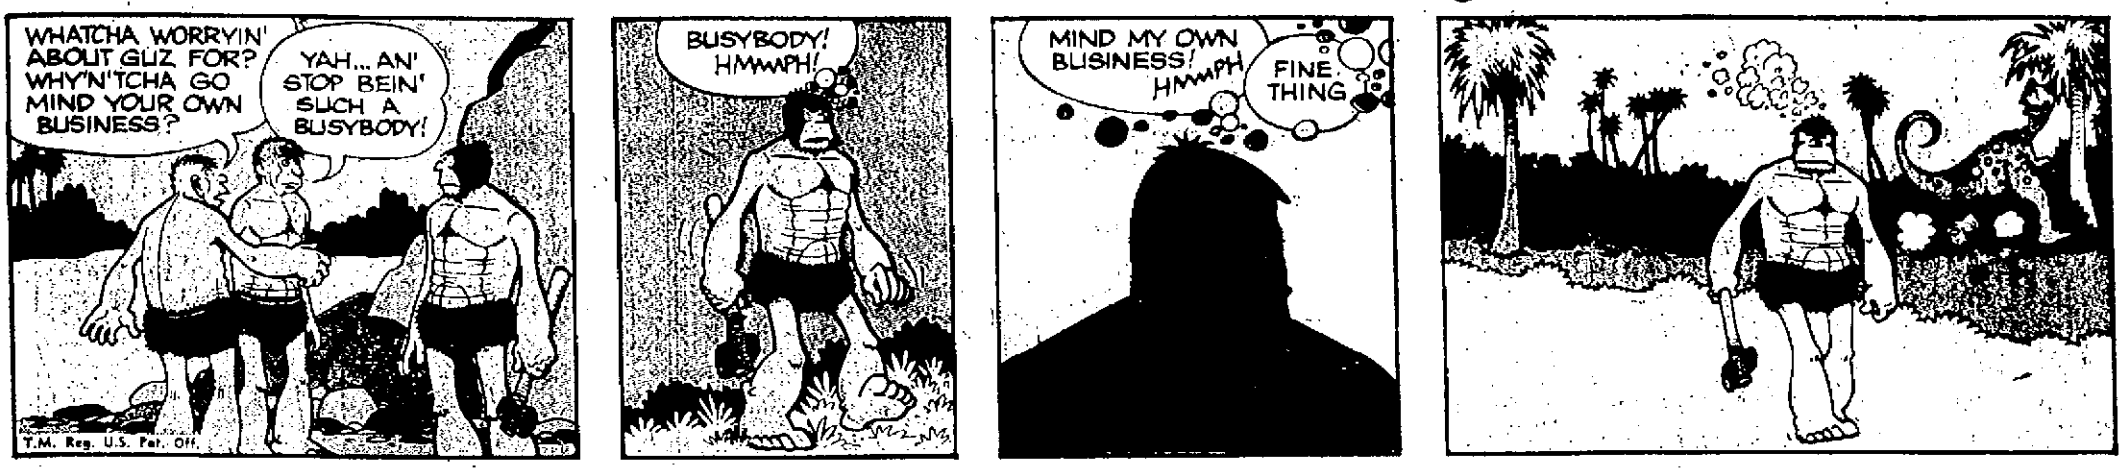

...and with billions of his friends, return him to his cozy creek!
